NOT A BOSTON & MAINE LINE.

Some persons have the erroneous idea that the Boston & Maine managers are running the York Harbor & Beach railroad. They are not running it in a financial sense. The Boston & Maine corporation operates the road; it furnishes motive power, cars, etc., and supplies station facilities in this city and at Kittery depot. The York Beach road, however, fixes the fares and sells the tickets. Mileage tickets of the Boston & Maine railroad are not good on the York road. As far as fares, etc., are concerned, the York road is independent of the B. & M., though the latter draws its passengers and carries its freight.

POLICE COURT--BATCHELDER J.

MONDAY, Aug. 8th.

John Costello and Patrick Lindley, charged with assaulting Police Officer Stott, were held in $200 each for their appearance at the October term of the supreme court.

Fred Bemis, Nicholas Carey, Dennis Carey and Frank Goings, for brawl and tumult, were fined $5, costs $6.90, each.

Nicholas Carey, Dennis Carey, Frank Goings and Fred Bemis, were also charged with assaulting officers in the execution of their duty, but the complaints were nol. pros'd, as was also a complaint of brawl and tumult against Patrick Lindley.

All these cases grew out of the disgraceful drunken row at the railroad station on the evening of the day of the St. Mary's Benevolent society picnic, when the attempt of one or two officers to suppress a couple of fellows who were making themselves nuisances to all decent people, was met by an attack from a dozen or more of their associates, who failed to see the propriety of allowing democratic officers to arrest democratic lawbreakers the day after a unanimously democratic victory at the polls.

CHILDREN'S DAY EXCURSION.

Don't forget the great excursion of the season to Ocean Park, Old Orchard, on Wednesday, Aug. 10th. Greater attractions than ever, and lowest fares of the season. Only $1.25 for adults and fifty cents for children, for the round trip. Special train will leave Portsmouth at 7:30 A. M. See advertisement, and don't fail to go.

PERSONAL.

Hon. George M. Robeson, ex-secretary of the navy, and wife, were in this city on Monday.

Mr. Harry P. Junkins, formerly of this city but now of Chelsea, Mass., is in town on a week's vacation.

Judge Henry T. Vennard and grandson, of New Orleans, are visiting Mrs. A. B. Vennard on Richards avenue.

Mr. John Buzzell of Fernandina, Florida, formerly of this city, is with his wife passing several weeks with friends here.

Mr. John B. Trefethen of Cambridgeport, Mass., wife and daughter, are in Kittery on a visit at Capt. Horatio W. Trefethen's.

Mr. John Watson, formerly assistant gardener at Hon. Frank Jones' place on Newington road, is now employed in the public garden at Boston.

Rev. Thomas W. Brown of Bridgewater, Mass., is in this city, passing the month of August with his sister, Mrs. Edward Weeks, on High street.

Gov. Sawyer, Ex-Congressman Martin A. Haynes, Ex-United States Marshal Patterson, J. Ware Butterfield of Florence, Kansas, and Col. Thomas Coggswell, were in town on Monday.

Paymaster Frank H. Hinman, U. S. N., formerly in charge of the department of provisions and clothing at this navy yard, and recently detached from the Vandalia and placed on sick leave, was in town on Monday.

George E. Hodgdon, Esq., at the late election received the largest majority ever given any candidate for mayor in this city—724. The next largest majority was that received by Hon. John H. Bailey in 1864. The total vote that year was 1337, of which number Mr. Bailey had 999 and Charles H. Peasley had 335, scattering three; Bailey's plurality, 664; majority, 661.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The first ticket sold by an agent of the York Harbor & Beach railroad was purchased by Hon. E. C. Moody of York, and he was allowed to retain possession of it after the conductor had punched it to his heart's content on the passage from the York Beach station to this city.

The supreme court of New Hampshire hold that a railroad company (and none the less its employes) has the right to carry away the hay made upon the right-of-way inside its fences. This hay is the property of the owner of the land, and he may sue the taker in conversion if the company gives the hay away. If cut down by the railway to prevent fires from passing trains, it should not be given away, but the owner of the land is entitled to take it.

Engineer Charles A. Green, who was injured in Boston Friday, arrived home by the eleven o'clock train Monday forenoon, having been provided with a special car fitted with a suspended cot, which however he did not have to use, being able to sit up all the trip. He is in good spirits.

Putnam Brothers, besides running their mail team twice a day between Portsmouth and York, are carrying an express twice a day by railroad, leaving this city at 1:55 A. M. and 4:55 P. M.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

It was reported on the navy yard, Monday, that the new cruiser Atlanta would arrive at this port Tuesday, and come up to the yard.

Surgeon-General Francis M. Gunnell of the navy, chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery, visited this navy yard on Monday forenoon and received the salute due his rank.

The only bid for making the proposed iron caisson for the dry dock at the Boston navy yard having been way above the limit set by Congress, the project of having one has been given up, and a floating wooden gate will be constructed instead, under the supervision of Civil Engineer Henry S. Craven, U. S. N., whose plans for the work have been approved by the department.

Putnam's team went to York on Monday loaded with passengers and baggage, although the York Harbor & Beach railroad trains were running.

We wish to remark, concerning the mosquito, precisely what Josh Billings said about the "fli." Also we earnestly endorse his remark in regard to the fly as well.

The well known comedy and musical organization, Salsbury's Troubadours, will play their three-act comedy-farce called "The Humming Bird" in this city early the coming fall.

Mr. John H. Locke of this city has purchased the business and stock of the Granite State Manufacturing company, and will continue the business without the aid of steam power, as the work will be done by ladies at their respective homes.

The foundations for the life-saving station at Jerry's point are being put in by Mr. Enoch J. Connor, under the superintendence of Mr. Charles H. Downs. The stone comes from Mr. Albee's premises adjacent to the spot on which the building is to be erected.

The steamer Josie M., of Newburyport, is at York harbor, taking out excursion parties from the summer resorts, and is well patronized. She went to Kennebunkport with a full fare on Monday, and was booked for a trip to the Shoals the next day.

The dredging machine at Little harbor was compelled to be idle on Monday, by reason of the breaking of some of the gear.

There was an experiment with a fire-proof paint on the Parade, Monday evening; two small structures, one painted and the other not, had fires built on the roofs, and the painted one would not burn.

The British sealing schooners Dolphin, Anna Beck, Greer, and W. P. Sayward, and the American schooner Challenger, have been seized by the United States revenue cutter Richard Rush in Alaskan waters, and taken to Sitka.

There was a grand illumination of the Marshall house at York harbor on Monday evening, in honor of the opening of the York Harbor & Beach railroad. Masten & Wells, the Boston pyrotechnists, had charge of the display, which was on a grand scale, 1000 Japanese lanterns being hung in the halls of the hotel, and in festoons from the eaves to distant points in all directions. Elaborate fireworks were set off, and the South Berwick band furnished music throughout the evening. There was a great concourse of people present.

The small country hotels are now having the lists of "commercials" and other visitors printed in the Sunday newspapers as "prominent arrivals."

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

A Dover firm has just shipped a large consignment of leather belting to Melbourne, Australia.

Ralph Keyes, of Goshen, is in his 91st year, his wife is eighty-eight, and his hired girl is eighty-three.

Mr. Al. Hutton has a fine crop of vegetables this year at the Raynes shipyard. Mr. Hutton had many important jobs there years ago, on the swift clipper ships and the big New York and Liverpool packets which were launched from that yard.

Capt. Horace Burns, formerly of the schooner Estella, recently cut two and a half tons of hay in half an hour with a machine on the farm of Samuel W. Staples in Eliot. The statement that Capt. Burns sings out "port" and "starboard" to the horses when going round corners is all bosh.

The foot of the derrick which was washed away when the dam at Newmarket was destroyed by the flood week before last, was found on the shore at Kittery, a few days ago, and sent back to Newmarket on Capt. Cheney's gondola.

A Friend in Need.

With what alacrity SANFORD'S GINGER responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant response.

It is a delicious combination of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, totally unlike and vastly superior to all other "ginger." pain cures and nauseating nostrums.

Unripe food, impure water, unhealthy climate, unwholesome food, Malaria, Epidemic and Contagious Diseases, Cholera Morbus, Cramps, Pains, Indigestion, Colds, Chills, Simple Fevers, Exhaustion, Nervousness or Loss of Sleep, that beset the traveller or household at this season, are nothing to those protected by SANFORD'S GINGER.

H. J. JOHNSON, 604 8th Ave., New York.

After the Wedding.

All alone in my room at last!
I wonder how far they have traveled now?
They'll be very far when the night is past.
And so would I, if I knew but how.
Her eyes are violet—mine are blue.
How careless I am with my mother's lace!
Her hands are whiter and softer, too,

They have gone to the city beyond the hills;
They must never come back to this place again.
I'm almost afraid to sit here so still;
I wish it would launder and lightning and rain.
Some one, perhaps, is traveling to-night.
I hope that the moon may shine instead,
And heaven be starry and earth all bright.

It is only one summer that she's been here;
It has been my home for seventeen years!
And seventeen summers of happy bloom
Fall dead to-night in a rain of tears.
It is dark, all dark in the midnight shades;
Father in heaven, may I have rest?
One hour of rest for this aching head?
For this throbbing heart in my weary breast?

I loved him more than she understands;
For him I prayed for my soul in truth;
For him I am kneeling with lifted hands
To lay at his feet my shattered youth.
I loved, and I love—I love him still—
More than father, mother, or life—
My hope of hope was to bear his name,
My heaven of heavens to be his wife!

His wife!—the name that angels breathe—
The words shall not crimson my cheek with shame;
'Twould have been my glory that name to wreathe
In the priestly heart from whence it came;
And the kiss I gave to the bride to-night—
His bride till life and light grow dim—
God only knows how I pressed her lips,
That the kiss to her be given to him!

Garfield's Memory.

Let me tell you an anecdote of Garfield's power of memory. He related it to me himself. It seems that when Decoration Day was first started by the voluntary action of the people at Washington City, and before it became a legal celebration, Garfield was chosen to deliver the oration over the dead at Arlington. It was to him an important occasion, for General Grant was to be there, and that galaxy of people who would rule events for some time to come. Garfield was a good deal pressed by work in Congress, and he finally had to sit up most of the night to write his speech out. He got it done somewhere about 4 o'clock in the morning, and, going to his wife's chamber, he woke her up and read her the manuscript. It was his habit to communicate to her his performances and get her criticism. After he read it he went to bed and slept. The next morning he went over to Arlington with the procession, and had the manuscript in his pocket. When he arose to speak he put it down before him and said to himself: "I will watch the eyes of Grant and these other people and see how long they are interested before I take my manuscript up." So he commenced and delivered his whole address without looking at the paper at all. There were shorthand writers present, and when they wrote their notes out that afternoon these were sent to Garfield to be revised. He was astonished himself to find that he had delivered almost literally a transcript of the manuscripts he had composed and that in the few instances where he had departed from that mode he had strengthened the expression. — Ex-Postmaster General James.

Ready method in drowning, as to what to do and how to do it, will be found in Dr. Kaufman's Medical Work; fine colored plates from life. Send three two-cent stamps, to pay postage, to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

The lynchers on trial at Edgefield, S. C., last week, were acquited. It was nonsence to try them, anyway.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

An editor and a politician fought a duel with swords in New Orleans last week, and the politician was seriously wounded.

My friend, look here! you know how weak and nervous your wife is, and you know that Carter's Iron Pills will relieve her, now why not be fair about it and buy her a box?

Now they are going to tunnel under the East river, New York, for railroad trains.

St. Jacob Oil cures toothache, headache and every other ache.

Miss Ellen Abbott of Webster is said to be teaching her 73d term of school.

A woman who is weak, nervous and sleepless, and who has cold hands and feet, cannot feel and act like a well person. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness, and give strength and rest.

Texas rejected the prohibitory amendment by 60,000 to 75,000 majority.

Numerous testimonials prove beyond a doubt that Allcock's Porous Plasters cure paralysis, nervous debility and loss of memory when applied to the spine. They remove kidney difficulties when worn on the small of the back; applied to the pit of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion disappear. Colds, coughs and asthma no longer trouble the suffering patient when he uses them on the chest. If you have have a headache, or want to sleep, put an Allcock's Porous Plaster on the nape of the neck—the work is not only done, but well done.

JOHN LAIGHTON,

At three o'clock in the afternoon, on the 8th inst., the New York yacht squadron, on its way from Vineyard Haven to Marblehead, was between Nausett beacon and Highland light, making slow progress around Cape Cape against a light northeast wind, it being a dead beat to winward from Nantucket for the entire distance around the cape. At that hour the Volunteer was far in the lead, and barring accidents had the race well in hand. Some two miles behind was the Puritan, which led the Mayflower a mile and a half. A mile behind the Mayflower came the Priscilla, followed by the Atlantic, about the same distance astern. After this it appeared as if some accident happened to the Puritan. She began to lose headway, and many thought she had her topmast carried away by plunging in the ground swell off Nausett. The cutter Bedouin had a good lead among the second-class sloops. The Sachem was leading the schooners, and these two yachts seemed sure winners in their respective classes.

Capt. Woodfalk, living twelve miles from Macon, Ga., was murdered in his bed on the night of Aug. 5th; also his wife, their six children, and an aunt of Mrs. Woodfalk, eighty years old. Thos. G. Woodfalk, Capt Woodfalk's son by a former wife, has been held for the crime.

If you are tired taking the large old-fashion griping pills, and are satisfied that purging yourself till you are weak and sick is not good common sense, then try Carter's Little Liver Pills and learn how easy it is to be free from biliousness, headache, constipation, and all liver troubles. These little pills are smaller, easier to take and give quicker relief than any pill in use. One a dose. Price twenty-five cents.

Deputy Revenue Collector Cromwell of Portland last week brought a case against John L. Best of that city for selling oleomargarine without a license, and he was bound over in $1500 for appearance at the next term of the United States court.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, calling through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

TALES ABOUT THE BABIES.

The other day a barefooted youngster of diminutive size with a face as dirty as his feet sidled into an office down-town and piped out: "Snap?" A man at one of the desks looked up. Seeing nobody he looked down again and discovered a very dirty countenance that reached just above the table.

"Ten cents a cake!" suggested the diminutive unwashed.

"I'll give you a dime," said the man, "if you'll use a whole cake on your face!"

"Naw," said the urchin disdainfully. Then he approached a new man.

"Ten cents, I tole yer."

"Isn't that pretty steep?"

"Naw; cost seven."

"Do you get it by wholesale or retail?"

"Naw. I don't. I buy it, wot yer 'spose?"

Little Ethel has a bachelor uncle and she had noticed that when he wanted to be very emphatic he used a certain monosyllabic word of four letters. Not long ago Ethel was afflicted with quite a severe pain under her little apron, the result of too free an indulgence in the toothsome cucumber. When Uncle Jack came home at supper-time he was informed of the grievous plight of his little favorite and hastened to her comfort.

"Well, Ethel, my dear," he said, advancing to the sofa, "how do you feel now?"

"Pretty d—n miserable, thank you, Uncle Jack," she replied with an air of having said quite the proper thing under the circumstances.

A bright boy of 5 years stood looking earnestly out of the window for a long time, and finally turned to his long-suffering mother with the question: "Mama, how did outdoors get there?"

The same little chap last Fourth of July gazed entranced at the fireworks set off for his benefit and was especially delighted with the lights of Roman candles. During a lull in the proceedings he happened to catch sight of the stars and at once exclaimed: "O, mama! the angel's havin' fi' wokes up in a sky"

The North Side 4-year-old boy is growing suspicious of his Sunday-school. A week ago today the Superintendent asked the scholars to engage in silent prayer, and knelt with the rest. The 4-year old, however, kept his eyes open, and when he returned home said:

"Why?" queried his mother, wonderingly.

"Well, he told us all to pray and then shut his eyes and took a little nap all by himself!"

A 5-year-old boy while on a visit to his relatives stopped his play and approached an indulgent auntie when she was seeding raisins for cooking purposes. Knowing from experience that something odd would be forthcoming if the child was not invited to have some of the raisins, the auntie refrained from asking him if he wanted any. Surprised at this unusual conduct on the part of his relative, the little fellow stood it as long as he could and then drawled out: "Who did you say 'here' to, auntie?" His raisin feast was provided.

A wee young lady of about 3-years, who lives on the North Side, has a brother who has arrived at the period of cigarettes and slang and whose expressions are quickly caught up by the little girl. She was very much put out by the rain which continued for several days early in the month, and one day she sorrowfully asked her mother, "Mamma, who makes it wain?" Being told that it was God, she said, "In my prayers to-night, mamma, I shall ask Dod to tum off."—Chicago Tribune.

Wasting Soap.

There is great waste in soap through leaving the cake in the tub or pail, instead of laying it aside after making a strong lather. I would like to see a statue raised to honor a domestic wise or thoughtful enough to lay the soap back in its place, instead of leaving it to soften in the water. Beside deserving a place in the statue, she would be an example to others. If there be such an one I have never seen her. And a cake of soap softened by being soaked is good for little afterward. It wastes away as a dollar does when changed into pennies.

Soap is also wasted on paint. A little ammonia in the cleaning water, or whiting on a damp cloth will clean wood much easier, and leave no yellow stain to tell of its abuse.—Hester M. Poole, in Good Housekeeping.

T. Ah, the Chinese opium dealer who bribed King Kalakaua, seems to be something of a humorist. His letter to the King was as follows: "O Lord of Heaven! Here is a small offering, a small pig for breakfast, and it would be a good thing if my royal master would be pleased to accept this. And here is something small, which will be laid before you. A few 10-cent pieces, $30,000, as your servant has remembered and sent it. So may you be gracious and kind to me," etc. Ah! has a delicate way of "explaining."

Mr. Labouchere now and then slips in his jokes and allusions. Recently, wishing to call Mr. Goschen a Shylock, he said that he believed Mr. Goschen's ancestors came from Venice, and that Mr. Goschen was a lineal descendant of the famous merchant who once lived there.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

BY MAYOR HODGDON.

Gentlemen of the City Councils:

We are to-day convened to organize the Municipal government for the ensuing year, and to formally assume the duties and responsibilities of the important trust committed to our charge through the partiality and confidence of our fellow-citizens.

Many of you from past experience in public affairs fully realize that a proper and efficient administration of such a trust involves a large amount of time, constant attention and earnest labor, and oftentimes demands the exercise of careful and unbiased judgement. By a faithful compliance with these essential requirements of our official duties we may reasonably hope to receive the approval of our constituents, and to prove to them that their confidence in us has not been misplaced.

In conformity to the custom of my predecessors it becomes my duty on this occasion to communicate to you such information relative to the finances of the city, and the condition of the several departments, as has been imparted to me by the officials in charge, or obtained from my personal knowledge; together with recommendations of certain measures for the consideration of your good judgment.

FINANCES.

At the commencement of the present year (Jan. 1, 1887) the debt of the city was $139,500, $2000 of which has since been paid. Bonds to the amount of $50,000 issued January 1, 1874, and bearing interest at six per cent, mature January 1, 1889. The city is also liable to the amount of $343,000 upon bonds loaned to aid in the construction of the Portsmouth & Dover railroad, and to secure this liability the city holds stock in the railroad of a much greater value.

The assessors' valuation of taxable property as returned April 1, is $6,855,925. The rate of taxation is $17.50 on $1000, and the amount of tax assessed $111,806.68. This sum, together with the amount received from the State in savings bank, railroad and insurance taxes, and other income of the city, is applied to the payment of the current expenses of the city and such part of the bonded debt as may become due.

The amount appropriated by the city councils for the present year is $127,983.34. Of this sum there is provided

For State and County taxes	$36,734.34
Schools	3,000.00
Fire Department	9,000.00
Streets	8,500.00
Street Lights	6,200.00
Police and Watch	6,300.00
Interest	6,300.00
Salaries	5,200.00
Discount on Taxes	5,000.00
Support of the Poor	4,000.00
Widening and Straightening Creek Road	3,500.00
Repairing Roads and Bridges	3,000.00
Payment of City Bonds	2,000.00
Sinking fund for Eleven Schoolhouses	1,300.00
Rents and Repairs of Schoolhouses	1,500.00

The balance being allotted to various other purposes of minor importance.

An examination of the unsettled accounts of the collectors of taxes made at the close of business, Saturday, August 6th, shows the balances due the city to be as follows:

From the Collector of 1874	$231.19
" " " " 1884	260.98
" " " " 1885	949.82
" " " " 1886	969.38
" " " " 1887	29,999.41
	$32,765.32
Expenditures to Aug. 6th are	79,289.75
The balance to Aug. 6th	$53,525.57

Is now on deposit.

It will be observed from the foregoing statement of our finances that our fiscal year commences Jan. 1, consequently the appropriations cited will expire on December 31 next. To meet the expenses of the remainder of the municipal year which commences to-day, the unexpended balances are usually applied, together with temporary loans if necessary borrowed on the credit of the city.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

This important department I have good reason to believe is in a most reliable and efficient condition, so far as its members and equipment are concerned. Our antiquated engine houses, however, erected in the days of hand-tubs, are not only in need of extensive repairs but are wholly inadequate for the storing of the modern steamers now in use. Whenever the finances of the city will admit there should be erected one fire station of sufficient dimensions with suitable conveniences to accommodate at least three steamers and the hook and ladder truck. Such a building now used by other cities of our state would materially reduce the annual expenses of this department, and add greatly its efficiency.

The fire alarm telegraph introduced two years ago at a considerable expense has proved of essential benefit and advantage both to the members of the department and to the public.

The chief disideratum at the present time, and a most important one, is, a supply of water adaquate for any emergency. I am informed by the engineers in charge that either of the reservoirs on Market or Haymarket squares, upon which are dependent the most valuable sections of our city for protection, can be exhausted by a single steamer in less than two hours. This should be remedied by the substitution of feeding pipes of larger size and volume connecting with the main pipes of the Portsmouth aqueduct.

A reservoir should be located on Court place, between Court and States streets, and another on Cabot or Rockingham streets, to be connected with the large reservoir on Dover street belonging to the Portsmouth Aqueduct company, by whom permission has been already granted.

I would also recommend that a reservoir of sufficient capacity be constructed on the low land near Miller avenue. This could be done at comparatively small expense, and readily supplied with water from local springs, and would protect a large and rapidly growing section of the city which at present is entirely unprovided with any supply of water for fire purposes.

By a recent ordinance the entire Fire Department are required to parade annually in the month of September; this ordinance has received the cordial approval of the board of engineers and the members of the department. As the first parade will occur a few weeks hence you will soon have the opportunity to be acquainted with its practical results.

STREETS.

The expenditures of this department necessarily are always large. During the past year there have been substantial improvements in some of our public streets, which have added greatly to their accommodation and beauty. The widening and straighening of Creek street, although requiring a considerable outlay of money—the equivalent is the beautiful Woodbury avenue, of which our citizens may feel justly proud.

Further improvements on Newcastle avenue have made it one of the finest of our public thoroughfares. While the macadamizing of Market street, in the very business centre of our city, is a work commended by all.

I am fully satisfied that our streets generally will bear favorable comparison with those of other cities of a similar size in New England.

It is not anticipated that any extraordinary expenditure will be required in this department during the coming year. I would however recommend to the committee in charge that in repairing the streets in the business part of the city that crushed stone be used as the material for such repairs instead of gravel; in view of the long draft of the latter the expense cannot be much greater, and when once applied to our road beds, forms a solid and compact driveway.

Among the many improvements made in our streets during the last few years none have effected a more striking change in the appearance of our city, than the recent introduction of the electric light system, by which our main streets and avenues are now brilliantly illuminated in the night-time, 50 of which are in use for that purpose as a substitute for 76 gas lights which have been discontinued. In view of the great expense of the electric lights ($100 each) I would suggest that at present there should no further additions be made to the number already in use.

POLICE.

The good order of our city, the protection of the property and persons of its inhabitants, depend in a great measure upon the efficiency of our police force. The law contemplates that the "Marshal shall under the direction of the Mayor have precedence over, and the entire control of the assistant marshals, constables and police officers, when they are engaged as such in the service of the city." This is a duty unaccompanied by any power of appointment or confirmation of these officers. In short the Mayor is expected to see that the laws are enforced by a corps of officers in the selection of whom he has no voice or power. The citizens however expect the Mayor to superintend the affairs of the city and acts of officials chosen by the votes of the members of the city councils. It will be seen therefore, that the responsibility of selecting men who will properly discharge the duties of the various offices of the city rests entirely with you. Too much care cannot be exercised in the selection of the members of our police officers. They should be persons possessed of firmness, courage, keen perception, good judgment and discretion, especially are kindness and courtesy desirable. Rarely of course are all of these qualities combined in one man; whenever any member of the police force possesses any considerable number of these qualities he should be retained.

In my opinion changes upon the police force should be avoided except for good and sufficient causes; for nothing is gained by frequent removals and the appointment of men totally unacquainted with the difficult duties of such a service.

During the past year numerous burglaries were committed in the business section of the city; after a thorough investigation, the officers on duty although fully exonerated from any negligence on their part, nevertheless it was quite apparent that the present system of police regulations adopted many years since was defective, that by reason of the great distance to patrol, a large part of the property of our citizens was at times without protection. I would most earnestly call your attention to this defect and suggest the substition of a new and more efficient system of regulation for the government of the night patrol, even should the adoption of such a system require an addition to the present force.

SCHOOLS.

The magnitude of the expenditures for the support of our public schools should warrant them to be in the highest state of proficiency.

From my personal experience as a member of the board of instruction I feel assured that the money thus expended has been productive of satisfactory results, and that our pupils are as thoroughly trained and as far advanced in their studies as those in schools of similar grades in other cities of the state.

The Superintendent of Public Schools—an office created one year ago—has proved a most excellent director in their management and I believe his services have been generally satisfactory to all directly interested in the education of our youth.

The condition of our school houses with the exception of the high and Haven schools are decidedly behind the age, are constantly requiring expensive repairs and are over-crowded with scholars.

These structures were perhaps adapted for the purposes of education of a generation or more ago but are wholly unsuited to our modern system—a careful examination of these buildings will convince you that the time has come when some radical improvement should be devised to meet the wants of the present generation.

CITY FARM.

The subject of disposing of the city farm and buildings was considered by the late city government; in both branches of which ordinances for such sale were originated and passed, but by reason of their conflicting provisions for the manner of the sale, the proposition failed.

Probably the matter will be presented to you during your official term—

I would suggest that if in your judgment it be expedient to dispose of this property that some convenient building should be purchased or erected for the care and comfort of our needy poor.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS MONUMENT.

Since the close of the war to preserve the union, the majority of the cities and larger towns of our state have erected monuments in memory of their soldiers and sailors who participated in that great conflict. Portsmouth no less patriotic in time of war had in the meanwhile taken no active measures to commemorate her sons who had fallen in the military and naval forces of the Republic.

One year ago my immediate predecessor in office took the initiative and through his public spirit and energetic efforts assisted by other citizens subscriptions sufficient in amount have been raised for a large and handsome monument which is now under contract and will be completed sometime during the present municipal year, to be surmounted with a statue of appropriate design—the liberal gift of my esteemed predecessor.

The valuable and centrally located lot of land now denominated Goodwin Park has recently been donated to the city as a site for the monument by our late mayor conjointly with his venerable mother a former resident and his brother Heman F. Eldredge, Esq The munificence of the donors without example in our local history ensures to them the lasting gratitude of our community.

The late city government upon accepting the deed of this lot immediately adopted measures to improve it and appropriated one thousand dollars for that purpose, to be expended under the direction of the park commissioner.

Should an additional appropriation hereafter be required to grade and beautify this park in a manner suitable for the purposes for which it was intended I believe such an expenditure would be cheerfully endorsed by our tax payers.

BATHING HOUSES.

I would invite your attention to a want long experienced in our community, viz. suitable and conveniently located bathing houses. Under the existing laws, if enforced, it is almost impossible for our youth to learn the important art of swimming, or our adult population enjoy the healthful exercise of bathing. In view of the proximity of our city to such excellent facilities for bathing, it seems not unreasonable that our municipal authorities should devise some measures whereby our citizens might rightfully enjoy these facilities from which they are now practically debarred by law.

THE MILL POND NUISANCES.

I congratulate you and our citizens that the putrid waters and flats of the North mill pond, an intolerable nuisance of many years standingg, have at last been purified by the construction of the sewer from the Creek to the Piscataqua river, and at a cost within the appropriation. The offensive odors arising from the pond, which at times threatened a widespread epidemic, have entirely disappeared.

The South mill pond, however, still continues to occasionally emit such odors which are caused by the influx of a large amount of sewerage on its northern margin. At some time in the near future a large sewer should be constructed from the north-westerly side of the pond to cut off this sewerage and carry it into the deep waters of the river. When such a work is completed, our city will be entirely freed from the pestilential and disagreeable odors which have so long annoyed its inhabitants and so seriously imperiled their health.

In conclusion I would state that I have endeavored to communicate to you in as brief and concise a manner as possible the present condition of our municipal affairs, from which I trust you may have gathered sufficient information to enable you intelligently to enter upon the duties before you.

I have indicated at this time for your consideration a few measures only, and those which in my judgment the welfare of our city imperatively demands. Hereafter whenever the public interests require, I shall not hesitate to communicate to you such additional measures as may be conduce to that end; feeling assured of your ready assistance and cooperation in all matters which may tend to a successful administration of the trust confided to our care and keeping.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

Crochet Linen Thread.

This is an article that is made for crocheting Lace, covers for Chairs, Tidies, &c. Most ladies use common spool linen, but this wears rough. The Crochet Linen is hard twisted, and will work and wear smooth, and has a silky appearance. In comes in Nos. 16 to 70, in white, cream and echru.

LINEN FLOSS

Is another article that is in great demand, and comes in all colors, and will be used in the future as much as silk. In working silk every lady knows that it frays, and if it comes to much wear becomes rough. The Linen Floss will not wear rough, and will wash as well as any wash silk made. You can hardly distinguish the difference between the silk and linen after it is worked, as the lustre is nearly equal to the silk.

THE NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

The usual inauguration ceremonies took place at the court house Tuesday forenoon in the presence of a very good number of our citizens. Every member of the new government was present and was duly sworn in. The exercises were of an interesting and appropriate character. The meeting was called to order by Mayor Eldredge, who called for the reading of the records and the resolution declaring George E. Hodgdon mayor of the city. The mayor took the oath of office administered by city clerk Goodrich.

The convention arose and the council was called to order by the clerk, Charles E. Senter. Mark A. Scott was chosen president pro tem.

It was voted to proceed to ballot for a permanent president. Patrick Lindley and Fred J. Haddock were appointed tellers. The result of the voting was as follows:

Whole number of votes cast,	18
Necessary for a choice,	10
Walter H. Page had	14
Charles E. Pinder,	4

and Walter H. Page was declared elected.

The board of mayor and aldermen met the council in convention for the purpose of electing a city clerk.

The mayor then delivered his inaugural address which was a very able document, concise, comprising many valuable suggestions and recommendations, expressed in very appropriate and fitting language. It appears in full on the 2d page of this paper, and will, no doubt, be read with interest by our readers.

The convention arose, and both branches adjourned to meet at the city rooms on Thursday evening.

GALLANT RESCUE.

Lincoln D. Randall, the five-years-old son of Mr. William C. Randall, was playing with some other little boys on the end of Broughton's southern wharf about half-past four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when he accidentally fell overboard. The other children gave the alarm, which reached the ears of Mr. Alfred R. Goodwin, the boatman, who was at the Mystic's landing on the next wharf. On learning the cause of the outcry Mr. Goodwin ran at the top of his speed around to Pier wharf, and as he reached the end, much out of breath, he saw the boy about fifteen feet out from the wharf, in the tide, which was slowly running up, and several feet under the surface, sinking for the last time. Without an instant's wait he plunged in, and diving, caught at the boy's head, but his hair being closely cropped, he was unable to secure a hold. Coming to the surface for a breath, he dived a second time and brought the insensible boy up by his clothes, and was swimming into the dock with his burden when a man put out in a boat, and brought the two ashore. Arrived on the wharf, Mr. Goodwin worked over the boy with such judicious endeavor that his senses after a time returned, and then carried him home. Mr. Goodwin's courage, instant action and humane persistence cannot be too highly commended, as having certainly saved a human life.

PERSONAL.

Mr. E. C. Stedman of New York arrived at his cottage in Newcastle last week. He intends to spend the month of August in a much needed rest.

Philip DeNormandie, son of Rev. James DeNormandie, spent a portion of last week at Mr. Albee's in Newcastle, and left on Saturday for Biddeford Pool.

Mr. Hayden H. Slater, son of the late Mr. John Slater, arrived home from Saginaw, Mich., Sunday morning, but two late to attend his father's obsequies.

Mr. Herbert L. Verder of Rutland, Vt., arrived in this city on Tuesday, on a short visit at Mr. True W. Priest's.

POLICE COURT--BATCHELDER J.

MARINE ACCIDENTS.

The brig Fannie B. Tucker, Sylvester master, left the Eastern railroad wharf at Noble's island about ten o'clock Tuesday afternoon in tow of the tug L. A. Belknap, bound for Portland. The tide was too much for the tug, and was taking the tow astern at a lively rate when the skipper of the tug hailed the brig to let go her anchor, but this was not done, and the tug let go of the towline to save herself. The brig went against Portsmouth bridge near the second truss from the Portsmouth side, damaging her starboard quarter, bending her chainplates and smashing her channels, and starting some of the caps of the bridge, throwing the railroad tracks out of line. The three o'clock train from the eastward was detained on the bridge until after six o'clock, the passengers and baggage being transferred; the afternoon train from this city for Portland went over the Portsmouth & Dover railroad and the Western division of the Boston & Maine to North Berwick junction, where it took its proper line. The night trains went over the bridge, the damage having been repaired. The brig was pulled clear of the bridge about 4:30 o'clock, at slack water, and proceeded to sea in tow. It is said that other fluid than the swiftly-running water of the Piscataqua was responsible for the accident.

STRIKE OF LASTERS.

The lasters employed in the Portsmouth shoe factory, to the number of about seventy-five, went out on a strike, Tuesday forenoon, on the order of J. E. Daily of Lynn, Mass., secretary of the Lasters' Union. The cause of the strike is said to be the refusal of Superintendent Berry to accept a schedule of prices established by the Massachusetts union for adoption by New Hampshire factories; and another grievance is said to be Mr. Berry's refusal to discharge certain non-union lasters. Owing to the strike the factory was shut down on Tuesday evening; the pay-roll of this establishment is over $5000 a week, and its suspension is no mere joke, to the employes or the city. The men comprising the shoe company are men of capital and backbone, and will not be bulldozed into acceding to any unreasonable demands; and if, as is reported, one of the demands of the union lasters is that all workingmen not belonging to their society be discharged, then every person who believes in the freedom of the American workingman, as such, whether he belongs to a "union" or not, will ardently hope for the utter defeat of the Lasters' Union.

MARITIME NOTES.

The U. S. S. Atlanta arrived in the lower harbor late on Monday afternoon, and came to anchor. She will not come up to the navy yard for coal, but will have what she needs taken down in scows.

The receipts of codfish at Gloucester on Monday were the largest this season, vessels arriving from the Grand Banks and Georges bringing over a million pounds.

The Volunteer crossed the winning line at Marblehead about half-past seven o'clock Tuesday morning, crawling along in a faint breeze; the Mayflower was 3 1-2 hours behind her, and the rest of the fleet came straggling in later. The Volunteer not only laid closer to the wind, but outsailed, all the other yachts.

The big, ungainly anchor-boy belonging to the navy yard was going down river on the ebb tide, Tuesday evening, with a load of coal for the U. S. S. Atlanta, in tow of a steam launch. She got through the narrows and past the evil-named point all right, but was unmanageable in the tide, bumped up against the bluff face of Seavey's island, and then went ashore on the upper side of Clark's island, where she stuck. Our informant doubted if she would float with the flood tide.

The little steamer Pinafore is as staunch and safe a boat of her size as there is to be found; she is nicely fitted up for the summer's work of plying between Appledore and Star islands, and is carefully and skilfully handled by Capt. Charles W. Hart, her skipper in former seasons, whose cheerful face is a pleasant greeting to the old inhabitants of those noted summer resorts.

A writer in the Boston Herald mentions "a toll-bridge between Dover and Kittery, N. H."

Everybody is happy now that the days are all days of sunshine, and everybody wants to take the well-earned rest which the hard work of the past year has entitled them to. Some will go to York beach, some to Newcastle and others to the mountains, but all should read in another column "Kast yer rye on this."

Henry Hastings, a well-known merchant, died at West Medford, Mass., on Tuesday. He was at one time engaged in hosiery business in this city. The celebrated ship Charger was built on Peirce's island in this harbor by the late E. G. Peirce for Mr. Hastings, who after 1853 was a widely known ship owner.

The old sheers at the navy yard are utterly worthless, and are to be replaced by new ones. They cost when erected—or at least that was the amount charged against them, $40,000; probably $12,000 would have covered the expense, but other things were done with the rest of the money and the total was charged to "sheers."

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

The supreme court of New Hampshire hold that a railroad company (and none the less its employes) has not the right to carry away the hay made upon the right-of-way inside its fences. This hay is the property of the owner of the land, and he may sue the taker in conversion if the company gives the hay away. If cut down by the railway to prevent fires from passing trains, it should not be given away, but the owner of the land is entitled to take it.

Elbert Manson, driver of the Kittery Point stage, was arraigned before Trial Justice Dennett, at Kittery Foreside, on Tuesday, the 9th inst., on a complaint brought by Col. Marvin of this city, and was adjudged guilty of cruelly overdriving and whipping an old horse used on the Kittery Point and Portsmouth stage route. Owing to the poverty of the owner the judge inflicted a nominal fine, which with costs amounted to fifteen dollars.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, Aug. 8th.

The passenger trains are running today. It is said that one hundred and fifty persons came through on the first train from York this morning. The Pepperell team carried a party of guests to the station this afternoon to take the train to Portsmouth, but very few people of this place have travelled over the road to-day.

Many persons are sick from the damp, foggy weather of the past three weeks, and the inshore wind yesterday was gladly welcomed by all in this vicinity.

The Pepperell has now some over ninety guests. Last week there were one hundred and seven there. It is whispered that the young man who is spending the season at the Pepperell is very fond of fine button-hole bouquets, and a short time since he was the recipient of a bouquet consisting of a huge sunflower and the great leaf of a castor bean tied with yellow satin ribbon. It must have made him almost "Wilde."

The fog has been very dense, six fathoms thick, some days. While a party of citizens were out on the water one morning in a fog mull, close by and in sight of Fishing island, they met a boat load of guests, with their boatman, who asked, "Mister, where's Kittery? This is Fishing island; but where's Kittery?" The necessary directions were given and the boatman rowed away. The next land they made was—not the pier, but Fort wharf. We have since heard that they found "Kittery" after a season.

Mr. Wm. C. Williams and daughter, of Boon island, are in on a few days vacation. Mr. Williams brought with him a fine lot of those "nice Boon island fish."

Mrs. Helen Springer and children, of Boston Highlands, are spending a few weeks with Mrs. R. H. Bowman.

Mrs. James Allen and daughter are spending a few days with friends in Portsmouth.

A party of young men went to York last week on a blueberry excursion. After travelling all over York, as one of them expressed it, they returned at night bringing one quart of berries each, one bringing his in a half bushel basket. A few days after they tried again, and went to Scituate. This time they had better luck and brought home, some sixteen quarts, some eighteen and some twenty. One young man met with quite a disaster. He had three quarts of berries in his pail and in going through a bog lost his footing and fell, spilling every berry. He never picked up a berry but left them all in the bog and began again.

Mr. Starr's new steam yacht the Gypsy has arrived. The Gypsy is much larger than the Alert. It is said she will carry twenty persons. She is painted white and is a fine looking boat.

Hotel Parkfield has about forty guests. People are beginning to discover the attractions of this pretty seaside resort.

Hotel Pocahontas is full to-day.

Mr. Samuel Fernald and son, of Lynn, Mass., are at the old Fernald homestead at present.

There are quite a number of yachts and vessels in the harbor to-night. The Annie F. Conlon arrived in the lower harbor at noon. The Pepperell boats are all out in the harbor but one. It is a beautiful evening to be on the water, and an English steamer attracts much attention to-night.

A correspondent from the Oceanic, Star island, reports this the best season yet. The house is so full that cots have been put up in the bath-rooms, dance hall and parlor. The flower gardens there are very fine. The salt air seems to give the flowers brighter hues than they have on the main land away from the sea shore. AUNT MOLLY.

A Perilous Postponement.

To postpone, when the duty for immediate action is clear, is always unwise. Especially is it so when increasing ill health calls for a resort to medication. Diseases of the kidneys and bladder are often of swift growth—always of fatal tendency if not combatted at the outset. We have all—even those of us who are not remarkably well instructed—heard something of the danger attending Bright's disease, diabetes, and other diseases of the kidneys or bladder. Let no one be foolhardy enough to procrastinate if he perceives the renal organs to be inactive. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are peculiarly adapted to overcome this inaction, to sufficiently stimulate, without exciting the kidneys and bladder. Infinitely is this diuretic to be preferred to the impure and fiery stimulants of commerce, which prove the bane of unsentinel persons with a tendency to renal troubles. They are likewise incomparable for dyspepsia, fever and ague, and billiousness.

The Vermont state grange has complained to the interstate commission of the Boston & Lowell railroad.

Ready method in drowning, as to what to do and how to do it, will be found in Dr. Kaufman's Medical Work; fine colored plates from life. Send three two-cent stamps, to pay postage, to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

A Boston millionaire died recently from the effects of a wound which he received on his foot by dropping a pair of shears while cutting off coupons, several weeks ago. This will prove a warning to Boston millionaires to have their investments in registered instead of coupon bonds.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

There was a heavy frost in different localities around Lake Winnepesaukee Sunday night.

My friend, look here! you know how weak and nervous your wife is, and you know that Carter's Iron Pills will relieve her, now why not be fair about it and buy her a box?

The Dominion government has received no official advices of any movement on the part of the Mormons to settle in the Canadian northwest.

A woman who is weak, nervous and sleepless, and who has cold hands and feet, cannot feel and act like a well person. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness, and give strength and rest.

Col. G. L. Perkins, treasurer of the Norwich & Worcester railroad, celebrated his 99th birthday anniversary last week.

It Went Where It Would Do The Most Good.

The certainty of the event was confirmed by the 206th Grand Drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery, which occurred at New Orleans, La., on Tuesday—always Tuesday—July 12th, 1887. It went off as usual; Fortune's favors were scattered hither and thither—$150,000 was the First Capital Prize; it went to No. 11,607 (sold in tenths at $1 each) One to Chris. Sintes, No. 408 Dyrades St., New Orleans, La.; one to W. S. Locke of Mc. Millan, Mich., collected through First Nat'l Bank of Marquette, Mich.; one to Henry Downs at Switzwater Plantation near Greenville, Miss.; one to John Murphy, Glenmary, Tenn., through First Nat'l Bank of Chattanooga, Tenn.; one to Darius R. Burr, 179 Forsyth Street, New York; one to J. P. Coleman, Petersburg, Va., through City Bank of Richmond, Va.; one to Archie L. Allen, Buffalo, N. Y.; one sold in New York City were collected through Wells, Fargo & Co. of San Francisco, Cal.; the remainder elsewhere. No. 65,541 drew the Second Capital Prize of $50,000 (also sold in tenths at $1 each): One to John L. Bett, and one to John Cash, both of Portland, Me., paid through Adams Express Co.; one paid to Wells, Fargo & Co., San Francisco, Cal.; the remainder elsewhere. No. 15,322 drew the Third Capital Prize of $20,000 (sold also in tenths at $1 each): One to Isaac Vaughn of New York City, paid through Adams Express Company; one paid through the City Nat'l Bank of Cairo, Ill.; two more paid through the Anglo-Californian Bank of San Francisco, Cal.; the remainder elsewhere. Nos. 31,503 and 46,836 drew the Fourth Two Capital Prizes of $10,000 each (also sold in tenths at $1 each), scattered all around the world. Large parties in New Orleans, New York, Boston, Chicago, Washington City, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Albuquerque, N. M., etc., etc. The total amount distributed was $335,000, and went where it did the most good probably. Any information can be had by addressing M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La. The next occurrence of a similar nature will be on Tuesday, Sept. 13th.

MATTERS IN YORK.

YORK CORNER, ME, Aug. 9th.

Mr. G. W. Burleigh of Great Falls, on Friday morning, came from his home on his bicycle to York Corner post office, in one hour and fifty-five minutes, dismounting only three times, once at Conway Junction hill, once at Smith's watering trough and Bass Cove hill.

Large crowds came on the York Harbor & Beach railroad on the 8th inst., from different places along the route. The celebration of the opening of the road which took place that evening was a grand affair. At least four thousand people were present. The Marshall house and other houses in that vicinity were brightly illuminated. Many thousand Chinese lanterns were tastefully arranged about the Marshall house. The South Berwick band discoursed fine music while a large amount of elaborate fire works were discharged. At the finale, the letters "Y. H. & B. R. R. opening Aug. 8th" were emblazoned with fire and during its burning the cars, steamboats, tug boats, and other engine whistles were blown, bells rang and altogether gave old York the appearance and noise of a large city. To say the affair was a grand success, as no doubt the road will prove, is drawing it mild. It was gorgeous, and a sight that must have awakened strange thoughts and memories of many of the ancient denizons of this good old ballwick. P.

A syndicate of Massachusetts capitalists has offered to buy out a controlling interest in the Dover horse railroad, with a view of extending the line to Great Falls, besides running it through various other streets in Dover. BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 25th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life a long, long drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinate sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

A CENTRAL SOUDAN TOWN.

Customs and Civilization of the People—Skill and Artistic Tastes Displayed.

In looking around we note the scrupulous cleanness of everything—the well-swept yard, the well-washed earthen-ware, cooking pots, and other kitchen utensils, the daintily carved calabashes for milk, water, and a variety of purposes. Here stands part of a tree hollowed into a mortar for pounding certain grains, and there a bedded coarse-grained stone, on which the family meal is ground. Everywhere are to be observed evidences of the thrift and industry which distinguish the Soudanese household. Unlike the domestic establishments of most Mohammedan parts, there is no pampered laziness or voluptuous ease. Wife and slave alike are busily engaged in household duties, or work which will bring money to the workers. Here is cotton being teased and cleaned, then with spindle and wheel turned into thread. Food simmers or boils on the fire in the various savory, if oily, dishes for which the Haussa women are famous. We note that no heavy or unwomanly tasks are laid upon the females. . . . In the storerooms and master's apartments are to be seen a great variety of objects heaped together or lying about without any attempt at order. Here may be found the owner's weapons of war—many double-edged swords, with scabbards handsomely ornamented with leather and brass, and suspended by elaborate and betasseled silk ropes, daggers intended to be attached to the wrist by a leather band—the cross-shaped handle when thus carried almost lying in the palm of the hand—beautiful long iron spears neatly and prettily inlaid with brass bands, and generally barbed, revolvers and pistols of the most absolute types, as well as flint-lock guns which look as if they would be as dangerous to the user as they could possibly be to an enemy. Such are the offensive weapons. But there are also to be seen war dresses of enormously thick quilts, intended specially as a protection against poisoned arrows. The warrior when encased in these cumbersome garments looks the most unwieldy and barrel-like of African Falstaffs, as he can neither mount his horse nor dismount without assistance, and if unhorsed he is perfectly helpless. Many of the wealthy chiefs have also very beautiful coats of chain armor, with head-gear to match, which are probably of old Moorish workmanship, and are said by the natives to be as old as David, and are accordingly valued at a great price.

Besides the objects which savor of war, numbers of other things lying about in artistic disorder attract attention. Brass vessels are the most conspicuous, and indicate a manipulative skill and an artistic taste which we would certainly not expect in such a country. The chief types of native work are large circular salvers or trays, globular vessels, others carafe-like in form, urns resembling coffee-pots. They are all elaborately ornamented, either in repousse or chased in the intricate manner which characterizes Moorish art. Many of the designs are most beautiful, and worked out with patient care. In the brass-worker's art, as in so many other things, the influence of North African ideas is easily traceable, though how they have come to take such fixed root in the Soudan it would be difficult to say. Our wonder at the quaint and effective work is enhanced on learning that all these vessels are hammered out of brass rods, each two feet long and of the thickness of telegraph wire, in which form it reaches these parts from Europe.

The specimens of pottery which we see lying about exhibit a wonderful skill in that industry, considering that as yet they have not adopted the potter's wheel. The most extraordinary objects, however, which attract our attention are the skin vessels for holding oil. In some way or other they are moulded into the required forms out of raw hide, and so constructed in a single piece as hardly to show the slightest trace of a joint. They are not sewed, but the two edges of the skin are made to adhere most firmly by some means. The outer aspect is ornamented in black, white, and light brown strips of skin having those colors. The hair is left on except on the neck. They are ingeniously fitted with caps or lids to keep out any foreign matter. Only oil or grain is kept in them, as water softens the untanned skin. In some cases they are clearly intended more for ornament than use, as frequently four smaller vessels of the same pattern are attached to the chief one with the most happy and artistic effect.

One thing which we cannot fail to notice in looking round a Wurnu household of the "upper ten" is that the people have largely acquired æsthetic tastes, and delight to surround themselves with articles which please the eye, as well as with those which are merely useful; and to minister to this taste a score of industries have sprung up.—Joseph Thomson, in Harper's Magazine.

A noted rebel chief in Tonquin was recently captured and executed. After he was taken, to the questions put to him he would give no answer, and as soon as he was captured he tried to commit suicide by tearing open his stomach with his nails, biting his tongue, scratching his eyes out, and mutilating himself in still more horrible ways. He had a very great influence with the literati. At his last examination he obtained first place and was president of the important association of Thau-ban.

His Compliments.

R. S. Spofford, Esq., whose democracy is of the Charles Levi Woodbury variety, congratulates Secretary Whitney on his telegram to Admiral Luce reversing that officer's actions in the Canadian waters, and ordering the withdrawal of his instructions to the American fishing fleet. He also takes advantage of the situation to pay his compliments to the administration. He writes:

I send you the greetings of a democrat and my congratulations on your despatch of Aug. 6th, addressed to Admiral Luce. That despatch will bring to you an exceeding great reward in the grateful appreciation of your countrymen. It shows you to be no unworthy son of your honored sire, and the one retrieving element since the withdrawal of Mr. Manning in an administration to be remembered only for its feudal service, infatuation at home and effeminate diplomacy abroad.

Too Efficient, Possibly.

Mr. Foster, the Dominion minister of fisheries and marine, says in an interview published in the government organ at Halifax that he has instructed the cruisers to seize the American schooners Col. J. H. French and Argonant, wherever they can find them outside of American territorial waters, as they have committed a forfeitable offence, and Canadians have an undoubted right to seize them. These are the schooners whose boats were caught fishing within the three-mile limit. The despatch says the minister is clearly wrong, and shows unpardonable ignorance of international law. Cases of seizure on extra-territorial waters have taken place before, and it has been decided that no nation has an "undoubted right" to do it. In the American case, Ross vs. Hinely, where a vessel, after trading with vessels at St. Domingo, was seized more than ten leagues from the coast by a French privateer and taken to a Spanish port and sold, and was afterwards condemned by a French tribunal at St. Domingo, under municipal law, the court held that any seizure for breach of a municipal regulation beyond the limits of the territorial jurisdiction was not warranted by the laws of nations, and invalid; and Dana says in a note to Wheaton, on international law, "that the principle is settled that municipal seizures cannot be made for any purpose beyond territorial waters. It is also settled that the limit of these waters is, in the absence of treaty, the marine league or the cannon shot." So that if Minister Foster has given instructions to the cruisers to pursue poachers right up to the American limit and capture them on the high seas, he is very likely to get Canada into trouble.

The "Star of Bethlehem."

If one stands facing the north in the early part (nine o'clock) of any clear night at this time of the year he will easily perceive the constellation of Ursa Major. It will be noticed nearly overhead though somewhat to the northwest, and is the most brilliant of all constellations in this section of the heavens. Its principal stars number seven, and from their shape, as a group, originated the name of "the dipper." The two bright stars in the end of this constellation farthest from the handle are the "pointers," so called because they are always in a nearly direct line from Polaris, the north star. Now, in imagination, draw a line through the pointers and straight to Polaris, thence in the opposite direction to an equal distance, but with the line bearing slightly to the left. The end of this last line will be in the midst of a constellation whose five brightest stars are shaped like the letter W, with the side toward the west somewhat fallen out. This group of stars marks the outline of the constellation of Cassiopeia, and ought easily to be found. The three brightest stars at the east side form a triangle, or letter Y, and midway in the opening and a little toward Polaris the average observer may see a faint star, which with the three others make a figure of diamond shape. It is to this faint star that those interested in the "Star of Bethlehem" should direct their observations, for in this immediate vicinity it is expected to appear. The observer, with good eyesight, may favorably compete with the professional observer in the lookout for this famous star, for at its last appearance it was first seen with the naked eye, when only an hour previous a telescope had been directed toward it.

KITTERY, ME., Aug. 9th.

The funeral of Mrs. Horace Manson took place from her late residence in North Kittery on Sunday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Lade of the Congregational church in Eliot conducted the services.

Frank Adlington, formerly baggage master at the depot, has been appointed station master at the Foreside station of the Y. H. & B. R. R.

Morrill Lodge of Good Templars held their election and installation on Friday evening last, after which a collation of fruit and cake was served.

Several farmers in North Kittery have lost sheep of late by dogs, and we think are looking after them, since we saw the carcass of a large black one lying in the road with a bullet hole in his breast a few evenings since.

The examination of candidates for admission to the Free High school we understand will take place in Armory hall on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 25th. Also that the course of study in the school will be somewhat revised before the September term of school.

Some mistreants have evidently been trying to paint the town red, as they have daubed the guide-boards on the post road with red paint from the Depot to Butterfield's corner. The guide-boards are new, and have just been put up; but then we suppose the parties thought that there would be no need of guide-boards to York after the new railroad commenced running.

Mr. William A. Fernald was severely injured last Sunday afternoon. He was taking the chairs used at the funeral of Mrs. Horace Manson to their several owners, and having quite a lot on his wagon they being top-heavy canted and all went off together, starting the horse into a run. Mr. Fernald, who was riding on the load, was thrown off and struck on his right side, rendering him quite helpless for a time. The horse ran to the house, a short distance off, and in turning into the gate struck the post and capsized the wagon, demolishing it somewhat. It was lucky the wagon struck the post, as Mr. Fernald's two grandchildren, Maude and Harry Sanborn, were sitting in his carriage in the yard in the direct line of the frightened horse, and had he struck the carriage no one knows what the damage would have been.

Mr. Albert H. Moulton, wife and child, of New Haven, Conn., are visiting Mr. Moulton's parents in North Kittery.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., BOSTON.

Two commercial travellers met at the railroad station in this city recently. One of them expressed surprise that he had not met the other as frequently as formerly. "No," said the other, "I am working a new racket now, and don't go over my old route." He explained that he was in the western loan business. "My route is through the back towns of New Hampshire and Maine now, but business is rather slow just at present on account of the western drought, and I have been laying off at York beach. It will boom when the crops move." Thus is our best mercantile talent absorbed by the great demand for financial talent to open up the country at the far west.

PORTSMOUTH & DOVER RAILROAD.

A meeting of the Portsmouth & Dover railroad corporation was held at the city rooms in this city at eleven o'clock on Wednesday forenoon, Aug. 10th, and the following directors elected: Frank Jones, Daniel Marcy, Joseph A. Walker, George E. Hodgdon, Charles H. Sawyer, Frank A. Christie, George G. Lowell.

THE LASTERS' STRIKE.

Mr. C. P. Berry, superintendent of the Portsmouth Shoe Co.'s factory, in an interview on the 10th inst. spoke substantially as follows in relation to the strike of the union lasters the previous day:

The trouble, such as it is, I do not think will last any length of time. It is not a dispute about wages, but as to whether the men whose capital is invested in the enterprise, and who in case of adversity would have to bear the entire loss, shall manage their own business, or have it managed for them by outside parties who have no interest in it and know nothing about it. The schedule of prices presented by the secretary of the Lasters' Union raised wages on some work and lowered them on others; but whether the average would have been a raise or a drop was not considered at all. We simply refuse, absolutely and positively, for now and the future, to accept the dictation of any man or body of men, capitalists or workingmen, in Massachusetts or this state or elsewhere, as to what prices we shall pay for labor or whom we shall pay it to, or on any other point. It is and will continue to be, a free shop in the full acceptance of the term; and the business will be conducted by its owners, or cease being conducted at all. We do not antagonize Knights of Labor or members of trades unions; we merely refuse to allow them to rule us, or force us to antagonize other workingmen who are not members of any order or trades union. If a mechanic has for sale labor and skill which we wish to purchase, we shall purchase what he has for sale, by a bargain made directly with him, without asking him as to his religion or politics, or whether he is or is not a Freemason or Knight of Labor or trade unionist. We shall not hire him because he is a member of a trades union, at a certain rate of compensation fixed by his union, but because we want his services, and are willing to pay him what his services are worth. Some of our best men have been union men, and have worked side by side with non-union men who were just as valuable to us; we have not enquired nor cared who were union and who non-union men, and shall not in future, either. Some of the lasters who went out were making $18 a week, and some as high as $22 a week; we have paid as liberally as in our judgment we could afford, and shall not alter our scale of wages or our rule of conduct at the dictum of any outside influence whatever. Rather than do this, the factory will be closed for a year or two, if need be; but this is a contingency I am not considering at all. Twenty-five lasters came in this morning, and twenty-five more are coming in to-morrow morning; other applications are being received in numbers, and I expect to open the shop next Monday morning with every bench filled. The men who went out will not be discriminated against; if they choose to apply for work, and we have places for them, they will be employed—not because they belong to the Union, but because they are good workmen and we know it. We absolutely disclaim any right to interfere with the liberty of the workingman to join any society he may please to; we just as absolutely refuse to concede to any society the right to interfere with our management of our own affairs; and in taking and maintaining this stand we consider that we are as much maintaining the true American idea of the absolute personal liberty of the workingman, as of our own rights as employers of workingmen.

PERSONAL.

Maj. John Parsons, of Florida, is a guest of his nephew, Dr. John W. Parsons, on State street.

Mr. William Plaisted of Providence, R. I., formerly of this city, is making his annual summer visit to his former home.

Mrs. Lyttleton M. Laighton, after an absence of some months in Boston, on the 9th inst. reopened her residence on Daniel street.

The Boston Globe of Aug. 9th had a column sketch of Lieut. Nathaniel J. Coffin, formerly of this city. Lieut. Coffin is represented as now living at Hallowell, Me., on board a sloop rigged boat. The sketch gives an extensive account of the lieutenant's life as a soldier in the Mexican war, the war of the rebellion, and as one of the crew of the Polaris on her Arctic expedition.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner yacht Nautilus, of Boston, arrived in the lower harbor at noon on Wednesday, the 10th inst.

The U. S. S. Despatch, successor to the late lamented Tallapoosa, arrived in the lower harbor on the 10th inst.

The trial races to select a yacht to defend the America's cup against the Thistle have been set down for Sept. 13th, 15th and 17th, off New York harbor.

The schooner Thomas W. Hyde arrived at this port on the 9th inst. from Philadelphia with 700 tons of coal to E. F. Sise & Co., which she will discharge at the Boston & Maine railroad wharf, Noble's island.

The water of both the Piscataqua harbors, and even for a short distance at sea, is of a very high red color at present, as it has been for a week past, owing to the liberal output of muddy fresh water by the various streams tributary to the main river.

The navy yard anchor boy, which grounded on Clark's island Tuesday evening, the 9th inst., while going down river in tow of a steam launch, came off at an early hour the next morning, and went alongside the U. S. S. Atlanta with a load of coal.

At the Shoals on the 9th inst. was the steamer Josie M., of Newburyport, Howard master, with a party of forty-six persons from the Marshall house, York harbor. The boat is not remarkably handsome, but looks decidedly substantial and comfortable. By courtesy of the agent, Mr. Noyes, we went on board, and found a commodious cabin and forecastle finely fitted with all conveniences. She has a beautiful compound engine, is twenty tons gross and 10.13 tons net register, and draws 5 1-2 feet of water. She looks like an ocean steamship on a small scale. We understand that she is for sale.

In dog days it is hard to know how long the pleasant weather is to last. The only way is to improve to-day. One of our skirmishing reporters who took a trip to the Shoals on Wednesday, the 10th inst., not only speaks in fervid terms of the placid ocean, the mild south breeze, the tender and hazy sky, but he asserts that you can see about everything worth seeing on the entire route, either from the deck of the steamer Oceanic or from the rocks of Appledore or Star islands.

Jay Gould has gone back to Wall street. He gave out that he intended to come to the Shoals and go as far east as Bar Harbor, but when he steamed this way he became so befogged in his attempts to master the intricacies of the railroad question now before the legislature that he gave it up and steamed back to New York. There are some things even in railway legislation that Mr. Gould cannot grasp.

A fine concert was given at the Appledore house, Isles of Shoals, on the evening of the 9th inst., Prof. J. K. Paine, Prof. Wm. Mason, Mrs. David Stewart and other guests participating. The proceeds, amounting to $150, are to be given to the Fresh-Air Fund for children in Boston.

Landlord Frisbee of the Oceanic is every whit a landlord and knows how to keep a hotel, as the several parties who went there from Portsmouth on the 9th inst. can attest, if a good table and good attendance are any criterion.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

The prohibitory amendment was defeated in Texas by over 100,000 votes.

MILEAGE TICKETS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The house of representatives on the 9th inst. passed the following:

That all railroad companies doing business in this state, exceping the Portland & Ogdensburg railway and railroads that are operated during the summer season only, shall sell mileage tickets, good upon all railroads operated by them, at the rate of two cents per mile for each five hundred miles, good to the bearer, and without limit as to time or the person or number of persons by whom said ticket may be used.

Any railroad company violating the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty dollars for each offence, to be recovered by complaint or indictment.

This act shall take effect September 1st, 1887.

This is an article that is made for crocheting Lace, covers for Chairs, Tidies, &c. Most ladies use common spool linen, but this wears rough. The Crochet Linen is hard twisted, and will work and wear smooth, and has a silky appearance. In comes in Nos. 16 to 70, in white, cream and echru.

LINEN FLOSS

Is another article that is in great demand, and comes in all colors, and will be used in the future as much as silk. In working silk every lady knows that it frays, and if it comes to much wear becomes rough. The Linen Floss will not wear rough, and will wash as well as any wash silk made. You can hardly distinguish the difference between the silk and linen after it is worked, as the lustre is nearly equal to the silk.

On the 8th inst. a country boy named Mains went into Portland from North Windham and applied for a chance to pitch in the Portland team. He had never played ball except at country picnics and the like. Manager Spence found that he had good speed, and so put him in the box on the 9th against the Salems. He has a fast delivery, and perfect control of the ball. Salem could not hit him, and Portland won in one of the most exciting and interesting contests of the season.

A Perilous Postponement.

To postpone, when the duty for immediate action is clear, is always unwise. Especially is it so when increasing ill health calls for a resort to medication. Diseases of the kidneys and bladder are often of swift growth—always of fatal tendency if not combatted at the outset. We have all—even those of us who are not remarkably well instructed—heard something of the danger attending Bright's disease, diabetes, and other diseases of the kidneys or bladder. Let no one be foolhardy enough to procrastinate if he perceives the renal organs to be inactive. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are peculiarly adapted to overcome this inaction, to sufficiently stimulate, without exciting the kidneys and bladder. Infinitely is this diuretic to be preferred to the impure and fiery stimulants of commerce, which prove the bane of unwary persons with a tendency to renal troubles. They are likewise incomparable for dyspepsia, fever and ague, and billiousness.

There is much interest in Dover over charges made by James Hall, a section hand in the Cocheco mill, alleging that his wife has eloped with Capt. John H. Ingraham. Ingraham has been in the clothing manufacturing business in Dover, was a member of the common council, and alderman for two years, and prominent in the militia, having been first lieutenant of the Strafford guards, and captain of the Sawyer rifles. Mrs. Hall worked for him in his clothing establishment, and Hall alleges that he has intercepted incriminating letters. Ingraham's family scout the idea of elopement, and say that Mrs. Hall has simply gone to Chicago to work for Captain Ingraham, who recently located there.

If you are tired taking the large old-fashion griping pills, and are satisfied that purging yourself till you are weak and sick is not good common sense, then try Carter's Little Liver Pills and learn how easy it is to be free from biliousness, headache, constipation, and all liver troubles. These little pills are smaller, easier to take and give quicker relief than any pill in use. One a dose. Price twenty-five cents.

Dwight Harrison, alias Wilson, wanted in Amesbury, Mass., for the burglary of carriage mats and robes, was arrested at Exeter on the 8th inst., and taken to Amesbury. A quantity of goods was found in his possession.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

Miss Lucelia A. Kimball, one of the most faithful and successful teachers that Nashua has ever had, has been elected supervisor of drawing at Jackson. Miss Kimball has been studying for the past year at the Normal Art school in Boston.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

At Rockaway beach, N. Y., Aug. 9th, Professor T. S. Baldwin leaped from his balloon when at a height of about a mile from the earth, and by means of a parachute descended safely into the water a quarter of a mile from shore. The descent occupied one minute and twenty-four seconds. A large number of people witnessed the feat.

A Valuable Remedy.

Numerous testimonials prove beyond a doubt that Allcock's Porous Plasters cure paralysis, nervous debility and loss of memory when applied to the spine. They remove kidney difficulties when worn on the small of the back; applied to the pit of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion disappear. Colds, coughs and asthma no longer trouble the suffering patient when he uses them on the chest. If you have have a headache, or want to sleep, put an Allcock's Porous Plaster on the nape of the neck—the work is not only done, but well done.

A Specific for Malaria, Rheumatism, Nervous Prostration, Dyspepsia, and all Germ Diseases.

A powerful Tonic that the most delicate stomach will bear. The most Scientific and Successful Blood Purifier.

In the spring of 1878 I was a pupil in the Gates Avenue public school in Brooklyn, Eastern District. At that time the entire neighborhood, although pleasant was unwholesome, as in commonly the case with the thinly settled outskirts of a large city. I think fully half the residents were ill with some kind of malarial trouble for eight months out of the twelve. Malaria was a frequent complaint in the schools, and it was while poring over my studies one day that I first felt the signs of an attack. I will not weary you with the details, as they are so unhappily well known. It will be enough to say that then and there began an illness which continued nearly seven years. During the entire months of April and May, 1880, I was prostrated with it, much of the time in bed. What an abominable experience it was to a girl who had never been continuously sick before in her life! Chronic malaria is a living death.

I had the genuine old-fashioned chills and fever—so they told me—but I found no consolation in that fact. Every other day I had a chill, with chattering teeth, blue lips and finger nails; and after that the fever, with headache, backache and a separate and distinct ache in every part of my body where there was room for an ache to locate! Often I had three separate chills in a single day, with an individual fever attached to each chill. This I thought must be an improvement on the old fashioned disease. It is almost needless to say I took quinine; took it every summer since, from nine to twelve grains a day, with no good result whatever.

But the bad effects of quinine were plain enough. My ears buzzed and rang, and to avoid this and other disagreeable symptoms of quinine poisoning, a physician told me to take my doses of quinine at night, on retiring. I did so, and many a time on rising in the morning I have been so dizzy from that bitter drug as to be almost unable to stand; and on attempting to walk I have staggered like a drunken person.

But this is only part of the story. The malaria and quinine together brought on indigestion, which was worse, if possible, than the chills or the fever, and I had a very narrow escape from chronic dyspepsia. The very though of having to eat was repulsive, and yet one must eat to live. Is it any wonder that people so cursed and fettered make up their minds, as they often do, that life isn't worth living?

We removed to Harlem five years ago, and the malaria arising from the river, and from the building operations in our neighborhood, tended to increase my trouble, and no form of treatment seemed to do any good. I kept on taking quinine because the physician prescribed it, and because it appeared to be understood that if quinine failed to break up malarial fever there was nothing else to be done.

Hitherto I had been comparatively free from malaria in winter, but, whether it was gaining a deeper hold upon me, or for some other reason, I cannot tell, yet it is certain that in February, 1886, I was confined to my bed with it. It was at this time that I was advised to try the merits of Kaskine, the new quinine. Having not the slightest faith in it or hope from it, I tried it nevertheless, and in less than one week I was on my feet once more, with a healthy appetite. It seemed too good to be true, yet it was true. Continuing with Kaskine the disease completely disappeared, and not a sign of it has returned to this day. The indigestion gradually left me with the malaria, and I may sincerely credit the result to Kaskine, the new quinine, which has the double excellence of curing this tedious disease without producing a single unpleasant symptom by the using.

You may publish this if you think it will be of use. I will also answer letters of inquiry about Kaskine, if any are addressed to me—which you may be sure I shouldn't do if I did not thoroughly believe in it.

Virginia Characters.

The father of General E——, of Virginia, had a body-servant who was an inveterate toper. His master tried every means in his power to break him of drinking. Persuasion was useless, advice wasted, and whipping but temporary in effect.

Sam had been to a dance, had imbibed freely, and returned home at break of day, and at breakfast was rather the worse for wear. His master thought to try the effect of frightening him by apparently reading from the morning paper the death of a drunkard in E——

"Spontaneous combustion! Horrible death of a drunkard! Last night Michael McGinnis was in a beastly state of intoxication; he retired to his room, and in blowing out the candle his breath caught fire. He was entirely consumed, and nothing left of him but the ashes in his shoes."

Sam stood with eyes agog and hands raised. "Fore Gord, fore Gord, Marse John, dis nigger neber blow out a candle ez long ez he lib, suah!"

The majority of mankind is unwilling to have other than a large "I" in any undertaking which is successful, and more than willing to share failure with an equally large "We."

Colonel H——, of Virginia had some negroes quarrying rock, with Uncle Ned as foreman. One morning the Colonel rode over to the quarry, and after the usual good-morning said, "Well Ned, how are we getting along?"

"Dar 'tis ag'in We!—how's we gittin erlong? Marse Chawles, I's er-quarring dis here rock. You 'minds me uv er passed er coons ez went er huntin' deer in de swamp. Long Sam—you members him—Marse Torm's Sam?—well, Sam he wuz boss er de batch, an' arfter dey done sot up deir pine-knot torches, an' wuz er waitin' in the brush, Sam he spied sumpin' er-movin', an' he up wid's gun, and bimb! sumpin' drapped, an one er de boys sez, 'Ump! ain't we lucky? dar's one already; we's got one, shuah.' An' Sam he tu'ned round, he did, an' sez he 'Not so much we, er you please—I kill dat ar dear.' An' dey all went ter help skin it, an' lo an' behold! it war Marse Torm's pet colt, out er de gray mar' what he fotch from Richmun, an' Sam he looked kinder skeert, he did, an' sez he, 'Boy's, 'ain't we jest played h—!' An' ebry one uv' em answered, 'Not so much we, of yer please; you done kill dat colt. 'An', Marse Chawles, I's er-quarryin' dis here rock, an' we's gittin' erlong only middlin'."

It was this same Ned who was accosted by the writer upon return from college (and after the days of reconstruction) with, "Good-morning, Uncle Ned—good-morning."

"G'long, chile, g'long; yer mustn't talk dat way ter me now. I's no kin o' yourn; I's yer ekal now, I is 'cordin' ter de fifteenth Commandment. G'long!"

And who, later, upon being urged to finish a bit of plowing before sundown, said, "G'long; w'at's de use er hurrin' so; dar's ernudder day ter-morrow dat isn't eben been fetched yet!"—R. A. Marr, in Harper's Magazine.

Expending the Surplus.

The reported sale of the Vandalia Railroad has started the tongues of the railroad reminiscents.

"I remember," said one "when the Vandalia car-wheels were kept painted red, and were wiped at every station. This was under the regime of President Peck. You see the Vandalia was earning too much money in those days and some of the surplus had to be expended."

"Why earning too much?"

"Under the charter, the road was obliged to turn over to the school fund all net earnings in excess of 8 per cent. As a matter of fact the company was earning from 10 to 20, and the State authorities demanded that the surplus be applied in accordance with the charter. There was no way to find out just how much should go to the school fund, but suits were instituted against the road for recovery of certain amounts. The management probably concluded that the earnings must be reduced—at any rate the number of employes was increased at all the principal stations and whenever a train came in you would see an army of wheel-wipers dart under the cars and begin to polish the red paint. The wheels were kept as clean as the engine-drivers. There was a report at that time that the tracks were washed with soap every evening, the ties were whitewashed weekly, and the track swept with house brooms. The earnings were thus judiciously held down to the 8 per cent limit, and so far as I know the road never paid enough money into the school fund to buy a Pollard warrant. To this day I believe the road by some inscrutable sagacity earns just enough to pay the stockholders 8 per cent and the school fund—nix"—Indianapolis News.

It is related that some Americans recently going through the Jardine des Plantes of Paris stopped to look at a big rattlesnake in a cage. It lay motionless, apparently asleep, but when two of the party behind began to speak in English it moved, lifted its head and gave every sign of interest. They told their companions that the snake understood English. The whole party then returned to the cage. The snake was apparently asleep again. They conversed in French, but the snake made no movement; then the ladies began to speak in English. The snake started, lifted its head, and showed the same alertness as before at the sounds. The rattlesnake proved on inquiry to have come from Virginia.

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

The president has declined to grant a personal interview to the committee of citizens of the District of Columbia, who desire to recommend the removal of the district commissioners, and has suggested that they submit their charges in writing, promising careful consideration.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

"CAPT. JIM" BURDICK.

Dear Chronicle:—I regret to see in a late issue, the notice of the death of Capt. James H. Burdick, at New Orleans. As you say, many in Portsmouth were familiar with Capt. "Jim, the commander of the stately ship Sarah E. Pettigrew, and neither they nor any of his many other friends ever had occasion to doubt his large soul in doing anything and everything in his power to aid a friend in time of need.

Aside from the Pettigrew, there were numerous other ships, about a dozen or so, laid up at the levee during the continuance of the blockade, which became food for the flames when the prowess of Farragut and Bailey once more opened the lower Mississippi to the commerce of the world.

That the ships were cleared out at that time, goes without saying, so that they were flying light; but Capt. Burdick, whose hard earned savings were mostly invested in his ship, elected to stay by her and see that the wharf rats did not get away with anchors, sails and rigging, so that the "bonny boat" would be unable to sail when England and France had recognized the new Confederacy. The great clear decks and 'tween decks would be a revelation to a person unfamiliar with nautical matters, as showing the vast capacity of a ship capable of stowing 5000 bales of the somewhat loosely compressed cotton of those days.

I am not certain that the other ships retained keepers, but my impression is that Capt. Burdick had a general supervision of the whole, and I know that he had as aid-de-camp Capt. Safford, an old West Indian trader, who had served in some of Charlie Cushing's old iron-hooped brigs. Many were the Eastern boys among the flotsam and jetsam of that blockade, and many were the delightful reunions they attended on board the Sarah E., the quaint, weather-beaten, storm-beaten, time-beaten figure of Capt. Safford being ever a prominent feature. His language was another feature, and when he boasted that he could make the best fresh fish chowder out of a salt cod or any other fish, of any man in the Southern Confederacy, we all agreed with him from the substantial proof set before us in the cabin,—but when he told us that he had sailed between Portland and Cardenas so often that he never took the sun on the outward trip, but followed the track of the molasses he had pumped from his vessel on the previous homeward trip, and supplemented this with a statement that New York vessels making long passages had got into his track, mistaking it for the Gulf stream, our faith in his veracity weakened.

What the blockade of a port or the siege of a city means, when pursued in real earnest, but few know unless they have participated therein, and on the inside. As the cordon grew stronger about the passes of the Mississippi, "the Paris of America" assumed a wonderful change from the brilliant New Orleans of '59—60. The levee, then crowded with splendid ships from every clime and myriad steamers from every portion of our central continent, presented a dismal aspect. The handful of ships caught in the same trap as the Pettigrew, a long tier of magnificent up river packets all lying perdu, gave a sombre shade to the once busy scene, which was not much enlivened by the few small stern wheelers that still plied their scanty trips in still available waters. In the city proper, the same sombre air pervaded the brilliant theatre, the gay saloon, the great hotels (which were good ones in those days), the busy marts of commerce and all the minor places of amusement. The stocks of goods grew low in the stores, the prices grew high. Those who had means departed to less de-sultry climes; those who had no means demeaned themselves more philosopically, and remained where they were. Among these were many who had known "Jim" Burdick in the glowing plentitude of New Orleans' overabundant prosperity. He "never went back" on one of them to the extent of his limited means.

When all the sounds of labor were those produced by the manufacture of ships, guns, munitions of war and the various stores needed for the Confederate army, "Jim" came in as a rock of refuge to many of the storm bound host.

Among those included was your humble correspondent, but in better case than some of the others, as he still retained a life-saving station on a leading daily paper, but sighed sadly for the rustling times of yore. In our parties that used to partake of the Captain's hospitality were "Jim" Hickey, one of our brightest and merriest wags Portsmouth ever produced, Heaven rest his soul! he's dead; "Badge" Mooney, of Upper Gilmanton, s date as death, but full of mischief; Charlie Knowlton, engineer at the St. Charles hotel, (who by the way was the first engineer of Boston's new jail previously, and now occupies a prominent position in employ of of Lewis Brothers, Boston,) who was a fine pianist and violinist, and made most delightful music with his splendid banjo inlaid with nearly 3000 pieces; Lieut. Bremond, a Virginian, formerly in U. S. Revenue Service, who had spent a fortune in New Orleans before the war, aside from his government pay. [Lieut. B. afterward received an appointment on the rebel gunboat Florida; she ran in to Lake Ponchartrain, and the first step Bremond took was to seek Capt. Burdick at his ship, where was also your correspondent. "Captain," said Bremond, "I'm a Virginian; my heart goes against you in this matter of war; but you have taken me, have fed me, have given me a shelter for my head when I had not where to sleep at night; when my southern friends who have rioted in luxury at my expense in the days of my prosperity absolutely ignored me. I tell them all the only friend I found in days of adversity is what they call a 'Yankee.' Here is the first money I have received since the beginning of trouble (throwing down an order which was then good for about $250,) if you won't take it for your kindness to me, at least come up to the St. Charles and let us see how much we can reduce it for a nice supper for you and for all of your friends." Capt. Burdick was firm in not leaving his ship, and delegated yours truly, alone, in his place. I doubt if the two ever met again in this life. Perhaps they are now rejoired in a calmer sphere. "Walley" Wiggin, a handsome boy from Lynn, Mass., a graduate of the Boston Post and an attache of the Picayune, who lost an arm at Shiloh, in the Crescent Regiment, and died months after in the Union hospital at Nashville, a good pianist with a five tenor voice, and a wife from a leading creole family. These, with others, made the reunions on board the great ship a thing always to be remembered with pleasure. Making the best of everything, adding thereto the charm of music, good fellowship and of general agnosticism to all that was bad, Capt. "Jim" laid for himself a very straight path to where good people go. Many other incidents I have heard of his big heart, but I was absent from New Orleans when Mr. Butler walked in after Admiral Farragut's victory, and so cannot relate.

JOHN.

The Marblehead races were sailed on the 11th inst., the start being made at 11:30 A. M., the course being a triangular one of thirty-five nautical miles. The weather was thick at intervals, and the wind unsteady. The principal interest was centered in the five big sloops. The Priscilla was disabled, and drew out of the race. At 3:15 the yachts were nearing the finish in the following order: Volunteer, Atlantic, Puritan, Mayflower. The schooner Sachem was leading her old antagonist, the Iroquois.

Mr. JOHN W. FURBUSH,

An Army Veteran,

who has probably suffered more than any man or woman in America to-day. Taken sick while in the Army, he has endured untold agonies since. Describing his first symptoms he says: "My head ached and my appetite was poor. I felt a faintness at the pit of the stomach, and a bad taste in my mouth, while my skin was sometimes hot and sometimes cold. I next felt pains in my back and around the lower portion of my body, and noticed a peculiar odor and color in the water I passed, which was scanty at one time and free at others. Sometimes it pained me to void it, and again it was almost impossible to do so at all. Finally I began to pass clear blood accompanied with the greatest strain and agony."

No less than 20 eminent physicians attended Mr. Furbush at various times, but not one of them could help him. He was near death's door. And yet he says: "I am alive and well to-day, wholly through the wonderful power of Hunt's Remedy, which took me from the verge of the grave."

This Great Remedy absolutely cures all Kidney Liver and Urinary Diseases.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

BURGLARIES AT YORK.

The store of Wilson M. Walker at York village, in which also is located the post-office, was entered on Wednesday night of this week by prying a shutter off a rear window, and stamps, money and other articles taken, to the value of $30 or $40. The thief left a number of boring tools behind; also his old shoes, having fitted himself with a new pair. He also feasted on crackers, and upset the goods generally.

The grocery store of George A. Marshall had a number of holes bored in its shutters, but a dog inside frightened the thief away. The Harmon house and the York Harbor house were both entered, but in both cases the inmates were alarmed, and the thief had to retreat without booty. It is reported that an unsuccessful attempt was made on the Marshall house also, the same night.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Helen H. Benedict, Monson master, arrived at this port on the 10th inst. from Baltimore with 1201 tons of coal for E. F. Sise & Co., to be discharged at the Concord railroad wharf.

Sixteen first-class schooners, five first-class sloops, ten second-class and seven third-class sloops, were entered in the yacht races off Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 11th. The entries for the Boston Herald $1000 cup were the Volunteer, Mayflower, Puritan, Priscilla and Atlantic.

The schooner yacht Wm. H. Russell, Capt. Charles S. Browne, started from this port on Wednesday evening, the 10th inst., for Marblehead, Mass., as per previously published programme, with fifteen passengers to view the great yacht race for the Herald cups. From the condition of the weather on Thursday—a superabundance of fog and no wind at all—the river men doubted if she would reach Marblehead in time for the race, or would see any race that day if she did arrive there.

The schooners Abner Tyler, from Perth Amboy with 203 tons of coal, and George D. Perry, from South Amboy with 200 tons, arrived at this port Aug. 11th, both to J. Albert Walker.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Douglas Olive of Cambridgeport, Mass., and child, arrived in this city on Thursday on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams and wife.

Chas. A. Green, the injured engineer, is doing very well, as all will be glad to know. He sat at his window Wednesday morning of this week, but suggested that if the engine had been as gentle in setting him down as the drivers were in picking him up, he would have been a little more comfortable.

We were favored with a call on Wednesday morning of this week from Geo. W. Rand, the junior of New York's favorite St. Cloud hotel. With his mother he had passed his annual outing at the Oceanic, Star island, and after a short stop with Dr. J. W. Parsons was to return direct to his onerous duties in Gotham.

Col. George F. Towle, U. S. A., has been in this city for a short period, looking after the erection of the fine monument in the family burial lot in the south cemetery. His late visits to this city have all been so mournful in their character that we fear "Frank" will not be in the future a constant visitor to his childhood's home.

Dr. B. W. Moore of New York, veterinary surgeon, will deliver a free lecture on Market square this evening, on the anatomy, physiology and diseases of the horse. Horse men and horse owners are invited to be present at 7:30 o'clock.

A bittern was shot from a tree at the corner of State and Pechallow streets, Thursday afternoon.

In Boston, on the night of the 8th inst., John L. Sullivan, the champion slugger, was presented with a diamond-studded belt. There was a big time—crowd in the theatre—scientific sparring matches on the stage, etc. Mayor O'Brien was present to represent democratic reform city government.

KAST YER RYE ON THIS!

Crochet Linen Thread.

This is an article that is made for crocheting Lace, covers for Chairs, Tidies, &c. Most ladies use common spool linen, but this wears rough. The Crochet Linen is hard twisted, and will work and wear smooth, and has a silky appearance. In comes in Nos. 16 to 70, in white, cream and ecru.

LINEN FLOSS

Is another article that is in great demand, and comes in all colors, and will be used in the future as much as silk. In working silk every lady knows that it frays, and if it comes to much wear becomes rough. The Linen Floss will not wear rough, and will wash as well as any wash silk made. You can hardly distinguish the difference between the silk and linen after it is worked, as the lustre is nearly equal to the silk.

Frightful Railroad Disaster.

An excursion train of twelve cars and two engines from Peoria, Ill., and one or more other cars coupled on at Bloomington, bound to Niagara falls, on the 10th inst. went through a culvert that had been weakened by a prairie fire, near Chattsworth, Ill., and both engines and ten cars were piled in a heap. The wreck took fire, but the flames were extinguished. The loss of life was appalling. In one car every person perished, and in another car all but one woman. A despatch in the afternoon from Peoria said 110 bodies had been taken from the wreck, and that between 150 and 200 wounded were being cared for.

Secretary Whitney is expected to arrive in this city to-day. The Atlanta is ordered to await his coming.

Charles N. Waite of Medford, Mass., assignor to the Avery Lactate Co. of this city, has been granted a patent for a process of lactate fermentation.

Good Credit.

The secretary of the treasury on the 10th inst. received the first proposals for the redemption of bonds under the terms of his recent circular. The total amount offered was only $5,462,000. When the government begs permission to give a ten per cent bonus for the privilege of paying twenty-six million dollars of its own debt before it is due, and its creditors will allow it to pay only five millions, the state of the country's credit may be said to be entirely beyond the comprehension of the average private debtor.

The Providence Journal says: "Mr. Powderly declares that the men who get up corners in food products are nothing less than public robbers. This is precisely the popular opinion of the attempt on the part of the Knights to gain control of the country's entire supply of labor, and hold it at an abitrary price."

The great army of needless officials was the burden of the democratic cry for nearly twenty years, while the republicans were in power. Once in power, all this is forgotten. In the New York custom house thirteen confidential clerks, at $2000 a year each, have been created to evade the civil service law, and 100 temporary weighers have been appointed outside of civil service regulations, who really are permanent. In one year the number of officials has been increased 107. In May, 1885, the expense of the weighers' department, under a republican collector, was $18,551; last May it was $50,914.

The decision of the Massachusetts railway commissioners in the case of the Boston & Maine railroad, against fixing distances arbitrarily, is made public.

Secretary Whitney denies the report that the regisnation of Chief Engineer Loring will be followed by the resignation of other heads of department.

A Perilous Postponement.

To postpone, when the duty for immediate action is clear, is always unwise. Especially is it so when increasing ill health calls for a resort to medication. Diseases of the kidneys and bladder are often of swift growth—always of fatal tendency if not combatted at the outset. We have all—even those of us who are not remarkably well instructed—heard something of the danger attending Bright's disease, diabetes, and other diseases of the kidneys or bladder. Let no one be foolhardy enough to procrastinate if he perceives the renal organs to be inactive. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are peculiarly adapted to overcome this inaction, to sufficiently stimulate, without exciting the kidneys and bladder. Infinitely is this diuretic to be preferred to the impure and fiery stimulants of commerce, which prove the bane of unwary persons with a tendency to renal troubles. They are likewise incomparable for dyspepsia, fever and ague, and billiousness.

Emery Wetherby, aged forty-five years, a Medway, Mass., farmer, was fatally gored in the left side by an enraged bull a few days ago.

If you are tired taking the large old-fashion griping pills, and are satisfied that purging yourself till you are weak and sick is not good common sense, then try Carter's Little Liver Pills and learn how easy it is to be free from biliousness, headache, constipation, and all liver troubles. These little pills are smaller, easier to take and give quicker relief than any pill in use. One a dose. Price twenty-five cents.

The treasury department coined $25,343,000 worth of silver into 33,266,000 silver dollars in the fiscal year ending June 30th.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

Secretary Bayard will deliver an address of welcome to the international medical congress which meets at Washington Sept. 5th.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quanties by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

Frederick Douglass arrived in New York on the 11th inst., from an extended European tour. He said to a reporter: "I have been abroad on a pleasure trip. I visited England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Italy, Greece and Egypt, and was most kindly received everywhere. I visited the French senate, and was most cordially treated. Nowhere, by a single word, a single look, was disapproval expressed of my color, or the kinks in my hair."

A woman who is weak, nervous and sleepless, and who has cold hands and feet, cannot feel and look like a well person. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness, and give strength and rest.

Reports from the interior of Wisconsin indicate that damage was done through a large section by a hurricane on the 9th inst. A number of persons were killed, and much property was destroyed.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 27th inst. In May, 1883, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became known in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong linitments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until less than the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN, Cayuga, Livingston Co., Ill.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and ulcerating the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinate suffering, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Suicide of Scorpions.

W. Curran writes to the Lancet: "Dr. Bourne's experiments on these creatures have been long since substantially discounted by me. My object in making experiments was to test Goldsmith's assertion that if a scorpion is placed in the midst of a circle of burning charcoal, it stings itself on the back of the head, and in this manner the undaunted suicide instantly expires.' It does nothing of the kind. As to Byron's more glowing description or episode:

The mind that broods o'er guilty woes
Is like the scorpion girt by fire.
* * * * * *
One sad and sole relief she knows—
The sting she nourished for her foes
Whose venom never yet was vain,
Gives but one pang and cures all pain.
And darts into her desperate brain;

and so, it would appear, shuffles off the mortal coil, along with all its throes and woes, etc.—again I say it does nothing of the kind. On the contrary, and as the outcome of hundreds of these experiments—experiments that were carried on by me in the presence or with the co-operation of a score or more of still living officers, not only at the Jumari ball practice ground at Cawnpore, but also in sundry hill and cholera camps elsewhere in India—I came to the conclusion that this belief or superstition was entirely erroneous. I came to the further conclusion that its poison was all but inert, not only on itself, but also on small birds, bees, etc.; and as to its own individual behavior in presence of fire, it was both stupid and cowardly. It either slunk away into any corner it could either make or find, or, moving about aimlessly within the circle, it either perished in the same or died without making any sign inside it."

A Simple Telephone.

Cut with a circle saw from an inch board two circular rims twelve inches in diameter, the open space in the center being seven inches in diameter, one of them for each end of the line. Then glue on one side of the rim four thicknesses of heavy manilla paper, drawing them as tightly as possible—it would also be well to drive in a few large-head carpet-tacks about an inch apart. On the other side of the rim glue on two thicknesses of paper, having in the center an opening three inches in diameter.

The wire to be used is copper, about the thickness of a knitting-needle. To fasten the wire to the poles, nail a short crosspiece to the top from which to tie the wire with a heavy cotton cord, leaving it loose enough so that the wire will not touch the wood. The opening in the side of the building should also be large enough not to interfere with the wire. Then make an opening in the center of the four thicknesses of paper barely large enough to receive the wire. Draw the wire tight and give it a few twists around a nail laid flatwise on the inner side of the paper. Between the back of the transmitter and the side of the room place near the edge four small blocks or spools. To call, tap on the nail with any small piece of iron. By this arrangement one can communicate from his house to that of a near neighbor with but small expense.

What the Queen Wanted.

One of the first things Queen Victoria did on hearing that William IV. was dead and that she had succeeded to the throne was to call one of her mother's ladies-in-waiting. "Am I really queen?" asked the excited princess. "You are, indeed, madame," replied the lady-in-waiting. "And I can do what I choose, by right?" continued Victoria. "Certainly, your majesty." "Then get me a cup of green tea. Mamma never would let me have it; now I mean to know what harm it can do me." And the young queen drank three cups, had a violent fit of the shivers and has never liked tea since.—The Argonaut.

The Tree Found the Knot-Hole.

A man dug a well twenty-five feet from a eucalyptus tree, lined it with cement, and placed over it a substantial cover. The water was carried to the house from the well in a wooden pipe. In that wooden pipe was a knot-hole. In time the well began to give out. The water, too, was acquiring a strange taste. Explorations developed the fact that the well had been filled up with masses of eucalyptus roots. The tree had run a root straight for the knot-hole, twenty-five feet off, and by that method gained the well itself.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Origin of a Once Popular Phrase.

"All right, De Santy." This once popular phrase, which is being revived in some quarters, originated as follows: In 1858, when the first Atlantic cable was laid, a few words were sent across before the break, which occurred almost immediately after the announcement of the success of the enterprise. One of the messages which came from Valencia, Ireland, in a response to how the wire was working, was: "All right, De Santy." De Santy was the operator's name, and that was the last word received through the cable before the parting of the wire. For months the words, "All right, De Santy," were rung from one end of the country to the other. The phrase was in every man's mouth, and was invariably employed whenever one wanted to say that a thing was all right, when in fact it was all wrong.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The Defence of Athens.

Some fastidious persons have expressed surprise that the mayor of a refined city like Boston should be present to do honor to a pugilist at a public presentation. Mayor O'Brien is apparently misunderstood. The defenceless condition of Boston harbor, brought to the notice of Congress last winter, is again the subject of solicitude. The Boston democrats say that were it not for Sam Randall, the forts would now be in a process of change to a proper condition, and hundreds of democrats could have a job. They see no hope that the condition of the forts will be changed while Randall rules the house of representatives in the interest of the tariff men. What is to be done? Mayor O'Brien has conferred with the leading democrats, and the result is, the representative of the city of Boston will tie to the champion pugilist as a proper means of defence. Should a hostile fleet arrive off the port of Boston, Sullivan will challenge the best man the English can produce to a combat upon one of the islands of Boston harbor. This mode of settling such controversies will be far more economical and speedy than would a bombardment of the town.

The Railroad Horror.

Further details of the awful disaster on the Toledo, Peoria & Western railway do not lessen its shocking character. The train of fifteen cars and two engines, with 960 passengers, was going nearly a mile a minute when the engineer of the first locomotive saw that the bridge, which was only fifteen feet long and ten feet high, was on fire; the train required a half mile in which to stop, and the bridge was close at hand. The first engine crossed the bridge and kept the rails, but the second engine went down. The bridge was all right about two hours before the excursion train reached it, and the shocking suspicion is suggested that it was fired by train wreckers. Many of the dead and dying were robbed, even before taken from the wreck. The exact number of killed and fatally hurt is not yet known, but is nearly or quite up to the first reports.

The "Great American Desert" was long ago found out to be a myth; and now some of the remotest corners which were once supposed to be included in it are proving to offer the largest promises of value for agricultural and grazing purposes. In New Mexico, for example, it has long been thought that certain immense areas must always be comparatively useless because of their natural aridity. But engineers have just completed plans for tapping the Rio Grande with a canal, and thus bringing under irrigation a tract some ten miles wide and a hundred and fifty long, containing nearly a million acres. The addition of so vast an area to the arable land of the territory means, of course, a large increase in the productive resources of that section. Other canals may possibly do as much. The work of sinking artesian wells is also going on there extensively, while the projected great storage reservoir, in which the rainfall of the wet season may be collected and from thence gradually distributed during the dry season, is already in serious contemplation by private enterprise. Modern scientific irrigation has already accomplished wonders for the agriculture of Utah; it seems likely to do even more for New Mexico. So long, of course, as there was an abundance of unoccupied farming land in Kansas, Nebraska and thereabouts, it mattered little what possibilities might exist elsewhere. But now that population is beginning to crowd these states the promise that is offered from the remote southwest is important.

Fifty striking miners of the Alden Coal company, near Wilkesbarre, Pa., attacked thirty men who took their places in the Alden mines. Two men were killed and fifteen injured.

The Result of Criminal Clemency.

The lynching of a murderer at Kosciusko, Miss., yesterday, is only a result of the unfortunate and mistaken sentiment that seems so generally to beset the executives of states. It has been long the policy of those high officials to station themselves at the foot of the gallows or at the door of the prison and there undo all the work of the courts of justice. This sort of thing has come almost to be a rule of official conduct with many governors, some of whom have gone to the extent of releasing criminals under indictment before they could be brought to trial. As a consequence bad men are encouraged to acts of violence, and on the other hand good and law-abiding citizens, despairing of securing the punishment of evil-doers and the vindication of the laws even after judges and juries have done their duty, have been impelled to rise up and with violence which they deprecate counteract criminal clemency. There is no other way to maintain order but by a stern and impartial execution of the laws. When the governor of a state habitually expresses his profound contempt for the courts of his commonwealth, who can expect the people to respect the laws?—N. O. Picayune.

Russian advances in the direction of Bokhara continue, and the greatest military activity is reported to prevail all along the Afghan frontier. Russian troops are also moving toward Badakshan, with the evident intention of pushing through Chinese Turkistan and Kafiristan to a position near Cabul.

Mr. JOHN W. FURBUSH,

An Army Veteran,

who has probably suffered more than any man or woman in Essex to-day. Taken sick while in the Army, he has endured untold agonies since. Describing his first symptoms he said: "My head ached and my appetite was poor, I felt a faintness at the pit of the stomach, and a bad taste in my mouth, while my skin was sometimes hot and sometimes cold. I next felt pains in my back and around the lower portion of my body, and noticed a peculiar odor and color in the water I passed, which was scanty at one time and free at others. Sometimes it pained me to void it, and again it was almost impossible to do so at all. Finally I began to pass clear blood accompanied with the greatest strain and agony."

No less than 24 eminent physicians attended Mr. Furbush at various times, but not one of them could help him. He was near death's door. And yet he says: "I am alive and well to-day, wholly through the wonderful power of Hunt's Remedy, which took me from the verge of the grave."

SEEING THE ATLANTA.

Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen went down the harbor by the 3:30 trip of the steamer James Sampson on Friday afternoon. At Newcastle a number of others from Dr. Lee's cottage and the vicinity came on board. When the steamer came up to the gangway of the Atlanta, the order came down that the crew were cleaning ship, and none could be admitted on board. Capt. Carpenter of the navy (whose wife and daughters were with him) stepped upon the grating, and said something to the officer, who communicated the message to the quarter deck. Soon the intelligence was received that the decks were very wet, but if visitors would take their chances they would be allowed to come aboard. The result was that about forty or fifty persons, many of them ladies, clad, if not in purple and fine linen, neatly and in fine trim, ascended the ladder and picked their way about the decks, where heaps of sand were being deluged with water flowing from hose or dashed about by the shellbacks. The coaling of the ship had just been completed, and she was being scrubbed, soused, swashed, swabbed and scraped preparatory to being got in ship shape and Bristol fashion, to sail at high twelve on Saturday for Bar Harbor. Some of the visitors gathered up their flowing robes, cautiously progressed about the deluged decks, and pretended to admire everything. Capt. Carpenter and his family made a call upon Capt. Bunce, and others found friends or acquaintances on board. The officers in charge were courteous to the visitors, and explained the mode of firing the various guns, while regretting that so much salt water was swashing about the decks. Every one of course secured a pair of wet feet, and at four o'clock all gladly availed themselves of the opportunity to regain terra firma after a short return trip by the James Sampson. The Atlanta is so entirely different from any other naval vessel that she cannot be compared with any other craft afloat. What may be her powers of execution in a fight of course is only for the experts to conjecture. We can only say that she was not successful in the attempt to repel boarders Friday afternoon.

BURNED BY LIGHTNING.

The barn of Mr. Owen Pettigrew, of Spruce creek, Kittery, was struck by lightning during the shower last Thursday afternoon, and was burned to the ground, together with the contents, consisting of eighteen tons of hay, a bull, pigs, hens and farming tools. Loss estimated at about $500; insurance $200, in Kittery & Eliot Mutual Co.

ALMOST A DISASTER.

The Dover Democrat of the 10th inst. said: "There is considerable talk about town this afternoon to the effect that the extra train from here this morning, which should have passed the morning train from Portland at Wells, did not do so, and kept on. When near Cole's corner they saw the express coming, and both engineers whistled for brakes, applied the air brakes and stopped the trains, the engines being within seven feet of each other. At the depot nothing can be found to bear out the statements. One young man was found who runs on the train, who says that he was on the extra, and that the express passed them at Wells, but refused to say anything else about it. One of the baggage masters here says, 'All I know about it is, some one will probably take a vacation.'"

Concerning this matter a despatch of the 11th from Saco says: "There was a narrow escape yesterday from a frightful accident on the western division of the Boston & Maine, west of Biddeford. The Boston-bound morning train had orders to cross two excursion trains, one at North Berwick, the other at Maryland Ridge. The former crossing was effected according to orders, but the engineer forgot the second train, and as a result the express and excursion trains soon found themselves facing each other on the same track. Fortunately it was on a straight piece of road, and the trains sighted each other in time to stop before they came together. Had the meeting taken place on a curve the result would have been too awful for contemplation, as the excursion train was literally packed with humanity. The engineer of the express train has been suspended."

MARITIME NOTES.

Mr. Henry W. Gardner, recently employed in the Portsmouth Electric Light Co., has gone with Capt. Clark of the schooner Gurnet, as mate. The Gurnet was towed to the lower harbor on Thursday afternoon, with 97,000 bricks on board, bound for Boston.

On the 9th inst., while yachting between Whale's-back light and the Isles of Shoals, Irving Cressey of Dover, who was with his brother-in-law, Samuel Hale of South Berwick, was accidentally thrown overboard, and came near being drowned before he was rescued.

Mr. John Good of New York, who bought the steamer Appledore from the Laighton Brothers last spring, for $7500 we think, has just refused an offer of $15,000 for the same. From this it would seem that the staunch old boat is better appreciated in New York waters than when she was here.

In the Marblehead races on the 11th inst. the Volunteer beat the Puritan ten minutes, the Atlantic eight, the Priscilla ten and the Mayflower twelve; the latter was beaten by the other four sloops, both by actual and corrected time. The Volunteer took the Herald cup and $250, and the Puritan took the second prize, $50, on time allowance. The Sachem took the first prize for schooners, and the Iroquois second prize. The Huron and Gracie were winners of the prizes for second class sloops, and the Ziquemar was winner in the third class.

The yacht Wm. H. Russell, Captain Drowne, arrived at this port Friday afternoon at four o'clock from Marblehead, which place she left at five o'clock that morning. She had light and unfavorable winds on the passage from this port to Marblehead on the night of the 10th inst., but was within three miles of the starting point when the racing boats were started, and her passengers had an excellent view of the race. Only five of her passengers came back in her, the rest landing at Marblehead on the evening of the 11th, and returning home by rail.

The Ocean house at York beach supplied 162 persons with dinner last Sunday, exclusive of the attaches of the hotel. Messrs. Ellis & Sons will greatly enlarge the house before the opening of next season's summer travel.

A horse belonging to Mr. Joseph Kimball of Beech ridge, York, drooped dead on the post road on the 9th inst. The animal was going along all right, appearing to be perfectly well, and suddenly dropped as if shot, or struck by lightning.

The summer home for the occupants of the Baldwin Place Home for Little Wanderers, Boston, built on the Nathan Goodwin place, East Eliot, near Frost's hill, by Prof. Moses G. Farmer, is nearly completed; it is now in the hands of the painters, and is expected to be finished in about three weeks. The idea of creating such an institution was a noble one in its inception, and is being carried out with munificent liberality.

George Littlefield, twenty-two years old, committed suicide by shooting on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at Wells, Me. He was suffering from typhoid fever, and was temporarily insane. He escaped from his attendants, procured a revolver, and shot himself through the head. He died from the wound that night. He was a jeweller, and was unmarried.

Thomas Witham of Deerfield, a butcher, was arrested Thursday afternoon and arraigned before Justice Drury of Epping, on complaint of the state agent of the New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, on a charge of having cruelly killed a calf by slowly bleeding it to death, to obtain "white veal." Witham pleaded nolo contendere, and was ordered to pay fine and costs to an amount that spoiled the profit on his "white veal," and will be a lesson for him in the future.

—Proud father: "Welcome back to the old farm, my boy. So you got through college all right?" Farmer's son: "Yes, father." "Ye know I told ye to study up on chemistry and things so you'd know best what to do with different kinds of land. What do you think of that flat medder there, for instance?" "Cracky, what a place for a ball game!"

FOR SALE AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL BY

Charles E. Laighton & Son.

On Thursday evening the Nonpareil club room on Daniel street was the scene of a very pleasant entertainment. There were present a considerable number of the members of the club and numerous guests, and amusement for the company was furnished by the talented members, who rendered both instrumental and character songs, and recitations, in which they were assisted by Prof. LaBrie, who presided at the piano. There was also some very good dancing, at intervals, which, with the excellent music, made up an interesting programme. The event of the evening, however, was a presentation to one of the members, Mr. Willis E. Chase, who has just taken to himself a wife, and his companions have seen fit to contribute one more comfort in the shape of a massive and elegant easy chair. The presentation was made by Mr. John Magraw in a very appropriate manner, to which Mr. Chase responded as well as his feelings would allow.—Times.

General Manager Furber of the Boston & Maine road says most of the railroad travel in New Hampshire is on a two-cent mileage basis, and the law fixing that limit on roads paying ten per cent dividends, will increase travel sufficiently to make up for the loss from any reduction.

Carrier Pigeon Service.

Three homing pigeons released at Block Island one day last week reached Fall River, Mass., within forty minutes. One of these is the bird that carried the news last year of the time of the yachts in rounding the buoy off Block Island. From the time the bird was liberated until the item appeared in print upon the streets of Fall River was only forty-seven minutes. These birds have covered long distances, two flying from Montgomery, Ala., to Fall River, 1040 miles in an air line, a distance probably not exceeded by any other pigeon in the world.

If you are tired taking the large old-fashion griping pills, and are satisfied that purging yourself till you are weak and sick is not good common sense, then try Carter's Little Liver Pills and learn how easy it is to be free from biliousness, headache, constipation, and all liver troubles. These little pills are smaller, easier to take and give quicker relief than any pill in use. One a dose. Price twenty-five cents.

A Wolfeboro despatch of Aug. 11th is as follows: "The citizens at a meeting last night voted to rebuild the shoe factory burned yesterday morning. The prospects are fair that the building will be ready for operation by the first of January. A despatch was received from Messrs. Cropley & Munroe of Marblehead, Mass., within fifteen hours from the time of the destruction of their property to the amount of $100,000, assuring citizens of this town that they would continue the business here if they would rebuild the factory. Twelve buildings were entirely consumed, and nothing in the stock or machinery from the factory was saved."

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

The farmers' festival and grange picnic at Garrison hill, Dover, on the afternoon of the 11th inst., under the auspices of the Eastern New Hampshire Pomona Grange, was largely attended by farmers and their families. A heavy rain proved a big damper to the proceedings. Dinner was served in the skating rink on the hill, and there were after-dinner speeches by many well known grangers, on various agricultural topics.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

At Dover, Aug. 11th, Alice E. Gray, a young married woman, aged eighteen, whose husband is a Chicago actor, and who has aspirations for the stage herself, reported to City Marshal Fogarty that her uncle, Charles Gray, attempted criminal assault on her the previous night. After she preferred the charge she went to Haverhill, saying she would be back on Saturday to prosecute her uncle.

In a speech at the mayor's annual banquet in London, Lord Salisbury intimated that the National League would be proclaimed.

Master of the Steamship Kanawha.

About a year ago he observed a strange change in his feelings. He felt tired instead of vigorous; nervous instead of strong. His appetite became poor and his sleep broken. He tried to overcome these feelings, but they would not go. He then noticed pains and irritation in the water channels, and that the fluids passed were often thick and with a scum on top or a brick-dust sediment at the bottom. All these were the sure symptoms of that fearful disease, Catarrh of the Bladder, which has always been considered incurable, and they continued until the Captain was in a terrible condition. But he is the picture of health and vigor to-day, and he owes it entirely to that wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy. Capt. Greenwood says: "I am so certain of the great value of Hunt's Remedy, that I always carry a supply on shipboard for the use of my men, and I prescribe it whenever they are ailing. After curing me as it did, and restoring my wife, (whom the best physicians of New York said was dying of tumor,) to perfect health, I swear by it."

This Great Remedy absolutely cures all Kidney Liver and Urinary Diseases.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 28th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be due to an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assails the membranous lining and envelopes the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

George Westinghouse, the air-brake man, has taken out about 1,200 patents. A few of these are upon devices which he purchased from their inventors, but the great majority were original inventions and improvements. For the last two or three years natural gas and electricity have furnished the two great fields in which he has labored.

Someone has suggested the origin of the application of the term "barge" to picnic wagons. The use of the word originated in Salem or Marblehead, where old-time sleighing parties used to hire a big boat sleigh called "Cleopatra's Barge." The transfer of name in a nautical town to all boat sleighs followed naturally, and the custom easily extended.

The Duchess d'Alencon, who has recently become insane, used to be as accomplished an equestrian, as is her sister, the Empress of Austria. Ex-Governor William Sprague is residing in retirement at Canonchet, his palatial home near Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, the sole remnant of his once vast fortune. His financial circumstances are not such as to maintain the place in its former grandeur, and its deserted corridors and silent halls must be a suggestive wandering place for the moody and eccentric war Governor.

Experiments are believed to show that aseptol, or orthoponot-sulphate, is destined to take the place of carbolic acid as a disinfectant and antiseptic. It is a sirupy, brown fluid of aromatic odor, and soluble in alcohol, glycerine, and water, and is not irritating in as strong as 10 per cent. solutions. As an antiseptic it is said to equal carbolic acid, while possessing also the advantage of pleasant odor, more solubility, etc.

Mrs. Nelson McCormick, of North Branch, Michigan, has made a dress the like of which is probably not to be found in this state. The material is common spool thread, white, and the entire dress is hand-crotcheted work, beautifully flowered and strong, and 10,000 yards of thread were used in its construction. The sleeves are crotcheted in the proper shape and are fastened in by a lock crotcheted stitch. It is very beautiful, and Mrs. McCormick was six months completing it.

The superstitious negroes of South Macon, Georgia, have been much disturbed over the peculiar condition of one of their number who had been in the business of cow-minding in the swamps below the city. His name was Jackson, and he was taken violently ill some time ago, and eventually died of a strange and peculiar malady. The negroes aver that during his illness, while raging in delirium, he constantly "lowed like a cow," and made other noises suggestive of bovine associations.

A Country of Roses.

Bulgaria, the little country in Europe which we hear so much about of late, is a veritable rose-garden in itself. In no part of the world, says Vick's Magazine, has the cultivation of the rose come so near perfection as in this small state, and, although the soil and atmosphere of the country has much to do with the successs of the work, the native inhabitants have made such a long and careful study of the plant and its needs that they have created wonders out of their fields of blooming roses. As is well known, the flowers are grown there for the purpose of extracting the precious aroma known as "attar of rose," but this circumstance does not detract in the least from the appearance of the roses. The bushes require considerable care and attention, and they are seldom allowed to attain a height of over six feet.

In the great rose gardens where the flowers are raised for manufacturing the "attar of rose," the bushes are seldom grafted or budded. The roots forming the bushes of a young rose garden are taken from the old bushes and carefully buried with plenty of manure where they send up young shoots. These reach their full growth in about five years, and for fifteen years will yield large crops of roses. When an old bed begins to fail the bushes are cut away and new shoots allowed to spring up, or the whole field plowed up and roots from another bed set out in their place. A successful rose-grower keeps several rose gardens at all times in different stages of development, so that when one garden begins to be unproductive another one is about ready to come in. The roses blossom in the latter part of May, when all the neighborhood is employed in picking them and getting them to the distillery.

In addition to the great industry of extracting the precious aroma from the roses, the inhabitants of Bulgaria make quite a business of exporting rose slips and roots to different countries. The facility with which the roses grow in the fertile valleys of that country make it a profitable business to raise the bushes for market. The cuttings for buds are sent hundreds of miles packed in long grass and surrounded with straw disposed longitudinally.

A Remarkable Well.

A very interesting event has occured near Parkersburg, W. Va. A well has been sunk to the depth of thirty feet on a mountain-side farm in that vicinity, and the water in it registers the rise and fall in a stream a thousand feet below in the valley. Such is the information, at least, which is given to the world through the press dispatches. The heads of the neighboring farmers have been scratched until they are tender, but without producing a solution of the problem as to why the well water should rise and fall in unison with that of the river.

At this distance it would appear that when it rains the river rises, and that the well supplies in a like manner are simultaneously reinforced. It would be well for one of the puzzled rustic philosophers to build a temporary dam in the river in a dry season, and then if the water in the well a thousand feet up the mountain side rises as the dam fills he may report progress and we will call some Bunsbyan intellect into the field and settle the matter.—Ex.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

At Woodstock, Va., Aug. 12th, United States Senator Riddleberger was committed to jail and fined $25 by Judge Newman, for contempt of court. A placard was paraded on the street reflecting on the judge in a case in which Senator Riddleberger was interested.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, the will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. Portsmouth Chronicle.

MONDAY, AUGUST 15, 1887.

Entered at the Post-Office at Portsmouth, N. H. as second-class matter.

☞ Copies of the GAZETTE and of the DAILY CHRONICLE can be had of Moses Brothers, at their Newspaper Store in Congress Block.

The Boston Post is decidedly too mugwumpish for a democratic organ. When Higgins and a half-dozen other federal officials left their duties in Washington, and went to Baltimore to direct the roughs how to run the democratic primary meetings in the interest of Gorman, Higgins, Cleveland and reform, the Post loudly demanded their instant dismissal by the civil-service-reform administration, on the ground that their conduct was as outrageous and unblushingly shameless as the worst that was ever even charged by the democrats against the republican federal officials in the way of interfering with local politics. The Post's language was earnest and plain; but the Eugene Higginses won't go, for all that. They are needed to run things so that the voters of their states in the democratic national convention shall be solid for Cleveland, a second term, and reform; Higgins and his pals will stay.

Boston has a democratic city government; the saloons, with the assistance of the blue-bloods, run that city at present. The mayor lends the countenance of his presence to the public glorification of a low-lived bruiser; and when the streets are torn up in the most reckless manner, and graveyards invaded and desecrated by corporations favored by the city government, nobody seems to know of any remedy. The Post does not like it, and remarks:

If the mayor is still unable, as reported, to find any city department within whose province it comes to guard the city's property in water mains and sewers from injury by the wholesale excavations now making in the streets, he is evidently in just the position to use the authority which the amended charter confers upon him. By this instrument he is endowed with the entire executive powers of the city government, in every capacity, and the control of every one of the departments. The board of aldermen is responsible for turning over our streets to the use of the private corporations, whose requests for privileges have been granted so freely and quietly, without unpleasant publicity or debate, during the past season, but the mayor is clearly responsible for the manner in which these very liberal concessions are availed of. If the heads of departments cannot decide which of them ought to look after the several matters in question, the mayor can make the decision very quickly, order the establishment of supervision or restraint, and compel a respect for the property rights of the city in case they are endangered.

Naval Intelligence.

Chief Engrs. A. H. Able and Cipriano Andrade are ordered to special duty at Cramp & Sons' shipyards, in connection with the new cruisers.

Comdr. William M. Whitehead has reported his return home, having been detached from command of the Taliapoosa, and is placed on waiting orders.

Albert M. Stahl has been appointed an assistant naval constructor.

The flagship Richmond of the North Atlantic squadron, also the Galena and Ossipee, arrived at Bar Harbor on the 13th inst.

The vote of 104 Kentucky counties for Buckner, democratic candidate for governor, is 127,265, and all others 126,726. Majority for Buckner, 539. There were five more counties to be heard from on Saturday.

Secretary Bayard thinks the Canadians are disposed to act fairly, and hopes the fishery dispute will soon be settled. Sec. Bayard has more confidence in the Canadians than the American fishermen have in Sec. Bayard.

General Clinton B. Fisk, the prohibition leader of New Jersey, denies emphatically the democratic story that he has been predicting Cleveland's re-election in 1888.

A Guide For The Afflicted.

The following letter will show the way to health to many a down-hearted man and woman:

MORAVIA, CAYUGA CO., N. Y., January, 15, 1886.—I have been afflicted for some years with liver complaint, accompanied with dyspepsia and prolonged constipation. I was almost in depair, when I commenced using Brandreth's Pills. I took a course of them for a week—five or six pills every night. I found myself very much better, but to make everything all sure, continued to take one pill a night for over a month. I am now in a very fair state of health, and I know I shall continue so as long as I take one of Brandreth's Pills a night.

H. S. R. MATHER.

A west-bound express train on the Southern Pacific railroad was run off a switch near Papago, about fifteen miles east of Tucson, Arizona, Wednesday night of last week, by four masked men. The engine was ditched, and the express car robbed of about $3,500. The robbery occurred at the same point where a west-bound express was robbed in April last.

The Masonic Temple, Hamilton block, Campbell & Dick's carpet warehouse, and a number of tenements, at Pittsburg, Pa., were burned Aug. 12th; loss $1,000,000. The fire was caused by a match thrown into a waste basket, after lighting a cigar.

A gang of murderers has just been arrested at Pirot, Bulgaria. Their victims during the past two years number sixty. Disguised as gendarmes, the assassins pretended to arrest travellers for various offences, and then robbed and killed them. A deputy of the prefect of Pirot was the first person arrested for complicity in the crimes. It is believed that political motives led to the commission of some of the murders. Two French newspaper men and Prince Alexander's groom were among the victims. An official committee of inquiry has been despatched to Pirot.

Mrs. May Allen, of Palmer, Mass., cook at the Nassowanno house, was fatally burned last week. It is not known how her clothes caught fire, but every garment was burned off except her corset.

At Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 12th, a shell exploded at the Waxholm fort, which commands the approach to the city, killing nineteen men and wounding many others, including three officers.

Floods have caused a loss of 500,000 barrels of rice in South Carolina.

At Newport, R. I., Aug. 12th, a house on the outskirts of the city, occupied by Carl Lorson, a Swede, was struck by lightning, and his twelve-year-old son, who was standing in a hall, was instantly killed. The lightning left no mark on the child.

Capt. Andrew H. Young, acting quartermaster, is ordered to proceed from Columbus barracks, Ohio, to Johnson's island, on public business.

Owing to the Telephone Co.'s switch board having been burned out by lightning a week ago, the company is unable just at present to do the best service; but the apparatus will soon be in good condition, on the arrival of the new board.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Says the Penny Post: "We understand that the new city government is considering the advisability of having a special officer appointed to attend all entertainments at Music hall, independent of the regular force. A good idea, gentlemen." We heartily second the motion. There is nothing the tax-payers are more ready to pay for than police protection, and that, for several years past, has not been what was demanded in Music hall, where the hoodlum element has had a great deal too much sway. Give us, Messrs. City Fathers, an efficient officer at Music hall—half a dozen, if one is not enough—and there will be no complaint on the part of those who have to pay the cost. But let them be efficient.

MARITIME NOTES.

Two famous yachts, the sloop Priscilla and the schooner Gitana, arrived in the lower harbor Sunday afternoon, on their way to Bar Harbor.

All the letting boats on the river were out at an early hour Sunday morning, and at ten o'clock nothing in the shape of a boat could be procured at any price.

The schooner St. Thomas, from Philadelphia, with 1141 tons of coal to J. Albert Walker, arrived at this port on the 12th inst. A schooner that carries a thousand tons dead weight is now a very common affair, and creates no interest at all; but it was not so a few years ago.

The yacht Dauntless, which raced the Coronet across the Atlantic, arrived at Halifax, N. S., Aug. 12th, from Flores, Azores. She was twelve days on the passage, and experienced two furious cyclones below the banks, being driven before them under bare poles for some hours at a time, but suffering no injury. The yacht was to sail for Boston on the 13th.

Last Friday afternoon a steam launch from the U. S. S. Atlanta, then at anchor in the lower harbor, started from the navy yard with three boats in a string tow, two of them being loaded with supplies, and the rear one with fresh water in bulk, for washing purposes on board the ship. When the tow shot from the Seavey's island eddy into the current of the strong flood tide at the narrows, the water-logged boat quickly but gracefully turned bottom up, pouring out the fresh water and two seamen who were in charge of the boat. The men were picked up, and the boat beached on Peirce's island, where she was righted and cleared of water, and later taken in tow again for the ship. The narrows is about as easy a place as we know of (barring Portsmouth bridge) in which to capsize a boat, and when she is down to the gunwales with water it should be no trouble at all. The Atlanta sailed for Bar Harbor on Saturday, but the U. S. S. Despatch remained at anchor in the lower harbor over Sunday.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The train of the York Harbor & Beach railroad which left this city on Saturday evening ran though to Union Bluff. Celebration—jolly evening at the Bluff—pyrotechnics—tableaux!

Charles Welch, a brakeman on the North Berwick freight train which left Boston over the Boston & Maine western division last Thursday forenoon, was instantly killed between Andover and Lawrence, Mass., by striking an overhead bridge.

A Concord despatch of last Friday says: "It is given out on good authority that yesterday some of the leaders of the Boston & Maine movement, among whom are Frank Jones and Charles A. Sinclair, signed a bond to immediately construct a railroad from Alton Bay along Lake Winnipesaukee to Laconia, to be called the Lake Shore railroad, in case a charter is granted by the present legislature. In case of failure to build, the forfeiture is supposed to be about $30,000. This is regarded as a shrewd move on the part of the Boston & Maine people, as a charter was granted about two years ago to those now identified on the side of the Concord road, and no step toward construction has ever been taken. Sagacious politicians think that this move will undoubtedly gain votes for the Hazen bill from the lake section of the state."

The hearing on the petition for a change of the ward lines in this city was held in the common council room Saturday afternoon, before a legislative committee consisting of Representatives William Conn, T. F. Cronin and George B. French of this city, Warren Brown of Hampton Falls and John Templeton of Exeter, the first-named three being democrats, and the other two republicans. Mr. Conn was chosen chairman, and Mr. Templeton clerk. Samuel W. Emery, Calvin Page, Alderman Daniel J. Ayers and others appeared in opposition to any change in the ward lines, and Wm. O. Sides, Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., and others, in favor of the change. Many pertinent, and not a few impertinent, statements were made on one side or the other; but no great public interest in the bill was manifested, judging from the attendance on the hearing.

The latest issue of Harper's Weekly contains a collection of engravings under the head of "A bit of New Hampshire coast," which includes pictures of Hampton and Rye beaches, Portsmouth harbor and the Isles of Shoals. The price of a copy is ten cents, and it is for sale by Moses Brothers and M. Goodrich.

Mr. Dennis Lynes, for the past three years driver of one of the city teams, and of the fire department supply wagon, was on Saturday superceded by Mr. Fred J. Haddock, a member of the common council from ward one. There is no charge against Mr. Lynes, so far as we know; but a democratic wire-puller wanted his place, and has got it.

The strike at the Portsmouth Shoe factory is about over; the company on Saturday had forty lasters at work, and all the cutters are called in for to-day. The parties who deal in the products of the company are ready to give any accommodation needed, but no accommodation is demanded.

De Witt Clinton Commandery of Knights Templar have a meeting this evening, to take action in regard to the visit of Calvary Commandery of Providence, R. I.

The help of the Farragut and Sea View houses at Rye drove to this city on Saturday evening in a "tally-ho" of their own, improvised from a hayrack and drawn by four horses. On arriving here they scattered about the city, mustering again on Market square shortly after midnight, and embarking for home. They were a merry and thoroughly well behaved party.

It is said the "children's day" gathering on the Free Baptist grounds at Ocean park, Old Orchard, Aug. 10th, was the greatest ever known there. Large excursion parties arrived on all the railroads, about 200 going from this city and vicinity. At two o'clock in the afternoon a mass meeting was held in the temple, but hundreds were unable to get in. Sawyer's band, of Dover, furnished music. At night the hotels and cottages were illuminated, and fireworks were set off at various points.

Mr. Editor: I wish publicly to express my gratification at the prompt rebuke administered to one of the drivers of one of the city express teams Friday afternoon. The man became angry because the horse left his standing place and walked off toward the drinking fountain at the post-office. No harm was done, and no inconvenience was caused, but the driver lost his temper; when he overtook the team and mounted the box he gave the poor old horse several very severe cuts with a heavy whip. The sound of the merciless blows attracted the attention of the agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the driver was promptly arrested.

LADIES!

My FRENCH Regulation Pills never fail. Try them. Relieve pain, insure regularity; safe and effectual; far superior to Tansy, Pennyroyal or Apiol. Price $1 per box, or three boxes for $2, sent sealed on receipt of price. Correspondence confidential. Address DR. B. H. LOWE, Winsted, Conn.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quanties by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

—"I used to be a silver speculator," said a tramp who was brought before an Ohio judge the other day. "Did you ever 'salt' a mine?" asked his honor. "No, sir. I never had to go to that trouble. I simply got out a map showing a hole in the ground somewhere, and there was always some man around ready to bite."

Marshall Hall's

Ready method in drowning, as to what to do and how to do it, will be found in Dr. Kaufman's Medical Work; fine colored plates from life. Send three two-cent stamps, to pay postage, to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

—A man unacquainted with the modern system of piping houses, went into a shop, during the recent hot wave, and turned the faucet to get a drink of water. He got the wrong faucet and did not discover his mistake until he had taken a good swallow of hot water. Dropping his glass in a hurry he exclaimed: "Great heavens. I knew it was a hot day, but I didn't think it would heat the water like that!"

Get rid of that tired feeling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

—"How old are you, my son?" asked an old gentleman of a "tot" who was celebrating his birthday. "I'm four," was the reply, "and I'm mighty glad of it; I was getting very tired of being three all the time."

Better Than Vacation.

This is pre-eminently the vacation month, when thousands seek rest and recreation. But to those who suffer the depressing effects of summer debility, the disagreeable symptoms of scrofula, the tortures of billiousness, dyspepsia, or sick headache, there is more pain than pleasure in leaving home. To such we say, give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial It will purify your blood, tone up and strengthen your body, expel every trace of scrofula, correct billiousness, and positively cure dyspepsia of sick headache. Take it before you go, and you will enjoy your vacation a thousand fold.

—There must be something awful the matter with this country. It consumes about $22,000,000 worth of patent medicines yearly. The "hair restorers" alone are enough to cover the whole of New England with a crop of hair ten feet high, and as thick as a cane brake, and yet New England is bald-headed to a pitiable degree.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. mon, wed, sat.g

Master of the Steamship Kanawha.

About a year ago he observed a strange change in his feelings. He felt tired instead of vigorous, nervous instead of strong. His appetite became poor and his sleep broken. He tried to overcome these feelings, but they would not go. He then noticed pains and irritation in the water channels, and that the fluids passed were often thick and with a scum on top or a brick-dust sediment at the bottom. All these were the sure symptoms of that fearful disease, Catarrh of the Bladder, which has always been considered incurable, and they continued until the Captain was in a terrible condition. Just be in the picture of health and vigor to-day, and he owes it entirely to that wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy. Capt. Greenwood says: "I am so certain of the great value of Hunt's Remedy, that I always carry a supply on shipboard for the use of my men, and I prescribe it whenever they are ailing. After curing me as it did, and restoring my wife, (whom the best physicians of New York said was dying of tumor,) to perfect health, I swear by it."

This Great Remedy absolutely cures all Kidney Liver and Urinary Diseases.

For sale by all Dealers.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

Elbert Fairbanks, of East Greenwich, Mass., was killed on the railroad near that town last Thursday.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," so they all say, and their husbands say so too!

Patrick Barrett, a wealthy farmer and selectman of Underhill, Vt., was drowned last Friday while bathing at Pleasant Valley. He was sixty-five years of age.

Will be found an excellent remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

The Catholic church at St. Paul, Iowa, was totally destroyed by a cyclone which swept over that section Saturday evening.

If sick headache is misery, what are Carter's Little Liver Pills if they will positively cure it? People who have used them speak frankly of their worth. They are small and easy to take.

In the same pew in church at Des Moines, Ia., sit each Sabbath two women, one of whom is the widow of four ministers, the other the widow of three ministers.

Housekeepers who fail to acquaint themselves with the value of James Pyle's Pearline in the kitchen and laundry deprive themselves of the most convenient and useful article of the age.

In Hebron township, S. C., a few days ago, during a severe storm, the house of a resident was so filled with electricity that an invalid was cured by it.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," so they all say, and their husbands say so too!

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN, Cayuga, Livingston Co., Ill.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this fourth day of January, 1887. C. N. COE, J. P.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

Last spring I was very sick, being covered with some kind of scrofula. The doctors could not help me. I was advised to try the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I did so, and in a day I grew better and better, until I am as well as ever. I thank you for it very much, and would like to have it told to the public. EDW. HOFMANN, North Attleboro, Mass.

SKIN DISEASE CURED.

Mr. Frank McClusky says that your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured his boy of a skin disease after several doctors had failed to help the boy. He spent over one hundred dollars with doctors. CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him. J. E. TIFFANY, Pleasant Mount, Pa.

CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and CUTICURA SOAP prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT the new blood purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price: CUTICURA, 50 cents; CUTICURA SOAP, 35 cents; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1.00. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, ruining the brain and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient and all allegiance and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

ELASTIC STARCH

The First and Only Starch put up by men who have a practical knowledge of the laundry profession. It requires no cooking, keeps the iron from sticking and then from blistering the ironing, and gives shirts, collars and cuffs that stiffness and beautiful polish they have when new, which everybody sees, feels and admires. Ask your grocer for it. Beware of imitations. See that the name of J. S. HUTCHINS & SONS, New Haven, Conn., is on every package. SOLD BY ALL GROCERS.

Some Feminine Peculiarities.

When I was a girl mothers were an object of veneration to me, and now, as one of the vast army of them, I like to continue the study of their peculiarities of character. Veneration still stands first on the list of sentiments for them, but, alas! how many another feeling is aroused during the study—amazement, pity, anger, and sometimes disgust.

I remember sitting one day in my nursery by the crib where my boy lay napping, when an intimate friend appeared at the door, and entering sank into a chair.

"What's the matter, Mrs. R.," I inquired.

"Why, Pet is dead."

"Your pretty horse?"

"Yes, beautiful animal? It is always so with me."

"How do you mean?"

"Why; of course it is my handsomest horse. It was the same with my children. I lost the beautiful one—the others all lived."

I looked up in astonishment, and then and there true veneration in the case resigned its place to amazement, and yet that woman was the mother of several well-looking, finely-formed, healthy children—the ones that would not die.

Again, one lovely summer day, on the way to my room at the hotel where I was boarding, I passed the bath-room, the door of which was wide open, there in the direct draught 'twixt door and window stood Bridget, a really good-natured though "green" Irish girl, holding a baby under the warm water faucet.

"Oh, Bridget, you will hurt the baby!" I exclaimed.

"Niver a hurt. Shure I soaps her first and then renses her off." (Keeping up a swinging motion with the baby all the time that made me dizzy).

"Doesn't she ever cry?"

"Not a whimper, the darlint."

And no wonder. Her eyes were closed, and she looked drawn and white about the mouth, while the rest of the body was more than rosy from the water, that came, of course, warmer and warmer.

Veneration again took her leave, and pity reigned instead, for when I told the baby's young mother, she was aghast and only too glad to have Bridget taught better ways. What I wonder is, how she could, as the children say, "trust to luck" as to how her baby should be bathed and lose the pleasure of giving it a bath herself.

Veneration has fled repeatedly from the presence of disgust when I have heard the all-too-common sentence "I trust my nurse implicitly."

Acupuncture.

Shampooing, acupuncture, or piercing of the body with needles, and the burning of moxas on the skin, have from the earliest times formed the staple of Japanese surgical skill. The blind and dumb have always been educated in the first two, and have acquired extraordinary skill as shampooers in many muscular and intestinal complaints. They are allowed to combine music and money-lending with their main calling, and go about toward evening with a low whistle for a street cry. The best of these shampooers know all the superficial muscles, and their services are called in for headache, hysteria, and paralysis. Degrees, too, were conferred on them, with ceremonial robes and white wands surmounted by wooden balls. The medical school, established A. D. 669, had a professor of shampooing with ten pupils, and another of acupuncture with twenty. In 820 five acupuncturists were attached to the imperial palace, being paid by the month, and obliged to keep up their knowledge of their own subject as well as of the pulse, surgery, botany, and prescribing, by studying particular books. Acupuncture is not an invention of the Japanese, the first treatise on it being attributed to a Chinese under the Sung dynasty, although the form of the needles used and the mode of their employment have been much improved upon by them; tubular needles, for instance, were invented in 1688. It should not be forgotten that Asclepiades, in the first century of our era, recommended needle-puncture for dropsy. The operation consists in driving fine gold, silver, or steel needles from one-half to three-quarters of an inch into the flesh. The needles are of various forms and have spirally grooved handles for the better twirling of the instrument. The operator holds a needle lightly with his left hand, resting the point upon the skin of the patient. He then inserts it by a slight tap on the handle, given with a small wooden mallet held in the right hand. The needle is then gently pushed and twirled until it penetrates to the proper depth, and after a few seconds is slowly withdrawn in the same manner, the skin about the puncture being subsequently chafed for a few moments. The number of perforations made at one time varies from one to twenty, and they are oftenest made in the abdomen, to which, however, they are not confined: special treatises laying down the spots to be pierced in various diseases, and one division of study distinguishing on the back of the so-called hollow spots (more than a hundred in number)—"where the ends of the nerve fibres are found"—for the application of the needle or the moxa. A faint effort was made to introduce the Japanese needles into England and France, in 1825, but although combined with electricity, it came to nothing.—Westminster Review.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headache, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

The table upon which Generals Grant and Lee signed the famous paper at Appomatox Court House, which has been bought by Mr. Gunther of Chicago for $1000, was purchased by Major General Ord of the planter to whom it belonged at the time of the capitulation, and he paid $50 for it.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure God Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, the will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

Mr. Bingham's Argument.

As the smoke which follows the report of the loudest gun fired by the Concord railroad clears away, the army of retainers peer over the ramparts to see how much execution has been accomplished in this grand discharge.

Mr. Bingham is a lawyer of acknowledged ability. He is as thoroughly grounded in his law as he is immovably orthodox in his politics. He is honest, frank and reliable. With him politics, like professional labors, are founded upon strict construction of fixed principles. When the platform of a convention is to be submitted we know there will be no uncertain sound in its key note, or double meanings in its assertions. Mr. Bingham tells us he is counsel far the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad. That is frank. He is a director in the corporation. But whether his fortunes, like those of some of his co-directors, are to advance or recede by the defeat of the Hazen bill, he does not inform us, because he is too good a lawyer to weave into his argument propositions not germane to the question.

Mr. Bingham really represents Mr. Pearson, the controlling magnate of the Concord road; and when the advocate deprecates the prospect of New Hampshire becoming a way station on the great highway of nations, he reflects the views and repeats the fears of his Concord client. Some men are constantly losing sight of the fact that the world moves. They insist that all things shall be and remain as they are, or have been. The unmistakable fact that we are in an era of change and advance, none the less in financial and business conduct than in everything else, is lost sight of by them. The old highways of transportation over the seas are, as to many things, succeeded by the quick transit across the continent. The producer of whatever clime sends his articles of sale to the consumer by the most direct and speedy route. Is it to be supposed that if a traveller desires to go from Portsmouth to San Francisco, he is to be stopped every thirty-five miles to have his ticket punched by a new conductor while the train is attached to a new engine for a short haul? What are legislatures for if not to enact new measures demanded by the growth, prosperity and progress of our people? And yet the Concord people deprecate anything which recognizes this immutable law of constant, inevitable advance.

Mr. Bingham's speech may have been powerful, sincere and even logical. But representing the ideas of his client, he is not abreast of the times. As well might a representative arise in Congress and ask that negro slavery should be re-established, as to maintain before an intelligent committee of the house of representatives that we are all well enough as we are, and that improved facilities for transportation might perhaps result in the enrichment of some railway manager who has enough already, and therefore they should not be granted; or to hold in sober earnest, and ask the legislature to determine, that it will not do to improve our railway facilities and be as smart as the people of other states, because one railway might desire to have legislation to that end enacted, while the interests of another corporation would be, as they contend, jeopardized by it.

No; the average legislator must look at a higher motive than this. It is for the greatest good of the greatest number that he is called upon to act, and not because a few timid men cry out "be careful and not be too progressive, or you will run over us."

Two Grand Transcontinental Trips.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have planned two very attractive excursions across the continent for September and October. Both parties will take the picturesque Northern Pacific route, going the entire length of that line, passing over the new Cascade division with its novel and interesting Switchback. The first excursion will also include an extended round of the Yellowstone National park, where no less than ten days will be spent visiting the different points of interest. After visiting the places of interest in the Puget sound country, including Tacoma, Seattle, and Victoria (capital of British Columbia), and also the famous Columbia river scenery, the parties will proceed from Oregon to California by the new overland railway route, which goes within a few miles of magnificent Mount Shasta. San Francisco, Monterey, Santa Cruz, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Santa Monica, and other famous California resorts will be visited, and the homeward route is through Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Kansas. The two tours will occupy respectively sixty-six and fifty-one days, or, if preferred, the stay on the Pacific coast can be extended to any desired length, the return tickets being good on any train until next July. The dates of departure from Boston are Monday, September 12th, and Tuesday, October 11th. A descriptive circular can be obtained of W. Raymond, No. 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Howard F. Stockton, Esq., last week resigned as treasurer of the Cocheco Manufacturing Co. of Dover, and of the Salmon Falls Co., to accept the presidency of the American Bell Telephone Co. He will be succeeded as treasurer of the two companies named by Thomas F. Edmunds, Esq., now and for some time past treasurer of the Ipswich Manufacturing Co., and of the Gilmanton Co. at Belmont, this state. The Telephone Co. secures as its president a gentleman of the highest ability and business qualifications.

The Philadelphia Times, which is something of an administration organ, says that "a boom that may be heard of about 1892 is gradually learning to creep in the navy department." This leads the New York Sun to inquire what is to become of Governor David B. Hill?

The democratic papers of Virginia say that General Mahone is making a desperate effort to secure a re-election to the United States senate from that state. General Mahone has not an office at his disposal and weighs less than 125 pounds, and yet he can frighten the democratic leaders of Virginia, who are backed by all the federal and state patronage. He must be a good deal of a man.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

MYSTERIOUS POISONING CASE.

No little excitement was occasioned in this city on Monday by a report that an attempt which came very near being successful had been made to poison Mr. Arthur W. Walker of Middle street, and his family, with strychnine. The facts in the case, so far as made known up to Monday evening, were as follows:

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Walker, accompanied by his wife, her mother and Miss Florence Foster, of Elyria, Ohio, started for a drive through Rye, taking with them some light refreshments. At Rye Centre a cream cake was taken from the lunch basket by Mr. Walker, who found it intensely bitter, and spat out the mouthful; Mrs. Walker tasted the cake, and finding it very unpleasant, threw it away. Mr. Walker was soon taken very ill and entirely prostrated, and Mrs. Walker drove home with all speed. Drs. Parsons and Berry were called and remained with Mr. Walker during the night, and on Monday morning he was considered out of danger. Mrs. Walker and Miss Foster were but slightly affected.

The symptoms of the case being strychnine poisoning, investigation was made, and the cake which was thrown away in Rye looked for and found. In the cake strychnine was found; and on top of a flour barrel, and on the shelf on which the cream cakes had been placed, in a closet of Mr. Walker's residence, crystals of strychnine were found. There seems no room to doubt that Mr. Walker's illness was the result of an atrocious crime, which failed of more serious consequences only because the bungling effort was not equal to the murderous intent. That the criminal may be promptly brought to justice is to be hoped, and escape should not be possible.

POLICE COURT--BATCHELDER J.

MONDAY, Aug. 15th.

Jeremiah Murphy, drunk, as usual, thirty days at Brentwood, as usual, costs $6.90.

Mary Dumphy, for keeping disorderly house, (the "Welcome" house, on Deer street,) was held in $400 for the grand jury; bail was furnished.

Mary Dumphy, charged with keeping liquor for sale, was held in $200 for the grand jury; bail was furnished. Mary was scooped in on a search-and-seizure warrant—the first one we ever heard of as being served in this city. A five-gallon keg of whiskey was captured, and a few tumblers; also a bottle labelled Bourbon, containing a liquid suspiciously strong with water.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wingate N. Ilsley and wife are at Gorham, Me., for several weeks.

Mr. J. L. O. Coleman and family are at West Alton, this state, for several weeks.

Prof. Churchill of Andover preached in the Union chapel at Little Boar's Head on Sunday last.

Miss Sarah H. Bowles of Malden, Mass., is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. H. Bowles of Dennett street, this city.

Miss Bertha Hodgdon, eldest daughter of Mayor Hodgdon, and a graduate of the Portsmouth high school, class of 1887, will enter Wellesley college in September.

Mrs. Charles Thompson of Quincy, Mass., is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Albert Remick of New York is visiting the Misses Remick of Summer street.

Mr. John Buzzell of Fernandina, Fla., formerly of this city, is with his wife on a visit here.

John E. Jones and Miss Adele Jones, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., are visiting Dr. Daniel W. Jones on State street.

Mrs. Prescott and daughter of Foxboro, Mass., are visiting Mrs. Prescott's sister, Mrs. Wm. H. Alden, on Islington street.

John W. F. Hobbs of North Hampton, and Dr. Wm. T. Merrill of Hampton, returned from their tour in Great Britain by the steamer Cephalonia, which arrived in Boston last week.

MARITIME NOTES.

The famous cutter yacht Bedouin came up the river on Monday evening, and anchored near the navy yard.

The American fishing schooner J. H. G. Perkins was released by the Dominion authorities last week. A writ for $2,000 has been served on the captain, which he will contest in the Canadian courts.

A report comes that an American fishing schooner was sunk with all hands a week or more ago, off Buctouche, N. B., by two shots from a Canadian fishery cruiser. The story probably has no foundation.

The yacht race of the big sloops and crack schooners from Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard, to Newport, R. I., took place Monday, the 15th inst. The sloops that started were the Atlantic, Mayflower, Puritan and Volunteer; the latter won, beating the Puritan twelve minutes, the Mayflower being third. The Sachem won the race for schooners.

The bald-headed eagle, noble emblem of our glorious country, is not so common in this vicinity as he was a generation ago, but a large specimen was lazily drifting over the South road on Sunday afternoon. Our emblem must be a confrere of Henry George, for I have always noticed that he preferred to take his fish from some monopolist hawk or bloated-bondholder gull, to going to work and catching one for himself.

I noticed in the Penny Post recently an item commenting on the scarcity of sweet peas in this city the present season. Last year I had a great plenty of the pretty blossoms; this year I have very few. After giving this matter careful investigation for a full week, I think I have found a clue. Last year I planted a whole lot of sweet peas, this year but very few. This may have had something to do with the meagre result of the present crop.

I don't know that this is large for sunflower leaves, but they look so to me. I measured some in my garden to-day that shew twenty-one inches length and twenty inches width to the leaf. N. F.

A grand concert for the benefit of Mr. Henry L. Harlow, musical director at the Hotel Wentworth, is to be given in the music hall of the hotel next Saturday evening. The programme will be of the highest order, and tickets are placed at one dollar each.

We have received from Frank W. Hackett, Esq., copies of the Hampshire County Times and the Evening News, published in Portsmouth, Eng. The copies received by us were those issued on the day following the great "jubilee" naval review in Portsmouth harbor, and the Times has a seven-by-ten woodcut giving a bird's-eye view of the harbor and the great concourse of war-ships during the review. A good deal of fun is made, and with good reason, of much of the "illustrated" work of the American daily papers, but the average woodcut or electrotype "likeness" of the American politician or adventurer is a finished work of art when compared with the crude, blotchy picture in the British journal.

The Hedding Chautauqua assembly opened its sessions at the East Epping camp-ground on Monday, to continue through the week. Rev. O. S. Baketel, pastor of the Methodist church in this city, is one of the committee on ways and means of the association, and is the instructor in Sunday school normal work during the assembly.

The Lawrence American, in its notes from Andover, Mass., makes our old Rye correspondent "Nat" do some remarkable farming, as follows: "Mr. W. C. Walker, of the Mansion house, carries off the palm for the earliest green corn. He reports corn being served on the table of the famous hostelry and dug from the garden of the same on July 20th. Others report 22d and 25th of the same month respectively." Mr. Walker in the next issue says "Most farmers and other intelligent readers were no doubt surprised to learn that sweet corn is a 'digable' vegetable," and the Andover Hill correspondent of the paper remarks that "Our neighbor Walker thinks the typo gave away his secret for raising early corn last week, as he made him 'dig it' from the hill, instead of picking it from the stalk!!"

There was a night-blooming cereus in the window of Mr. Josiah Grover's house on State street, Monday evening, with eight fully-opened flowers on it. It was the most beautiful display of the kind ever seen in the city.

General Manager Furber of the Boston & Maine railroad has given notice that hereafter the express trains between Boston and Portland on the western division, leaving Boston at 8:30 A. M. and Portland at 12:38 P. M., will stop at Newmarket junction.

The carpenters employed on the Dover print works building had a clambake at the Piscataqua house, Dover point, last Saturday.

A vocal and instrumental concert is to be given at the Pocahontas house, Gerrish's island, on the evening of the 18th inst. The performers will be guests of the house.

Mr. Mason N. Paul of East Eliot showed our reporter through his peach orchard one day last week, and rather astonished him with the display; he will this year have twenty-five or thirty bushels of nice fruit, which is just commencing to ripen. Mr. Paul is also extensively engaged in the raising of fancy poultry, and is meeting with good success.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

Albert Tobey of Kittery Point has been allowed three months' extra pay, amounting to $45, for service as a seaman during the Mexican war. He enlisted at New Orleans in 1843 and was discharged in 1847; but though he shipped under a purser's name, and over forty years have elapsed since then, he was able to prove his identity by the evidence of residents of Kittery who were personally cognizant at the time of the circumstances of his enlistment, service and honorable discharge.

Mr. Manson, proprietor of the stage line between Kittery Point and this city, has withdrawn the stage from the route, and conducts an express business on the railroad between the two places; the stage is still used in transporting passengers and packages to and from the railroad station at the Point.

H. B. BUZZELL & SON,

Slow Work Reported.

A Washington despatch of the 13th inst. says: "W. H. Cramp, the ship builder, said to-day that there is no doubt about the truthfulness of the story that the steel for the new cruisers is not being rapidly delivered, all denials of the navy officers to the contrary notwithstanding. He says that the material for the Baltimore and the gun boat now being constructed in his yard comes in very slowly. He has about 700 men at work, but could employ many more if he had steel enough. He made the statement that at the present rate of delivery of steel it will be impossible to obtain enough material to complete the vessels within two years of the contract limit. It is evident that he looks forward to the forfeiture of a considerable sum of money on the contract unless the secretary, whoever he may be at the end of two years, is indulgent, and allows him an extension of time."

Naval Intelligence.

James B. Davis, superintendent of the naval ordnance foundry, Washington navy yard, has been dismissed, and John A. Button of Laurel, Me., who has long been a mechanic in the foundry, has been promoted to the vacancy.

Mr. Whiting, who has long filled the position of chief draughtsman of the bureau of steam engineering, navy department, has been dismissed. His successor has not been announced.

The U. S. S. Atlanta, from this port, and the Dolphin, arrived at Bar Harbor in the forenoon on the 14th inst. The Richmond, Galena, Ossipee and Yantic were already there. A grand naval review is announced to take place during Secretary Whitney's visit at Bar Harbor.

The contracts for the new nineteen-knot cruisers were awarded on the 15th inst. Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia got one vessel to build on their own plans for hull and machinery, and the Union Iron Works of San Francisco got the other on the department's plans. By awarding the contracts in this way the government sacrificed its $25,000 plans to Mr. Whitney's favorites, the Cramps, and by building the second cruiser in California it gives work to a yard that employs thousands of workmen, whose votes may be useful in that close state.

New Hampshire Veterans.

The eleventh annual encampment of the New Hampshire Veterans' Association will be held at "Camp Timothy B. Crowley," on the grounds of the Association, at Weirs, on the shore of Lake Winnipesaukee, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Aug. 23d, 24th, 25th and 26th, and all veterans of the army and navy, with their families and friends, whether from New Hampshire or other states, are cordially invited to be present.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are catharties and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantes by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

The Union-Labor convention at Rochester, New York, last week adopted a resolution in favor of a protective tariff, prohibition of foreign immigration, and compulsory education.

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August we were happy to nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on like a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all advertisements and simply palliatives are worse than valueless, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Combination of Internal and Local administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Summer Visiting.

Country residents are proverbially hospitable, and for that reason, we should be doubly careful not to impose upon them, for, as a general rule, they are so overrun with company that the end of the summer finds them worn out. Every member of a household is an added care to the head of it, especially if, as is often the case, there are few servants, or none at all, and even if the mistress is fortunate enough to possess a corps of well trained domestics, too much company is apt to disarrange the household affairs in the lower regions.

If you are fortunate enough to have a friend to whom you know a visit will afford real pleasure, by a little forethought you can make it still more enjoyable. In the first place, fix a definite time for your departure before you arrive. If she is not wise enough to do so, be sure when you write to announce your coming, to say on what day you will leave, and then be still more sure that you do leave, no matter how hospitably you may be urged to prolong your stay. It is better to have your departure sincerely regretted, than to have the faintest feeling of relief that you are gone.

There are many ways in which a summer visitor may be a real help. If circumstances warrant it, you can offer your aid in household matters, and spend an hour hulling strawberries, or whipping the cream which you are afterward to enjoy, and if you see that assistance of that kind will not be acceptable, there will still be something that you can do; you can arrange the flowers that perhaps the busy house-mother never finds time for, and yet enjoys so much; you can coax the children out of the kitchen, when you know she is specially busy, and entertain them in your own room, and there are countless other little things that a kindly heart and a quick eye will discover, in which you can make your presence a constant comfort.—Flora M. Wright, in Good Housekeeping.

Ill-Breeding at the Opera.

A well-bred woman does not talk at the opera, causing a poor singer to burst into tears from a careless laugh; and yet that outrages on the rights of the public is constantly repeated at some fashionable places of amusement.

The young and fast girl of the period who goes to the opera to show her dress and her beauty, is the most ill-bred person possible at a musicale. She should never be allowed at either place, because a large number of persons who go to both are wounded in their most exquisite sensibilities if disturbed while listening to music. Nor can a flirtatious and pleasure-loving mother ever produce a well-bred daughter; so the reformation should begin with the mother. In fact, what chance has a daughter of having decent manners if her mother is deficient in them?

In Europe, where the opera is called the "entertainment of kings," absolute silence is the absolute etiquet. A person would be loudly hissed who should talk while music was going on. There is nowhere such respectful attention paid to an artist as in the city of Paris. To be sure, the house is full of musical critics, people who know just where Krauss will sing her best note, where Morreli will swell his splendid jut peitrine.—Harper's Bazar.

Why am I a Jew?

In less than one year my people will enter the thirty-third century of its separate existence as a nation and now you ask me why I am a Jew! Certes, the reason must be strong, since the same reason has animated my ancestors all these centuries. Why am I a Jew? Because in the spring month of the year 2448 A. M. my fathers went forth from Egypt as a nation designed to walk in the van of human progress called into existence only for the mere purpose of leading, as the first-born of God, His other children of earth to Him, the Father of all. I am a Jew because I I believe that the Jew is a necessity of the world. I am a Jew because I recognize the rule of my nation to be that of the servant of God in ministering to mankind's greatest wants. I am a Jew because I understand and acknowledge that my people has no logical reason for its existence on the stage of history, in the face of tempests, changing scenes, "war's alarums and excursions"—in the face of all ethnological law and historic experience—except as that conservative principle without which progress becomes unreal and evanescent, and civilization unstable.—North American Review.

Something new and novel in the way of a cure for the consumption is described by the New York Sun. "Waiter, bring me a piece of round steak warmed on one side and raw on the other, some boiled potatoes with the skins removed cut up in hot milk and butter, a plate of radishes, green peas stewed in catsup, a plate of toasted brown bread, and a milk punch. Be sure and have the steak raw on one side, and chop it a little with the raw side up." This astounding order came from a tall lady with a determined look and two beau-catchers in front of her ear. "She always eats that same dinner," said the waiter to the reporter. "She's got something the matter with her lungs and thinks she's struck a cure for consumption. She sings in a choir uptown somewhere."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headache, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

The Criticisms of the Secretary of the Navy.

The secretary of the navy has recently been interviewed. He said:

The scandals which had become associated with every branch of the naval service when this administration came into power were in everybody's mouth. To correct these abuses was the objective point of all our efforts. Between bureaucratic intrigues within and autocratic dictation without, the navy had a poor show.

The secretary further remarked:

I have no desire to criticise the management of the navy under preceding administrations, but it requires only to look at the record to ascertain the fact that politics and favoritism have had more sway in running the navy than the interests of the service. I intend to break this up as far as I can. Enough has been expended on repairs of old ships in the last fifteen years to have given us a better showing. The bureaus have been crowded with men who have apparently been chosen for other qualities than merit and the good of the service. It is surprising to find how difficult it is to weed them out.

It is just such "rot" as this that has brought the administration into such contempt with many of the ablest democrats of the land, and often provokes the unmeasured criticism of prominent democratic journals.

Mr. Whitney is a politician from New York city, and has been an officeholder therein. This is sufficient to inform every one that there is nothing ingenuous in his declaration. He is seized with a spasm of virtuous indignation at the manner in which the navy department has become honeycombed under the management of preceding administrations, which he has "no desire to criticise," and at once proceeds to correct the abuse by removing an experienced draughtsman or trained clerk and substituting some incompetent man in his place, whose Bourbon-infected hand cannot hold a pencil or a pair of dividers steadily, or who cannot spell correctly three words in five of common navy yard parlance.

The republicans of course have no regret at these changes, in any political sense. Everyone is sorry to have the government lose the services of competent men, trained to duties which new men cannot properly understand for years, but they complain not. It is the time-honored democrats, who hold to the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils," and who inscribe on their banners the pre-election motto "Turn the rascals out," who are disgusted at this apologetic tone of Mr. Whitney, who when compelled to obey the dictates of his party friends protests that he does it entirely from a principle of anything save political expediency!

Of this sham pretence the democrats of this part of the country long since became tired. They are disgusted at the sight of the Gothamite politician posing as a reformer. If it pleases a few mugwumps it disgusts many democrats, and yet the farce goes on, and now and then some thoroughly provoked democratic editor opens his batteries of criticism. This policy shows Mr. Whitney to be an officer hardly up to the requirements of his position. A minister who will send a flag-officer to foreign waters upon an important mission and not give him proper instructions as to his errand, and then reprimand him in the public prints of a foreign country, because, uninstructed, he groped through the fog to accomplish something in behalf of the sixty millions of people whose flag he bore, will have enough to do, in the hereafter, in apologizing for his own incompetency, and certainly can have no status in his attempt to "criticise the management of the navy" under the administration of his illustrious predecessor.

SARATOGA STYLES.

STOUT AND THIN WOMEN—MORNING COSTUMES—EVENING DRESSES—SARATOGA BOEUF.

There is not now at Saratoga the fine dressing that formerly prevailed, but in place of it, a truer sense of the appropriate. I speak more especially of morning costumes, where unpretentious wools, satines, ginghams or summer silks are thought "good enough." Would there were also a better sense of individual fitness, since in such case we should not find women of several hundred pounds weight parading in large-figured patterns, light colors or various gew-gaws suitable only to the young and slender. Monsters they would be under any circumstances, but thus bedecked, they become sorrowful sights, even more so than some skinny sister, who, needing all possible expansion, appears in tight-fitting black, without flounce or furbelow. As an offset, however, one does see many really beautiful costomes, where not only the picturesque in itself has been studied, but suitability to the wearer's special style.

COSTUMES.

Of these, one of the most tasteful showed a basque of dark green velvet with skirt of light green silk, having a broad panel of velvet on one side. An afternoon dress was also of dark green silk, beautifully relieved by a broad sash, where on a cream surface, sprays and flowers were depicted in natural colors. The ribbon was laid in folds around the basque, with loops and long ends on one side, while a plaited vest, also of the sash ribbon, finished the corsage. A more simple costume was made with dark green satin skirt, plain, except a plaiting around the lower edge, with polonaise of cream-colored wool, having crimson spots. The corsage was laced in front by narrow green ribbon; the same on cuffs. A lovely afternoon dress displayed a dark heliotrope velvet basque, with silk skirt a pale shade of the same color; a pointed velvet drapery falling partly over the front and one side. Trimmings of gilt passementerie; Leghorn hat lined with velvet, and trimmed with heliotrope plumes.

EVENING DRESSES.

Much has been written of Saratoga indecorum. Evening hops record the contrary, and New York matrons who last winter vied with one another in displays at balls and opera, may blush before the careful modesty of young Saratoga beauties. Some very tasteful costumes are of black lace offset by ribbon, yellow being the most effective. Lace dresses are indeed in the majority, but gauze, either striped or figured over silk or satin is in great favor, while now and then large brocades, combined with velvet, give a change, these being rather warm looking for summer, however. Thin-armed ladies appreciate the advantage of puffed sleeves, and now and then there is a succession of puffs to the wrist, while lace-topped gloves, when worn with lace dress, have the look of sleeves. The leading style for necks is a deep point back and front, or a point in the back, with half-square in front. Sleeves are more of sleeves than they have been, this doubtless being due to the influence of the puffed sleeve, which certainly has "taken," and from its great utility in concealing Nature's deficiencies, ought to grow into a long and flourishing life.

SARATOGA NOTES.

Any simple way of arranging the hair passes muster, but those who wish to be labelled "strictly fashionable," adopt the coil placed neither high nor low at the back, but made to extend out as far as possible from the head.

A popular idea is that the Saratoga belle is a painted and powdered creature. I see but little of either, but manicures seem to flourish like green bay trees; this being due, perhaps, to the fact that gloves are but little worn, except at church, at hops or driving.

Many people are so accustomed to think of the beautiful qualities of Pears' soap, that they forget its economical properties, one of these being that it washes away very slowly, and retains its firmness to the last. It is quite as much in demand at fashionable summer resorts as in the great cities, and is rapidly becoming known throughout the country at large.

Brooches and pins are almost the only articles of jewelry worn in the daytime, except, perhaps, diamond earrings or a cherished finger ring. For brooches, the favorite pattern is an enamelled flower, and for other articles of jewelry, enamel is just now in especial favor.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

A PERSECUTED WOODCHUCK.

As an example of what patient and intelligent application will do to remove a great evil, we give the statement of a gentleman residing in Portsmouth, made on Tuesday morning: "Out at my place I have quarter of an acre of beans of which I feel very proud. About a week ago, to increase my pride and lead to my more speedy fall, I paid my almost daily visit to that particular patch. To my horror I found that nearly 400 hills of the pride of the Modern Athenian had been completely spoiled for any further use. Grieved and vindictive I sought for the author of this mischief, and found that Brer Woodchuck was not only the criminal, but that he was so well pleased with his foraging that he had built a cyclone residence on the premises, in order to continue his good work in equalizing the distributions of the products of the soil. Not to be too hard upon him, I merely set a trap for him. I caught him twice, but each time the wily old fellow drew the trap into his hole, and in descending managed somehow to cause the trap to open so that he was freed. I then tried 'the efficacy of stones.' Four times I filled his burrow solid with young rocks; four times he dug out a new path for himself to sunlight and to plunder; but after his fourth effort he evidently concluded that my actions were not meant for a joke, as he took a sudden departure from a land which had so slight an idea of true hospitality." GOLDEN WEDDING.

James W. Emery, Esq., and wife, of Maplewood avenue, celebrated their golden wedding on Monday evening from four o'clock to eight, many of the most prominent society people of the city attending to offer their congratulations. The bride of half a century was dressed in black satin and black lace, and held in her left hand an exquisite bouquet of fifty rosebuds, the gift of Mrs. Ichabod Good. Rev. Andrew P. Peabody, D. D., who performed the marriage ceremony for the couple fifty years ago, was present on this occasion. A large number of appropriate tokens of remembrance were received by the long-wedded pair from their many friends.

MARITIME NOTES.

The yacht Titania came up the river on Monday afternoon, and anchred off Pumpkin island. She was bound to Bar Harbor, and seeking a pilot for that port, but sailed on Tuesday forenoon without having been able to procure one.

The steam yacht Reva, belonging to Mr. Lorillard of New York, arrived at the Gas Co.'s wharf, this port, on the evening of the 16th inst., for water and coal. She is a very handsome vessel, and quite a large one. Capt. Gilbert M. Trussell of Newcastle, who had previously been engaged to go in her as pilot to Bar Harbor, joined her here.

The steamer Mystic, Capt. Trefethen, on Tuesday towed well out to sea from the lower harbor the big schooner yacht Gitana, bound to Bar Harbor. Another large yacht, name not learned, which put into Little harbor for a pilot, sailed for Bar Harbor the same day.

The tug Clara Clarita, of Bath, Me., arrived at the Portsmouth navy yard on Tuesday, having in tow the barge Josephine, from Georgetown, D. C., with the new boilers for the U. S. S. Swatara on board.

The ship David Brown, of about 900 tons register, came into the lower harbor Tuesday forenoon in tow of a tug, and after a brief stop left for Portland, Me., where she is to be made into a coal barge.

The cause of the poor showing made by the yacht Mayflower in the recent races has been discovered. Her centreboard has been removed, and found to be badly shattered and twisted on its lower side.

The race for the Newport citizens' cup was sailed on Tuesday, from Brenton's reef to the Sow and Pigs lightship and back. The Puritan, Mayflower and Volunteer were among the contestants.

The Scotch cutter yacht Thistle, which hopes to carry the America's cup across the Atlantic when she returns, arrived at New York on the 16th inst., all well.

John Bloom and Augustus Crittenden, two of the crew of the schooner Lillian Baxter of Gloucester, who got astray on Grand bank while attending trawls, after being in a dory forty-eight hours were picked up by a Swedish bark, landed at Pugwash, N. S., and sent home to Gloucester by the United States consul, arriving Aug. 15th.

A Lowell paper speaks as follows of Delevan's circus, which comes in town Thursday: "Delavan's circus, which is now exhibiting on the South common, is proving to be one of the most popular shows that has visited Lowell for many a day. The circus is really a fine affair, and every man, woman and child who has witnessed its startling combinations, has spoken in praise of it. The price of admission, twenty cents, is within the reach of all."

"Who is Frank Jones, and what has he done?" enquires the Exeter News Letter. Frank Jones is a farmer living at Gravelly Ridge, and has cut four hundred tons of hay this season. In fact he is the kind of man who is always making two blades of grass grow where one grew before.

Some of the stringers over the flume leading from the north millpond to Hon. Moses H. Goodrich's bark mill were recently found to be in a very bad condition, one of them being broken entirely through; the defect was fortunately discovered before any accident occurred, and on Tuesday new stringers were being put in under the supervision of the street commissioner.

A night-blooming cereus in an open front window of the residence of Mr. Moses Laighton on Vaughan street, Monday evening, arrested the steps of hundreds of passers-by during the evening.

For a road only a dozen miles or so in length, the Portsmouth & Dover railroad seems to have a strong board of directors, including two mayors, one governor of a state, and two ex-congressmen.

The two-story residence of Charles Lydston in Greenland, on the road to North Hampton, was burned about three o'clock Monday morning, and also the barn. The fire caught from a defective chimney, and nearly the entire contents of house and barn were destroyed. Insurance on the buildings, $2300.

The Walkingbeam club of this city went to Boston on the 14th inst., and by invitation of Col. E. G. Peirce, superintendent of the Boston & Hingham Steamboat Co., took a trip to Nantasket, and arrived home the same night, having had a very pleasant excursion.

The Dearborn house on Middle street was sold by auction at noon on Monday, Mr. Samuel W. Moses being the purchaser at $3,710.

The triennial reunion of the family bearing the surname of Poor or Poore, will this year be held on the 14th of September at Haverhill, Mass. Those who wish to go up the river Merrimac on the steamboat can take the first train from this place and be in season.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

Mr. David K. Manson of Kittery Point, proprietor of the stage line between that place and this city, takes decided exceptions to a statement in the report of a recent case tried before Trial Justice Dennett of Kittery, against the driver of the stage, for overdriving a horse, that "owing to the poverty of the owner" the magistrate inflicted only a nominal fee. Mr. Manson says the question of "poverty" was not considered nor mentioned; he has all the money he needs to pay all just claims, and does so; and the "nominal" quality of the fine was due to the "poverty" of the case against the driver.

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago, and continuous lines at terminal points West, North-west and Southwest, is the only true middle link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island Route and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, LaSalle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Ely, Marion, Cedar Rapids, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, Iowa; Trenton, Bethany, Stanberry, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown, in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

The Great Rock Island Route
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it to any of the points named. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical in discipline, strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodation is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

All Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of Comfortable Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Parlor and Sleeping Cars, elegant Dining Cars providing excellent meals, and between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—matchless Reclining Chair Cars.

The Famous Albert Lea Route
is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Pullman Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short, desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior indemnity to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points. All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly treatment.

Mrs. Mercy A. Junkins of Scotland bridge, York, has a houseful of summer boarders, and could have many more had she room to accommodate them. The place is a very pretty one, the river running near by, and walnut and other groves being close at hand; an excellent table is set, and the pleasant face of the venerable Aunt Sally gives added relish to the good things provided. Besides conducting the house, Mrs. Junkins goes twice a week to York beach with poultry, eggs, etc., of which she sells large quantities to the hotels and boarding houses there.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantities by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

Admiral Luce explains that his Shakespearian quotation "that even a dog in office would be obeyed" was applied by him in a conversation regarding the seizure of the schooner Highland Light, and had no connection whatever with the telegram from the secretary of the navy. The admiral justly thinks that his forty-six years of service should prove him utterly incapable of so great a breach of discipline and good manners at that with which he has been credited.

A peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

Edison claims to have achieved his greatest triumph in an invention which will produce electricity directly from coal.

What Brandreth's Pills Do.

In Brandreth's Pills the true life medicine has been found, composed as they are of numerous vegetables so combined that each multiplies the virtues of the rest. They never can do any harm. Their action is always the same, no matter how long or in what doses they are taken. They purge away the waste particles of the system. They recruit the animal vigor and arrest the progress of decay. They purify the blood. They stimulate the liver. They invigorate digestion. They open the pores. They make the bowels do the work of the kidneys, thus giving these organs an oftentimes needed rest. One or two at night for a week will demonstrate their power and is generally sufficient to cure ordinary diseases.

The total amount of death claims paid by the Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York during the week ending Aug. 5th was $165,513.54; endowments, $45,079.95.

A National Bank-Teller in Luck.

Mr. F. V. Wasserman, receiving teller of the United States National Bank of Omaha city, who held one-tenth of ticket No. 27,740, which drew the first capital prize of $300,000 in The Louisiana State Lottery's drawing on the 14th ult., continues at his old post counting the gold and silver. "Yes," said he, "I received the money through the express office, and it made a package about two feet long, but $30,000 was too big a sum to be kept in the dark."—Omaha (Neb.) Bee, July 31.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

—The truly helpful wife is the one who always returns her husband's pencil when she borrows it. She has not been born yet.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness and give strength and vigor. Try them.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blisters, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong linimentes, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. EVANS,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long, drawn-out period of misery and death, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, taining the sense of taste, robbing the youngest generation of its birthright, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating away the delicate cones and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and palliatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, Catarrh, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

FAITH, HOPE AND CHARITY.

'Tis Faith in her own power to beguile,
With nature's charms and woman's art combined,
Disdainfully and coolly on mankind.

'Tis Hope at six and twenty years that glows
Within her heart, ere yet 'tis sere and yellow,
And bids her trust that some one will propose,
As up she sets to catch each single fellow.

And when at six and thirty she has lured
A man to take a matrimonial "header,"
And plighted troth beyond a doubt secured,
'Tis Charity that then leads him to wed her!

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

Large Timber Purchase.

Among the latest additions to the immense extent of timber lands owned by the Connecticut River Lumber Company in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine is the township of Carlisle, in upper New Hampshire, purchased from S. C. Hopkins of Boston, and Joseph S. Fay of Woods Holl, Mass., mutual owners. This township contains about thirty-seven square miles of territory; has one straight boundary line twelve miles long, extending from the Connecticut River to the Maine State line; has six miles frontage on Lake Connecticut and four on Connecticut River, while across its eastern slope flow the upper streams of the Androscoggin. Near its center is Mt. Magalloway. Logs from its opposite slopes may be driven to mills at Hartford, Conn., and Lewiston, Me., points near the coast hundred of miles apart. Mr. T. B. Pearsall, a New York railroad man and other New York capitalists, together with George Van Dyker, of Lancester, president, comprise the lumber company, having mills at Hartford, Conn., Holyoke and Northampton, Mass., McIndoe Falls and Guildhall, Vt., and on the Androscoggin River, Me.

Miss Robins or Mrs. Johnson, as it may now be, is the daughter of David Robins, a rich builder of New York, who died in 1871, leaving a fortune of about $1,000,000. She became infatuated with a man who professed to be a doctor, and who encouraged the alliance although married and having a daughter. The connection was strongly opposed by Miss Robins' relatives, and the couple left America for Europe, and it now transpires that $100,000 was paid over to Mrs. Johnson for her husband's release, and a divorce was procured on the ground of desertion in a Chicago court. All these facts came to light in the Supreme court chambers on Monday in regard to the reference of a suit which a Mr. Malcolm has brought against Miss Robins or Mrs. Johnson—whichever she may be—to recover about $10,000 for legal services in caring for her estate.

Mamie's Cablegram.

A Hartford man whose wife was going abroad, asked her to telegraph him a word or two letting him know of her safe arrival in New York. In a few hours he received the following message, "collect:"

"DEAR GEORGE: Arrived here safely at fifteen minutes after 6. The train was due at 6, but we were delayed fifteen minutes while en route. Had a perfectly lovely trip. Don't worry about me, I'll get along all right. And take good care of yourself. Be so careful about taking cold this damp weather. Remember you are to keep on your flannels until the 15th of June. Be sure and have the house open and aired as often as once a week. Remember what I told you about your socks and shirts. Don't forget to keep the basement door locked. Write every day. I'm sure I'll have a lovely time. So good in you to let me go. You must come over after me in August. Forever and ever and ever yours, MAMIE.

An hour later Mamie was pained to receive the following reply to her "word or two:"

"Don't cable anything from Liverpool. I'm a ruined man if you do. GEORGE."

"I don't want that young poet around here any more," said a father to his daughter; "he will never amount to anything." "Why, papa," responded the girl, "George has discovered a sure cure for corns and bunions, and has given up poetry forever." "O," said the father, "I'm afraid I've misjudged the young man. Just let things go on as usual."—New York Sun.

"Is there nobody here that will raise a hand to save a human life?" asked a tramp in tragic tones in a crowded saloon on Market street one night last week. "Ya; I safe your life right away," said the bartender, catching the tramp by the collar and running him out of the door. "Dot's the way I safe your life. I put you purty quick out before the poss comes downstairs unt kill you."—Newark Sunday Call.

An Eastern firm got hold of a new drummer who was very highly recommended by some friends of theirs. They gave him a case of samples and $500 and sent him off. He was gone a couple of weeks and they heard nothing from him. They finally got on his track and they telegraphed him. His answer was brief and worthy of his profession. It was: "Send me another $500. I am still with you."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The other day in a crowded street-car a gentleman gave his seat to an aged lady. He was rewarded with a smile, and when she got out she gave him another smile and a tract which began: "Young man, do you know Jesus?" This was amiable weakness on the part of an aged lady, but it is curious that she failed to give tracts to the good Christians who retained their seats and thought only of the tired-out Jewish clerk who sprang up with alacrity at her entrance.—Jewish Messenger.

Fluent shopgirl — Ma'am,- did you ever see a ribbon more charming? Look at the exquisite shade of this one! It is just suited to your complexion. Here is a bright garnet. Isn't it splendid? Or this soft fawn-colored one? What could be more lovely? Lady customer (to floor-walker)—Be so kind as to send another clerk to wait on me. Floor-walker—Why, what's the matter, ma'am? Lady customer—I want to do a little admiring myself. And to show my taste, if there's a chance given me.—Harper's Bazar.

An express train on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad left the track on a curve in the outskirts of Washington, D. C., Aug. 17th, through the failure of the air-brakes to work. The engine plunged into a brick signal-tower three stories high, bringing it down in a heap on top of the train. The signal officer escaped with a broken arm, by jumping from a window. The engineer and two passengers were killed, the fireman fatally scalded, and sixteen other persons badly injured, many of them fatally.

The Ute outbreak in Colorado is feared to be very serious. There has been some fighting, and great excitement exists in the region exposed to raids.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

THEATRICALS.

The well known and favorite Atkinson & Cook's Stock Company open at Music hall for one week, commencing Monday, Aug. 22d, at popular prices—10, 20 and 30 cents. Mr. E. P. Sullivan is the leading man still, and it would be hard to find a better all 'round actor; he is always welcome in this city. Miss Annie Louise Ames, the new leading lady, is new to the Portsmouth public, but is well spoken of by the papers of other cities. Mr. Thos. E. Shea, formerly of the Floy Crowell Co., and Mr. Edwin Varney, lately stage manager for Ullie Akerstrom, go to make up a company which should be able to maintain the general excellence which has always characterized Messrs. Atkinson & Cook's entertainments in the past. Tickets go on sale Friday morning at Goodrich's bookstore, where it would be well for those wishing to secure good seats to buy early.

THE FIREMEN'S PARADE.

The board of engineers and aldermanic committee on fire department met at the engineer's office on Tuesday evening of this week for the informal discussion of plans for the muster of the fire department next month. The prospect now is that the celebration will be a creditable one for the local companies. Other meetings will be held soon, and we trust the officers and committee will arrange for a muster such as our firemen deserve. We have reason to believe that such will be the case.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., Aug. 16th.

During the heavy thunder shower last Thursday afternoon the barn of Mr. Owen Pettigrew of North Kittery was struck by lightning, set on fire, and entirely consumed with its contents, consisting of twenty tons of good hay, carts, horse rake, and many smaller farming tools, twenty-eight hens, four pigs, and a valuable Holstein bull. Through the presence of mind and coolness of Mr. Pettigrew's sixteen-years-old son Arthur, a valuable colt was saved. The boy entered the burning building amid the dense smoke, and at much peril reached the stall of the colt, which was rearing and thrashing about with fear; speaking kindly to her, she allowed her young master to unhitch and lead her to a place of safety. Many neighbors were soon on the scene and rendered all possible aid, but the fire gained headway with such rapidity that it was impossible to save much. Mr. Pettigrew was absent in Portsmouth at the time of the fire, and thinks if he had been at home he could have rescued the bull, but it would have been perilous for a stranger to have attempted such a thing. Mr. Pettigrew estimates his losses at about $1000, and is insured in the Kittery & Eliot company for $250 on building, and $100 on hay and grain. He has quite a lot of hay standing, and several neighbors have kindly offered him the use of their barns to shelter his cattle and store his crops.

Mrs. Sadie W. Sanborn of Boston, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. S. L. Chesley of West Rye, N. H., is now visiting her other sister, Mrs. Benjamin Keen, at her pleasant cottage on Shepard's hill, Orchard Grove avenue.

Rev. J. H. Mugridge of Newcastle exchanged with Rev. Francis Grovenor at the 1st Methodist church, North Kittery, last Sunday.

We do not know who the Kittery correspondent of the Biddeford Journal is, but we would like to have an explanation of what kind of an order "Morrill Lodge Q. O. G. S." is, as we notice the election and installation of its officers in last week's Journal. We always thought Kittery had more secret orders than any other town on the continent regardless of size, but what this new order is or what its requirements are we fail to find out, but as near as we can learn it is the "Quaint Order of Gum Slashers" and must have originated in Kennebunk; but we had no idea they had organized here.

At the next annual town meeting, if not before, the citizens will probably be called upon to pass a stringent dog law. There is a pack of savage dogs at large in this section which chase sheep, young cattle, calves and colts, and are making havoc among them. Parties who keep such savage curs should pay all damages.

The B. & M. R. R. Co. have placed two of the Gould-Tisdale patent electric railroad signals on the eastern side of Kittery station—one within the yard limit, and one beyond Butler's crossing.

Mr. Owen F. Pettigrew lost all of his flock of sheep but one last Friday night, by dogs; but he happened on the scene early the next morning, found out whose dogs they were, and we understand the owners have offered to pay the damages.

Dennis Manson and Arno L. Wilson have been drawn on the traverse jury, and William R. Parker on the grand jury, to serve at the September term of court.

Mr. W. A. Fernald of North Kittery, who was quite severely injured last week, is reported to be improving.

SUE ROSA.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Thomas S. Gammon and wife have returned to their home in this city, after passing six weeks at the cottage of Mrs. Wm. A. Plaisted at Rye, near Foss' beach.

Frank W. Hackett, Esq., of this city, arrived home on Wednesday, the 17th inst., having reached New York on the 16th in the steamer Westernland from Antwerp.

Mrs. Samuel P. Long of this city is passing the summer at Epping.

Miss Alice Marston, of Portland, Me., is visiting at Woodbine cottage on Lafayette road.

Miss Ida Rand, of Boston, is on a visit to the family of Mr. L. S. Butler, on State street.

Mr. George Stott and daughter, Miss Emma F. Stott, left this city on Monday of this week for a stay of several weeks in Rhode Island and western Massachusetts.

MARITIME NOTES.

A sailboat built in Candia and brought to this city over the Concord & Portsmouth railroad, was launched into the north pond at the Creek on the 17th inst., and taken out through the gates on her way to Dover. She is a queer-looking craft, twenty feet long and seven wide; her sheer is just the opposite of what is usual, she being highest in the waist, and falling off toward each end. She is conveniently fitted up, and apparently well built.

The sloop yacht Cora, a very handsome craft, arrived at the Appledore about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The sloop yacht White Wing of this port, Capt. Charles S. Browne, started on a trip to Bar Harbor on the 14th inst.

The yacht race off Newport, R. I., on the 16th inst., was a tame and spiritless affair, light winds alternating with dead calms, so that the Volunteer, which won the $650 cup for first-class sloops, was only half a minute less than eleven hours in going over the course, the Puritan taking 11:15:07 and the Mayflower 11:31:38 to get around. The Magic won the cup for schooners, the Sachem giving her double the club time allowance. The Gracie won the prize for second-class sloops, and the Cinderella that for third-class sloops.

Delavan's tent-show that opens on the South common, Thursday, for a short season, is an unqualified success, and has been largely patronized wherever it has been given. Both press and public are a unit in praising the performances, and among the artists are Fox and Ward, the great minstrel team, well and favorably known upon the variety stage for many seasons; Jarvis, the king of clowns; the Laverne sisters, trapeze artists of acknowledged ability; the Eddys, Millie and Willie, Frank La Rosa, and many lesser lights of the circus profession.—Salem Times.

A concert complimentary to Mr. Henry L. Harlow, musical director at the hotel Wentworth, will be given in the music hall of the hotel on Saturday evening by the Wentworth orchestra, assisted by Miss Edith Wendell of this city, soprano, Miss Carlotta Patti Whitmore of Boston, pianist, Miss Emma Becker of Boston, contralto, O. C. Whitmore, clarionet, E. P. Becket, flute, and Louis Post, bassoon. Tickets at $1 each, admitting a gentleman and two ladies, can be procured at Preston's and Grace's drug stores, and at Stich Ban. After the concert there will be a hop until twelve o'clock.

A statement was telegraphed from Dover to the Boston papers on Tuesday, the 16th inst., that Dr. Paul A. Stackpole of Dover had sued the Boston & Maine railroad for $10,000, for damages incurred by reason of his horses being frightened by the cars at a crossing in that city recently. The Dover station agent for the Boston & Maine road on Wednesday denied the truth of the report.

The probate court was in session at Exeter on Wednesday, the 17th inst. Several lawyers from this city were in attendance.

Chief Engineer Lydston, of the Boston & Maine railroad, on the 16th inst. laid out in the yard of the Dover station, near the new turntable now in course of construction, a coal shed 175 feet long and thirty wide, and a round house sixty-two feet in depth, to accommodate eight engines.

Mr. Woodward, of the Portsmouth machine shop, has rented the Towle house on State street, recently occupied by Mr. Joseph O. Harlow.

Major J. A. Smith, U. S. A., corps of engineers, has been ordered to Fort Constitution and Jerry's point, Portsmouth harbor, on public business.

Gen. J. N. Patterson's old war horse, "Old Buck," which was captured from the Confederates in 1862, died in Concord on the 16th inst., at the age of thirty-four years.

Asa T. Barron, one of the best known hotel men in New Hampshire, from his connection with the Crawford, Fabyan, Twin Mountain, Mt. Pleasant and Summit houses, died at the Twin Mountain house Aug. 16th, aged seventy-four years.

Miss Caroline E. Wing of Long Plains, Mass., has been elected principal of the Manchester training school, at a salary of $1000.

Mrs. Cummings, who erected the library buildings at Northfield has contributed between 700 and 800 volumes toward its book supply.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

The colored brother laughs in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression as it thinks of the kinks it will do in the darky's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that SANFORD'S GINGER will soon be needed.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, dispel disease germs in all the water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

—"Can't somebody stop that runaway?" yelled a stranger in Detroit, excitedly, as a cab came tearing down the street at breakneck speed, driver and passenger both apparently frantic with terror. "That ain't no runaway," said an old resident, carelessly, "it's an umpire getting away from the baseball ground. The boys must have got beat."

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP THAT THE

by reason of its unrivaled position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago, and continuous lines at terminal points West, North, West and Southwest, is the only true middle link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island mail lines and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Streator, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, Des Moines, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Pella, Marion, Cedar Rapids and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron, and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown, in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

The Great Rock Island Route

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. All Passenger Trains are equipped with the Westinghouse Air Brake, and the Miller Platform and Safety Vestibule Connections. Its dining cars are famous for the excellence of their service. Its Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars, elegant Dining Cars providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—reclining Chair Cars.

The Famous Albert Lea Route

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Pullman Palace Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of Interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A shorter, desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior accommodations to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Intermediate points. Tourists and travelers, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly treatment.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

The top floors of seaside hotels become the desirable ones when mosquitoes are about, as the pests prefer to remain near the ground. "Hotel elevated above the mosquito belt" will be the sign of the sagacious seaside landlord in the near future.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too. Cocaine, iodoform or mecurials in any form in the treatment of catarrh or hay fever should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of acute and chronic cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price fifty cents of druggists.

Jeremiah True, aged eighty-four, and a small boy named Haley, were struck by the Flying Yankee at a crossing in Richmond, Me., Aug. 17th. The boy was injured but slightly, though thrown forty feet. True was injured internally, besides breaking his hip, leg and several ribs. He will probably die.

Cured of Wrenched Spine.

How many men given to heavy labor go through life with a kind of hitch in the backbone caused by wrenching at some period in their younger days. Let all such take heed from the following letter:

Lyndonville, Orleans Co., N. Y., March 3, 1886.—Some years ago, while loading sheep on the railroad, I badly wrenched my back. I was confined to my bed for four weeks, being partially paralyzed. As I could get no relief, I put on my spine three Allcock's Plasters from the small of my back up between my shoulders. From that day I began to get better, suffering less pain all the time. I put fresh plasters on every ten days, and in a month I was well and attending to my business. C. R. BENTLEY.

Mrs. Wason, widow of the wealthy car-builder of Springfield, Mass., has been sued to recover $287 balance due a New York dressmaker. Probably the bill was a long one as the wealthy car-builder's widow wore her dresses on train.

OR,

A Fortune Dearly Bought.

By HARRY MORDAUNT.

(Copyright August, 1887, by F. A. Nichols.)

Whence came the Hetherington, and what was the source of their unbounded wealth?

No one seemed to know. The most ridiculous reports regarding it were freely circulated. It was said that Mr. Hetherington had discovered a diamond mine on the coast of Africa; that he was the owner of numberless gold mines in California; that he had been a gambler on the Mississippi, where he had amassed a vast fortune. All these surmises were far from the truth.

Charles Hetherington had been a poor boy. He was born in a little country town in Massachusetts. Being or a restless disposition he had gone out into the world to seek a fortune, and finally went to South America, where he entered into business at Rio Janeiro, and by hard work and successful ventures amassed a fortune. While there he married an American lady, and 15 years later he returned to Boston.

A year afterward he lost his wife, and he himself died shortly after by a stroke of apoplexy.

He left one daughter, who was quite young at the time of his death. She was 17 years old. Her face was one of more than ordinary beauty; her complexion fair as a lily, her eyes black and sparkling, and her features regular as a Grecian profile.

Her father died without making a will.

"My entire fortune goes to my daughter. As she is a minor, I appoint my brother Francis her guardian, and, tht he may not be tempted to take what does not belong to him, I leave him an allowance of $10,000 a year until Marian marries or attains her majority."

Marian was confided to this brother, who up to this time had been a bookkeeper for a firm in the city of Worcester.

Francis Hetherington was a little, short, thin, bilious-looking individual. His restless gray eyes always had a suspicious expression, and his thin, tightly drawn lips gave him an unpleasant look.

He came to Boston at once on learning of his brother's death, and entered upon his duties as the young girl's guardian.

At this time there was living in Boston a woman by the name of Sarah Farnham, in whose society Francis passed a great portion of his time, and whom, according to public gosip, he was about to marry.

She was a large woman with regular features, an energetic expression, and on the whole was an attractive appearing person.

One morning Francis received a letter from Sarah begging him to call at her house immediately.

His curiosity being excited, he arrayed himself at once and went out. From Beacon Street, where he lived, to Pinckney street was only a step. There he found Sarah dwaiting him in her parlor.

"Sit down," she said, "I want to talk to you seriously..

Hetherington obeyed, and then asked with a visable anxiety:

"What is it? What is it?"

Sarah reflected a moment.

"My dear Francis," she said, "listen to me attentively to the end, and do not get angry before I have finished."

The face of her caller expressed great uneasiness, but the woman took no notice of it.

"I know your situation," continued Sarah, "and it is not from you that I have obtained my information; you are too reticent for that, but a friend has spoken to me of your affairs—"

"Who?"

"What is that to you? Persons who are interested in you; let that suffice. There are two, and if you insist upon knowing their names I will tell you that one of the two is Frank Stanley."

"Frank Stanley!" cried Francis, in astonishment.

"You do not know him, I am sure of that. Let me go on. Later you shall make his acquaintance. I know your financial and social position. I know that a short time ago you did not possess a dollar, and that your brother's death has made you rich. I know that you are the guardian of a pretty girl called Marian Hetherington. I know that this girl, on reaching her majority, will inherit her father's fortune, amounting to about five million dollars—a pretty sum! I know also that, until she becomes of age, you have ten thousand dollars a year, which will cease when she reaches the age of twenty-one. Is that the truth and I am well informed?"

"Your information is correct," replied Francis, greatly disturbed, "but what on earth are you driving at?"

"This," replied Sarah drily; "you spend all your income, and in a few years you will be ruined."

"Well?"

"Marian's father had only one brother—yourself? There were no other relations?"

"No."

"Then, if he had not had a daughter, you have inherited all his property?"

"Yes, if he had not otherwise disposed of it by will."

"If anything should happen to Marian now you would still inherit?"

Had she grasped his secret thought, or had the same idea merely come to her which had already come to him?

"Yes," he stammered, "but what can happen to her? We cannot count upon that."

"One cannot foresee accidents; they come on every side in a large city; accidents—"

Francis Hetherington was pale as death—he murmured:

"No, not that, no, not that."

Sarah Farnham shrugged her shoulders.

"He is not sufficiently hardened," she muttered; "I must wait."

"A murder—the police—the court—the gallows—ah! no, no—"

Sarah burst into laughter.

"Who said anything about that? I spoke of an accident and nothing more. There are all kinds of accidents in a city. I was not thinking of a murder. It was a marriage I meant."

"A marriage!" cried Francis in astonishment.

"It will happen that instead of being ruined when Marian becomes of age, I shall be a little sooner, that is all. A pretty plan, that of yours!"

"Patience! Your niece may walk off some fine morning with a fellow to whom she has offered her five millions, and that news would not overwhelm you with joy. We must prevent that and marry her at once, before she has formed any attachment."

"But what is the use, since I tell you—"

"Patience! We must find a young, handsome fellow, sufficiently charming and distinguished to be remarked by your ward. That is the husband we must find—do you understand now. Do you see clearly?"

"No. I see only one thing, and that is that after her marriage I shall be obliged to pack up my trunks and depart."

"Yes, you will have to depart."

"And that is what I desire to put off as long as possible."

"But in going, you will have in your pocket a million dollars, which ought to satisfy you for your old age."

Francis Hetherinton trembled.

"A million! And from what heaven will it fall?"

"From the heaven of marriage, my friend, when the honeymoon shines. Do you begin at last to see my plans?" she said, in a low voice.

"Perhaps," he answered in a whisper, as if afraid of being heard. "Perhaps! But tell me more fully. Conceal nothing from me!"

"Alas!"

"But if she marries a man who belongs to us body and soul, who will be our instrument, and who will be only too happy to find a fortune of two millions and will relinquish the other three to us? Is it clear to you now? Think we can have two millions between us. Think that I love you, and that if you refuse, I shall be obligad to give you up. A million for you, a million for me, and there will still remain enough for your niece?"

Francis stood breathless and trembling. A violent struggle seemed to be going on within him. Finally he said:

"So be it, I accept."

"But where is this young man? I would like to see him."

"Patience! Before seeing him you must listen to me. I have still some instructions to give you. You must leave Boston."

"I! And why?"

"Because you are surrounded by too many dangers here. She must not meet any other man but mine. In the country, she will be secluded, and better disposed to receive the attentions of the man I will send. You must have some estate sufficiently far from the city. I have heard that your brother bought two or three country places."

"That is true, but they are all farms and hardly suitable for Marian. There is, however, if I am not mistaken, a house at Dedham, an old mansion buried in the woods."

"In Dedham and in the woods. Seek no further; it is the very place for us."

"Then you wish—"

"I wish you to be installed there within two days."

"I will obey, since it is to please you."

"There you will receive a visit from one of my friends, one of the aristocracy, Frank Stanley, and his companion, our young man—"

"Armstrong. Farewell!"

When Francis Hetherington had departed, Sarah remained for a long time pensive. Then starting to her feet, she exclaimed:

"If this marriage does not succeed, there still remains death and inheritance. That is perhaps the surest!—"

Secretary Whitney at Bar Harbor.

Secretary Whitney of the navy arrived at Bar Harbor, Mount Desert, by the "vestibule" train, about six o'clock in the evening on Wednesday, the 17th inst., unheralded, and almost unrecognized. A despatch of the 17th from Bar Harbor says:

Mr. Whitney and several gentlemen who met him at the ferry alone knew of his intention, and Mrs. Whitney informed all the newspaper correspondents he would come by the U. S. S. Despatch, which has been in Portsmouth harbor some days awaiting him. A number of gentlemen who had been quietly notified went over on the "Sappho" to meet him at Mount Desert Ferry, and drove in private buckboards to Mrs. Burton Harrison's estate, "Sea Urchins," where he will remain till about Tuesday. The entire North Atlantic squadron is at anchor in the harbor, but the officers were not notified of the arrival, and the salute which all the correspondents are waiting for before they send news of the arrival, has not been fired. Bar Harbor is not to know anything about it until about Friday, when the secretary will review the naval dress parade of the forces at Woodbury park, and be in a safe position to notify Admiral Luce of his arrival. This ceremony will be novel and interesting, and includes the landing of troops on the beach, formation in procession and line of battle. Much interest is felt here in seeing what will be done at the numerous social affairs to which Secretary Whitney and Admiral Luce have both been invited.

A fancy ball was given at the Newport hotel, Bar Harbor, on the evening of the 16th inst., by the summer visitors, in honor of Rear Admiral Stephen B. Luce, commander-in-chief of the naval forces on the North Atlantic station, and the officers of the Richmond, Galena, Ossipee, Yantic, Atlantic and Dolphin. Among the most prominent naval officers in attendance were: Admiral Luce, Captain Robert Boyd of the flagship Richmond, Captain F. M. Bunce of the Atlanta, Commander William Bainbridge Hoff of the Ossipee, Commander F. F. Wilde of the Dolphin, Commander Francis Green of the Yantic, Commander C. M. Custer of the Galena, and Lieutenants John S. Abbott, John F. Lincoln and Charles H. Hill.

A New York despatch of the 17th inst., says: "The old war vessel Ticonderoga, which has been lying in the Brooklyn navy yard for so many years that it has become 'haunted' in the eyes of the sailors, was hauled out of rotton-row to-day, and in the wake of a vigorous tug began her last cruise. She was bound for Boston, where lives the man who purchased her at auction six months ago. He intends to break her up, and use the timbers and iron still remaining in condition. The Ticonderoga was built in the Brooklyn navy yard in 1862, and was pretty badly broken up at the close of the war. She was practically rebuilt then, and served at several foreign stations. In 1880 and 1881 she made a voyage around the world under command of Rear Admiral Schufeldt. Upon her return she was sent to the Brooklyn navy yard, and a board of naval survey condemned her as unfit for service. A story was published a short time ago about her bell, an old cracked affair, which, when placed on the Arctic ship Thetis, rang out in such a ghastly manner that several sailors deserted. The bell was removed, and lies in a loft at the navy yard."

Undisputed Merit.

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder, is due to the extreme care exercised by its manufacturers to make it entirely pure, uniform in quality, and the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge, care and skill, attained by a twenty years' practical experience, are contributed toward this end, and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with a greater accuracy, precision and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients, is definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials used or the manufacture of the powder, who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence, always pure, wholesome and uniform in quality. Each box is exactly like every other, and will retain its powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, any time. The government chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness, and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivalled.

The strained relations between the president and his ex-secretary of the treasury have been increased by a recent move to oust Mr. Manning from an interest in an Albany paper. Mr. Cleveland's most colossal blunder was committed when, on discovering that the strong point of his administration was the ability of Mr. Manning, he undertook to shake his minister of finance and go it alone. From that time he has steadily lost caste with that conservative element which perhaps would have stood by him in his efforts to obtain a second term.

Samuel Clark, of Eliot, who died on Sunday, the 14th inst., after a short illness of brain trouble, aged forty-seven years, was well known in York county. Mr. Clark was a farmer's son, and lived on the old homestead; was a successful business man, had held important town offices, and had collected the taxes of the town for a number of years. He was engaged in the manufacture of bricks, and owned quite a stock of blood horses. He leaves a wife, a daughter and a son.

Mrs. Patrick Welch of Sanford, Me., killed herself on the 17th inst. with "rough on rats." She leaves a husband and two children.

The Biddeford board of trade had a clambake at the Pool on the 17th inst. The day was observed as a general holiday by business men, stores being closed at eleven o'clock. A steamer took a crowd of people to the grounds, making two extra trips. The clambake was furnished at the expense of the board of trade.

Smith S. Nelson of Gilmanton was struck by a passenger train and thrown from his carriage Monday night, Aug. 15th, and died on the 17th. He remained unconscious from the time of the accident. His age was seventy-two years, and he leaves a large property.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

"UNDER WHICH KING?"

The Board of Mayor and Aldermen, at their meeting on the evening of the 11th inst.,—their first one after inauguration—postponed to Friday evening, the 19th, the election of city marshal, assistant marshals and police officers. Such action is not unusual, and was quite usual under republican administrations, before the democrats secured absolute control of city affairs. The policeman's lot is not a happy one, to our thinking, but there have always been so many candidates that it was a hard job to make choice, as the rejected ones were sure to be wrathful, of course.

This evening, unless they again postpone the unpleasant duty, the aldermen must elect a marshal and subordinate officers for the current year. Not being admitted to the inner councils of the democracy we cannot say who the new city marshal will be; some of the aldermen we understand are for re-electing Marshal Norton, while others favor Mr. Jefferson C. Rowe, who has but one arm, though otherwise well qualified for the place. We are equally in the dark as to the choice of assistant marshals, and policemen; but we are sured that Ozro J. Hobbs, captain of the night watch, will have to go.

If the report that Capt. Hobbs is to be dropped shall prove to be correct, we shall regret it; not from any personal or partisan reason, but because he is as good an officer as is now or for years has been on the force, and because his retirement would be hailed by the hoodlum element, already quite prominent enough, as a decided victory for them. Whatever of discipline has prevailed in the night watch since his appointment, has been due to him more than to all other officials combined; and in saying this we detract nothing from the efforts of the late excellent and energetic mayor, who more than once exercised his authority as chief magistrate of the city with salutary vigor, in police matters.

The hoodlums have decided that Capt. Hobbs must go. On the night of the disgraceful row at the railroad station, on the 3d inst., one of the leaders of that element remarked, "Just hold on till next Thursday night; —— him, we'll put him out." Possibly this may be the result; but even from the narrowest partisan point of view we should think it would hardly pay for the democratic aldermen to run the police business in accordance with the wishes of the Jacky Sullivans and Wildy Murphys of the party.

POLICE COURT--BATCHELDER J.

THURSDAY, Aug. 18th.

William Woolsey, for drunkenness, was sentenced to six months at the county farm, and to pay $6.90 costs.

Benjamin Johnson and George Cotton, drunk, fine $3, costs 6.90, each; county farm in default of payment.

NEVER MIND THE LAW.

Mr. Editor: A portion of Sec. 2, Chap. 48, of the General Laws of New Hampshire, reads as follows:

No person shall be elected by the city councils, or appointed by the mayor and aldermen to any office of profit, who at the time of such election or appointment is a member of the board of aldermen or common council.

Mr. Dennis Lynes, for several years past driver of one of the city teams during the week, and of the fire department supply wagon whenever demanded, has been dismissed, and Mr. Frederick J. Haddock, a member of the common council from ward one, has taken his place. Is not this in direct violation of the law of the state as quoted above? Mr. Lynes is a skilled horse man and driver, and has been very efficient and attentive to his duties; Mr. Haddock may be equally as good, but it is only a "may be;" but assuming that he is as capable a man for the place as Mr. Lynes, is not his election or appointment to the place a distinct violation of the law by the appointing power? Box.

THE OSSIPEE COMING.

It was announced on Thursday, the 18th inst., that the U. S. S. Ossipee would sail from Bar Harbor on Friday for this station, and would arrive here on Saturday, to be docked for examination as to the extent of the injuries, if any, which she received by touching the rocks at Halifax, N. S., recently.

FARMERS' FIELD MEETING.

The second annual farmers' field meeting, under the auspices of the state board of agriculture, will be held at Boar's Head, Hampton beach, Tuesday, August 30th. The exercises will be held in a canvas pavilion near the Boar's Head house, unless the day is stormy, in which case the parlors of the hotel will be used. The forenoon session, commencing at 10:30 o'clock, will be given to a discussion of the following subject: "Utilization of waste products as food for growing crops;" Prof. G. H. Whitcher, professor of agriculture and superintendent of the College farm at Hanover, will present a paper, which will be followed by remarks from well-known agriculturists who will be present. At the afternoon session, commencing at two o'clock, the following question will be considered: "Has there been any agricultural progress in the state of New Hampshire within the past thirty years, and if so, why?" Hon. Moses Humphrey of Concord, president of the board of agriculture, will open the discussion, and will be followed with an address by Hon. J. B. Walker of Concord. A general discussion will follow by the members of the board, and prominent agriculturists of this state, Maine and Massachusetts. It is desired that the meeting represent the various agricultural interests of the state, and all members of the grange, farmers' clubs, fair associations and citizens generally throughout the state are earnestly requested to be present and participate in the exercises.

In response to a second call from the Court street Christian church of this city, Rev. John A. Hainer of Millbridge, Me., has announced his acceptance. He will assume charge of the parish about the middle of October.

Open-air religious meetings are to be held on the wharf near the Aqueduct company's property on Mechanic street next week.

The Magee furnace manufactory is to be removed to Boston; nine of the men who have been employed in the work here go to Boston, and Mr. Wardwell will go as foreman of the shop.

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal says: "A prominent legal gentleman thinks a mandamus can be obtained from the United States' court to compel Collector Page to show his records. There is no doubt about the construction of the law, he says; the collector is obliged to show his books. We predict that measures will be taken before long to find out whether Collector Page is a bigger man than Uncle Sam."

Alma college, of which Mr. Charles A. Davis of this city, and of Bowdoin college class of '86, has just been elected a professor, is a new college founded by the Presbyterians, nearly in the centre of the state of Michigan. Alma is a new town in a rich farming country, and is about the size of Exeter in this state; it has many fine residences and several large hotels, making some pretensions to be a watering place on the strength of having mineral springs of considerable celebrity in that section. It is about thirty miles east of Saginaw City, where a number of former Portsmouth men are located, and doing well. The president of Alma college, Prof. George F. Hunting, will be remembered by many citizens of Portsmouth and Newcastle as Lieutenant Hunting of the army, who was stationed at Fort Constitution, Newcastle, for several years after the close of the war of the rebellion.

MARITIME NOTES.

The queerly-modelled boat which came down from Candia by rail on the 17th inst., and was launched in the north pond, is named "Zouxis." We do not know where the name comes from nor what it means, but it is not more odd-looking than the boat. She will be a comfortable craft to cruise in, however, we have no doubt, if she floats.

A despatch of Aug. 17th from Canso, N. S., says "American fishermen passing through the straits, bound homeward, report mackerel scarce outside the three-mile limit. The Nova Scotia fleet report fish unusually scare inshore. Up to this time, as far as can be ascertained, Nova Scotia fishermen seem to have fared little if any better than their American rivals."

The U. S. S. Despatch, Lieut. Cowles commanding, sailed from Portsmouth lower harbor at eight o'clock Wednesday evening, the 17th inst., for Bar Harbor, Me.

They Smashed Something, Anyway.

The following story comes from New York: A big sycamore stump stands in front of Rolla engine company's new house near the corner of East Grand and Broad streets, Elizabeth, N. J., and the firemen want it out of the way. Yesterday a gang of men worked at it all day. After drilling a two-inch auger hole eighteen inches into the stump they pushed in a twelve-ounce cartridge of XXX dynamite, and laid a heavy flagstone over the hole. Then one of the men puffed at his clay pipe until it glowed and, touching the end of the fuse with burning tobacco, sought safety in a neighboring cellar. A few seconds later there was a deafening report, and right afterward it began to rain chunks of bluestone over a large section of Elizabeth. Folks thought that a boiler explosion had occurred. The flagstone was gone, but the sturdy old stump was as prominent as ever. The front of the new engine house looked as if it had been bombarded with shrapnell shells. Four large windows were smashed, and chunks were knocked from the stonework of the sills and copings.

Richard Bean, of Boston, a herdic driver, his brother John, also a hackman, and a sister, who is the wife of a member of the Springfield fire department, have been notified that they are joint heirs to a fortune of $10,000,000, left by Thomas Bean, who recently died at Bonham, Texas. The family belonged at Fredericton, N. B., and the heirs are the children of Thomas Bean's brother.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quanties by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quanties by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

—The New Haven Palladium, commenting on advice to put a mosquito under a microscope, exclaims: "Don't you do it! Put him under a pile driver. No microscope that was ever made is capable of doing exact scientific justice to a mosquito. And even a pile driver is liable to miss him."

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

—A small hand is said to be a sign of refinement. How vulgar, then, must be the man who holds four aces.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness and give strength and rest. Try them.

—The crop of sauer kraut threatens to be short. The rise in the price of tobacco makes cabbage leaves too valuable to make kraut of.

Cocaine, iodoform or mecurials in any form in the treatment of catarrh or hay fever should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of acute and chronic cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price fifty cents of druggists.

—Pastor: "Thomas! Don't you think your parents would feel very sore if they knew you was fishing on the Sabbath?" Thomas: "Yes, sir; but not half as sore as I'd feel if they found it out."

Cured of Wrenched Spine.

How many men given to heavy labor go through life with a kind of hitch in the backbone caused by wrenching at some period in their younger days. Let all such take heed from the following letter:

Lyndonville, Orleans Co., N. Y., March 3, 1886.—Some years ago, while loading sheep on the railroad, I badly wrenched my back. I was confined to my bed for four weeks, being partially paralyzed. As I could get no relief, I put on my spine three Allcock's Plasters from the small of my back up between my shoulders. From that day I began to get better, suffering less pain all the time. I put fresh plasters on every ten days, and in a month I was well and attending to my business. C. R. BENTLEY.

—No microbes have ever been found in tobacco. They are probably afraid that devotion to the weed would injure their constitution.

MAXIMILIAN.

The widow of Gen. Miramon, who was Maximilian's companion in captivity and who perished with him, has written her memoirs. They are as yet unpublished, but a friend was allowed to read some portions of the book, among others the chapter describing the last act of the melancholy drama of June 19, 1867. We give these touching pages as follows:

The prisoners had been incarcerated in the convent of the Capuchins, a square, heavy, massive building constructed on the usual model of Spanish convents. On the first floor a narrow court with high walls led into a corridor thirty-six feet long and about nine feet wide, upon which opened three cells. They still bore the names which had been given them by the Capuchin Sisters. The first, called "Eleven Thousand Virgins," was occupied by Gen. Mejia; the second, called "Santa Rosa," by Gen. Miramon, and the third, "Santa Theresa," more spacious than the others, was allotted to the emperor. The austerity of the cloister was evident in the interior of these cells, tarnsformed into prisons. A brick floor, whitwashed walls, a narrow camp-bed, two or three chairs, a table, and washstand of the simplest description.

It was 8 o'clock in the evening, and the emperor was at dinner, seated on the camp-bed with a tray on his knees which held the dishes. On the little table of white wood was a candelabra with several wax candles which lighted the room, and Maximilian's shadow was thrown with vivid distinctness on the straight, bare, white walls. Near him were Gen. and Mme. Miramon. All three were silent and absorbed in mournful thought. The general, worn out by the insults which had been heaped upon the vanquished, by his long hours of imprisonment, and the struggle to defend his honor—not his life, for that he knew was in the power of judges who knew no pity—was profoundly touched by the faithful devotion of his young wife, and never had he loved her so well as in those dark hours of imprisonment and despair. He held her hand in his, and involuntarily carried it to his lips. This gesture was observed by the emperor and his eyes filled with tears. The general and Mme. Miramon, deeply affected, thought that a recollection of the empress caused this sudden emotion.

"No," said Maximilian, "but I never realized until now the extent of your devotion to me, and I suffer acutely in being the cause of your separation."

"Ah! sire," said Miramon, "if I had listened to the counsels of my wife, I would never have been here."

"And I am here because I did listen to the counsels of mine," replied the emperor.

On the 16th of June, toward midday, the prisoners breakfasted, and Mme. Miramon was still with her husband when the fiscal, Aspiroz, presented himself, and announced that the indulto was rejected, and that they would be executed at 3 o'clock the same day.

Gen. Miramon reproached the fiscal Aspiroz, for having announced such an order in the presence of Mme. Miramon, and entreated her and Mme. Cobo to leave him, and make preparations for his burial. He wished them to see that his grave was made ready in the cemetery of San. Fernando, in Mexico, by the side of his father, and that his heart was buried at the foot of the grave of Gen. Osolio, one of his earliest and dearest friends.

Mme. Miramon and Mme. Cobo left the cell, weeping bitterly, to fulfill their heart-breaking mission.

Gen. Miramon wrote several letters. He said to Gen. Partearroyo: "I am to die in three hours, although they have not been able to bring forward a single proof of treason, on which charge I am condemned; but my death is determined upon, and it will soon be over."

The condemned dressed himself in deep mourning; Gen. Mejia alone wore his faya or sash, the insignia of his rank as general. They came out of the cells, and waited in the long, narrow corridor for the order to start.

Three o'clock struck.

The court was crowded with soldiers under arms. They, too, were waiting for orders. How slowly the time passed in this awful suspense. It was the warmest part of the day; the air was close and heavy. The noises in city were hushed. Nothing was heard but the clanking of sabers and the voices of the officers.

Half-past 3 struck.

A few minutes to 4 an aid-de-camp of Gen. Ezcobedo appeared; brought an order to delay the execution for three days. Mme. Miramon was at home, waiting to receive the body of her husband. The hours had dragged slowly on in the mortal agony of her waiting, when suddenly several persons rushed into the courtyard to tell her of the delay that had been granted the condemned. She hastened to the prison, but Gen. Miramon, hoping to spare her a repetition of the anguish she had just passed through begged her to go at once to San Luis Potosi, and plead for mercy from Juaraz. She might hope to obtain it now, since he had mortally suffered death. She hesitated, for it was impossible to go and return in three days, and should her prayers prove unavailing she would not be there to receive her husband's last farewell. But the emperor insisted.

Early on Monday June 17, Mme. Miramon took the diligence and started for San Luis Potosi. There she found supporters in M. Riva Palacio, and M. Martinez de la Torre, defenders of Maximilian; in the ministers of Austria Hungary and Prussia, and also in the Juarist general, Jeronimo Trevio, who did not fail to exhibit his usual nobility of soul, and his entreaties were so earnest that Juarez hesitated and seemed about to relent. Just at that moment M. S. Lerda de Tejado appeared. He was Juarez' minister of foreign affairs—a very small man with a bald head, an extremely aquiline nose, and a small, slightly twisted mouth. He said to Juarez:

"It must be to-day or never, Monsieur le President that you consolidate the peace of the republic."

The emperor was the empire. Gen. Miramon was young and brave. He was undoubtedly the first military mar. in Mexico. Gen. Mejia was of pure Mexican blood and a very brave soldier, who was extremely popular among the Indians of the Cordilleras and the Sierra. These three men must be put out of the way.

Juarez, strengthened in his first resolution by the speech of Lerdo de Tejado, decided that the execution should take place on the 19th.

Col. Palacio had charge of the prisoners, whose regard he had won by his great kindness. He entered the cell of Miramon, who said to him:

"Colonel, has the place of execution been decided upon?"

"Not that I know of general."

"I think they will choose the Cerro de las Campanas."

"I think so, too," stammered the colonel.

"Ah, well; so much the better. It is a very conspicuous spot."

Miramon sat up till midnight, at which hour M. Lombardo, brother of Mme. Miramon, brought him the following telegram:

All is lost. Adieu until we meet in heaven. CONCHA DE MIRAMON.

Miramon crushed the telegram in his fingers. "My only regret in dying is to leave my wife. Leave me now," he said to M. Lombardo, "but be at the Cerro to-morrow with my other friends who have promised to be there. Bring a covering to throw over my body to conceal it from curiosity."

Miramon slept three hours; he took a cup of chocolate, and dressed himself with the greatest care. At 6 o'clock he was ready to start, accompanied by a priest—M Ladron de Guevera.

In the corridor he found the emperor, who was bidding farewell to the licentiate Eulalio Ortega. The sun was rising, and his rays shone on the high plateaus resplendent in the valley of Queretaro. Its joyous light penetrated even to the narrow court of the convent.

"What a beautiful day, Don Eulalio," said the emperor. "I would have chosen just such a day for my death."

At that moment a clarion sounded, and the emperor, who did not know what it meant, said to Gen. Miramon:

"Miguel, is that for the execution?"

"Indeed, sire, I can not tell you; this is the first time I have ever been shot."

The hour had struck.

The condemned got into a carriage and were driven along the streets of Queretaro through a crowd which pressed around them with every mark of respect and sorrow. Handkerchiefs were waved, and the sound of loud sobs reached their ears. The prisoners returned the greetings of the crowd, among whom they recognized many familiar faces. Some minutes before 7 o'clock they arrived at the Cerro de las Campanas, which was about two miles from the city. They descended from the carriages, walked half-way up the hill, and leaned against a clump of cactus trees. The officer commanding the troops, Gen. J. Garcia de Leon, read the order of the day, condemning to death any person attempting to oppose the execution, and the word was given to the condemned. The sun was already high in a cloudless heaven, shining in the deep azure of those grand altitudes, flooding the whole valley with an intense light. The Cerro, like an immense rock flung in the valley, rose bare and yellow, with here and there on its sides green clusters of cactus and fig trees. A square of four thousand men surrounded it in straight lines. They were in full uniform, with bayonets gleaming in the sunlight. Beyond them was a dense and motley crowd. On the west, through the prairie, the road to Celayo wound like a long, white, dusty ribbon. The lines of snow-white terraces in Queretaro were plainly visible, dotted here and there with green trees and surmounted with cupolas and numerous crosses. In the distance rose the blue peaks of the Cordilleras.

The officer commanding the platoon who were to fire approached the emperor and besought his pardon for the duty which he was about to perform. The emperor distributed among the soldiers several gold coins bearing his effigy, and requested them in firing to spare his face. Then he embraced Gens. Mejia and Miramon, and as the latter was placed on his right hand Maximilian said in a loud voice:

"The brave deserve respect from monarchs even in death. General, pass to the place of honor."

Miramon passed to the center. With a perfectly firm, distinct voice the emperor addressed the crowd:

"Mexicans, the men of my race and country are born to make their people happy or to die martyrs. May my blood be the last shed for the redemption of this unhappy country. Vive le Mexique!"

Then Gen. Miramon, with the same clear, ringing voice that has sounded on the battle-field, cried:

"Mexicans, before the council of war my defenders sought only to save my life. At this moment, when I am about to appear before my God, I protest against the name of 'traitor,' which has been thrown in my face to justify my condemnation. Let the Mexican people clear the name of my children from such a stain of infamy, and may my country be happy. Vive le Mexique!"

Gen. Mejia, raising his eyes to heaven, said: "Most Holy Mother, I pray that Thy Son may pardon me, as I pardon those who have condemned me to death."

The soldiers fired, and as the wreaths of smoke slowly cleared away they could see Maximilian writhing in his blood. He groaned faintly, "Hay Hambre."

A second volley of musketry ended his sufferings.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as that breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful soft and delicate envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammeling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. Sanford's Radical Cure, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one Bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

The Forthcoming Report.

Secretary Whitney is by no means an idle man. Above all things, he is quick to act upon a fresh idea, as he is always in advance of every one in the navy in his movements relating to construction of vessels, etc. Hadly had the exercises at Bar Harbor on Friday been concluded, than the active Minister of Marine Warfare dictated to his stenographer the portion of his coming report to Congress concerning our naval prowess. In reads substantially as follows:

"During the past year complaints had reached the executive ear that the rights of the fishermen of Massachusetts, from which state are sent vessels to catch fish upon the coast of the British provinces, that unwarranted seizures had been made by Canadian officers, illegal fines had been imposed, and the vessels, crews and owners had been subjected to various annoyances not contemplated in our treaty relations with Great Britain. Notwithstanding the fact that it would be far better if these Massachusetts men would quietly purchase their fish from the Canadians, instead of persisting in the exercise of an ancient and rapidly-growing-obsolete right to catch them from their own vessels, proper measures were at once taken to maintain our rights in the premises. The North Atlantic squadron, at the time under the command of Admiral Stephen B. Luce, an officer well grounded is international law (as was one of the ships in the harbor of Halifax) was at once sent to the scene of action. The sight of the formidable vessels of the navy of the United States, backed by the liberal appropriation of an economic but judicious Congress, had a wonderful effect in speedily convincing the British authorities that the Standard (oil) of this country shed over the waters of the bay of Fundy could quell the most turbulent outbreak of provincial annoyance. The fleet having accomplished its mission fell back to its base of supplies at Bar Harbor.

As its destination was to a Maine port, some of the officers of the flag-ship, whereon there are frequent calls to exercise hospitality, purchased a supply of English ale which they sought to take on board. This it was claimed was a violation of an English statute, which prohibited such munitions of war to be sold except by a government contractor. Fortunately the officer on the flag-ship whose duty it was to see to these supplies, was a kinsman of a distinguished lawyer of Massachusetts, who had given this subject an extended investigation. It was shown to the too hasty authorities that the flag-ship was a foreign man-of-war in a friendly port. The amenities of friendship had been so liberally extended by the admiral that there could be no doubt upon that head. All writers upon International law agree upon the proposition that the ground for seizure was illegal, because the Richmond was a foreign war ship in a friendly port; when a foreign man-of-war, while in a port of a friendly nation, orders supplies, no matter of what kind, no municipal officer can lawfully take away or confiscate them once they are delivered. 'Morton's International Law' lays down that a foreign war ship entering a port is not subject in any respect to the local laws. This attempt at harrassing one of the ships of our navy in obtaining needed supplies while in a non-belligerent port will be severely frowned upon. It was an apparent attempt to cripple our service, especially as when the vessel was bound to a port in a prohibition state she might be regarded as 'in distress!'

The exercises at Bar Harbor on the 19th of August were of the most satisfactory character. The naval forces of Great Britain recently made a sham attack, and attempted to capture a town upon the coast of England. In our case the attack was real. Bar Harbor at once acknowledged the supremacy of the navy. Admiral Luce and his officers won the hearts of the summer residents as easily as they subdued the belles of Halifax, and though the seamen frequently complained of a proper lack of material for the purposes of splicing the main brace, the officers found no deprivation of the enjoyment of kindred spirits. It is recommended that a Naval club-house for use of the department be constructed at Bar Harbor, as the place is a convenient base of supplies in case our squadron is ever again obliged to visit the Canadian waters while upon a peaceful or warlike errand, so that the officers of the navy may not be subjected to the need of enquiring as to the license of a dealer or be otherwise subject to local laws in the purchase of needed supplies."

Orders were issued on the 17th inst. from the navy department to the commandant of the New York and Norfolk navy yards to prepapare schedules of the new tools required to fit those yards for building modern steel war vessels. All of the tools will be purchased by contract after advertisement. Constructor Pook, of the New York navy yard, says that the allowance of $75,000 for extending the plant of that yard will be sufficient to place the yard on an equal footing with the best private shipbuilding establishment in the country. An equal allowance has been made for the purchase of tools for the Norfolk navy yard, and will suffice to equip it so that a complete modern iron-clad can be built there. Nothing is said about the Portsmouth navy yard, which Constructor Wilson years ago in official reports said could be put in thorough condition for building iron or steel ships, or iron-clads, at an expense of but $50,000. But New York and Virginia are states which must be carried for Cleveland and reform, and New Hampshire does not amount to a row of pins in the political situation at present, so the Brooklyn and Norfolk navy yards must be nourished, while the Piscataqua yard is wholly ignored.

The attempt to obtain a faster mail service between Boston and New York has proved, as might have been expected, ineffectual. The mistake lies in Boston attempting to go it alone. When a mail reaches Boston it must be sent either to the local post-office, or hauled across the city to await the departure of trains for the east. Now when there is a continuous line of rail over which can start at once the New York mails to be transported to the extreme east, it may be an object to accommodate Boston incidentally with other sections of the country. Boston is now so reliably democratic that it is of no especial use for the administration to make any extraordinary effort to accommodate her business men.

Mr. Austin Corbin, formerly of Newport, offers to pay the state a half a million for its rights under the charter of the Concord railroad. Jay Gould was seen by a party who wished to make an offer, but Mr. Gould had bought a railroad that day at about two millions, and wanted to think of it. It is thought if Corbin would attach to his offer the agreement to pay the costs of the present lobby in the Concord's interest, it might be accepted.

The Railroad Question.

The committee on railroads in the house of representatives have voted, eight to four, to report the Hazen bill with some new features, on Tuesday. The minority of the committee, of which Mr. Moore of Nashua is the shining light, will have an adverse report which Mr. Moore will defend in a speech. The debate in the house from whatever members, after the protracted hearing and arguments before the committee, will result probably in nothing more than giving certain members a chance to speak upon a question concerning the merits of which every member, by this time, must be abundantly informed.

Rev. Mr. Scott, the Methodist clergyman of Hudson, this state, had one of his ankles crushed and was otherwise injured at the railroad catastrophe at Chattsworth, Illinois. He will recover, however, though it will be a long time before he will be able to attend to his usual duties.

George W. Marston, Esq., formerly editor and associate proprietor of this paper, is in town on a visit from the west.

Mr. George Hoyt, one of the three young men who went west last spring to grow up with the country, arrived home on Friday; he desires no more wild west in his.

Mr. Howard L. Aiken and wife, of Brookline, Mass., arrived in this city on Friday on a visit of several weeks to Miss Kate P. Johnson, on Rye road.

MARITIME NOTES.

A Washington despatch of the 18th inst. says that "Leander White has been appointed keeper of the light at Goat Island, N. H., vice John Emerson, removed; and Ellison C. White keeper of Whale's-back light, N. H., vice Leander White, transferred." There is something of a mixture in this despatch, evidently, Whale's-back being in Maine, and no Goat island light in New Hampshire that we know of.

The schooner Agnes E. Downs, Downs master, arrived in Newport, R. I., on the 19th inst., having since leaving this port been as far east as Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. She took about 200 barrels of large mackerel in Buzzard's bay on the two nights before her arrival at Newport. The schooner Grace K. Green, Seaward master, was in port at Newport on the 17th.

Congress will be called upon to decide whether or not the famous old battleship Hartford shall be repaired or turned into junk.

Rev. Mr. Hainer of Brooklyn, N. Y., will preach in the Court street Christian church to-morrow.

A gentleman, evidently of culture and refinement, (from his success in the interstate commerce he was promoting,) has turned up in Portland, Me., as the representative and landlord of the Kearsarge house of this city. Not only have innumerable letters come to the house from various parties, enquiring as to their duties and schedule of work, but two or three or more, who have deposited from $12 to $15 with the supposed proprietor, have come to this city to assume the positions so readily accredited them. The Kearsarge house has telegraphed to Portland to catch the swindler if possible. He uses cards, envelopes and letter-heads of the house, any of which may be easily taken from the office of any live hotel.

Steamship Burned.

Home Rule is proven to actually exist in one of England's provinces, by an article in the September "Harper's" on the Isles of Man. Dr. Richard Wheatley shows that this Island of Mona has long enjoyed the right of controlling her own affairs, after a fashion, and has been gradually strengthening her independence, until now she makes her own laws, administers her own justice, and thrives in a well-arranged system of self-government, with only a governor appointed by the crown to represent her fealty to the queen. Some of the Manx laws and customs retain their ancient quaintness, but the prosperity of the Lilliputian state furnishes an encouraging instance of what intelligent Home Rule can do. The article is illustrated by views of the chief cities of Man, a portrait of the governor, an engraving of the legislative House of Keys in session, and a map of the island.

Senator Frye of Maine, who has just returned from Europe, has been interviewed upon the fishery trouble and national politics. He says that Mr. Blaine is in good health, and that Cleveland will be the democratic nominee for president.

It is announced that Wilson McDonald, a New York sculptor, is making a bust of Rev. Dr. McGlynn. Our impression is that the learned and earnest but not well balanced doctor is pretty effectually busted already.

At the recent Limerick, Ireland, sessions three persons were sentenced under the crimes act, two to six months imprisonment and one to four months, for resisting the sheriff.

The princess of Wales, with her daughter, have arrived at Klambenborg, Denmark. They were welcomed by all the members of the Danish royal family, and the king of Greece.

During a heavy shower on the 11th inst. a bolt of lightning struck a tree near George Sanborn's house in Sandown. A simultaneous bolt or part of the same one entered the house, tore off the plastering in one or more rooms, shook up a tall old-fashioned clock, and discharged a loaded fowling piece that stood in the corner of the clock. No one was injured, and comparatively little damage was done.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantities by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

The agent of the German Baptist Publication Society, Cleveland, O., Mr. H. Schulte, writes: "We keep St. Jacobs Oil on hand and consider it most valuable in case of burns, scalds, etc." Use according to directions.

—A stranger stepped into a Chicago shooting gallery a day or two ago and spent a few minutes in firing at a target. In six shots he broke a window in the side of the building, destroyed one of the gas fixtures, put a hole through his hat which he had hung on a wall, and lamed a dog. The owner of the shooting gallery suspects him of being an escaped French duelist.

What a Pity

That so many otherwise attractive, polite, and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

—In Boston a horse car stopped on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets; the conductor rushed into a bank and asked the teller for one dollar bills in exchange for a fifty dollar greenback. As small bills were not abundant the conductor gladly took fifty silver dollars, and, in rather a jovial way, remarked that it was "desirable kind of change to give the man who, for the second time, was trying to evade his fare" by tendering a fifty dollar note, relying upon the inability of the conductor to change so large a bill.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too. Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness and give strength and rest. Try them.

Cured of Wrenched Spine.

How many men given to heavy labor go through life with a kind of hitch in the backbone caused by wrenching at some period in their younger days. Let all such take heed from the following letter:

Lyndonville, Orleans Co., N. Y., March 3, 1886.—Some years ago, while loading sheep on the railroad, I badly wrenched my back. I was confined to my bed for four weeks, being partially paralyzed. As I could get no relief, I put on my spine three Allcock's Plasters from the small of my back up between my shoulders. From that day I began to get better, suffering less pain all the time. I put fresh plasters on every ten days, and in a month I was well and attending to my business. C. R. BENTLEY.

BABY HUMORS

And all Skin and Scalp Diseases Speedily

Cured by Cuticura.

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in a aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more disfiguring. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assails the membranes lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughs and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply preconstitutional sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

"Mother Is Dead."

Sorrow broods upon blackened wing.
Death has come with its cruel sting;
Hearts are bleeding, pleading and crushed,
While rooms are darkened and voices hushed.
A mother sleeps, and a world of care
Has passed from the brow of marble there;
And the sweet, white lips are closed for aye.
Heedless, at last, to the children's cry.

A motherless brood, with aching hearts,
A new, fresh grief, as each day departs;
Nothing remains save a deep, black pall,
And mourning echoes through room and hall,—
Echoes of earth on a coffin lid,
Thoughts of a face forever hid,
Shafts of pain that pierce and rend,
Sobbing farewells to our only friend.

Echoes of mother's words and song,
Echoes that come in a hurrying throng—
Or kindness, and love, and patient ways,
Of watching care through nights and days.
Memory of hands with toil acquaint,
Or burdens borne with no complaint;
Echoes of prayers, and hopes, and fears,
A perfect trust through many years;

Echoes of that we did or said
To whiten the hair in that mother's head;
Memory of acts, in a childish mood,
That showed to her ingratitude.
Vainly we call, and cry, and weep,
We cannot awaken from that sleep
The mother who loved us and gave us birth,
Her dear form rests 'neath a swell of earth.

But night has fallen, the day is done,
And sorrow reigns in his dread, black throne.
"Mother is dead!" is our wailing cry,
And hollow echoes go hurrying by.
Oh! who can tell of a mother's love?
Who can measure, save God above?
And who can tell of a mother's loss,
Save those who bear that heavy cross?

—Day Davidson, in Good Housekeeping.

A BRAVE FELLOW.

A Young Soldier, Too Sick to Work, Ordered to be Shot by Gen. Bragg.

When Gen. Bragg's army evacuated Corinth, Miss., in 1862, there was a great deal of sickness among the soldiers, nearly one-fourth of the army being unfit for service.

Capt. S. R. Weston, of Company H, 5th Georgia regiment, and myself (belonging to Company E, same regiment), were on the sick list and not able to march, but still able to do light duty. So we were put in charge of the sick of our regiment, who were to be sent down on a separate train. While we were at the depot getting the men aboard and looking to their comfort, we noticed another squad to our left, as we faced the town, loading another train with quartermaster's and commissary stores, and everybody seemed to be in a hurry and in some confusion. Every straggler was put to work, and many of the sick were made to work who ought to have been in bed. Some boisterous, overbearing fellow was bossing the job, and if he ordered a man to go to work and he refused he reported him at once to Gen. Bragg, who seemed to be superintending the whole movement in person.

Finally a young soldier came along on his way to the cars for the sick. He appeared to be about 20 years of age, tall and handsome, but pale and delicate. The man (or brute) commanding the work squad saw him and yelled out:

"Say, young man, fall in here and go to work! Heave these goods into these cars, and be quick about it."

The young man replied:

"I am not able to work. If I were I would be with my company."

"Eh? Won't work, eh? We'll see about that. General!" he hollowed out to Gen. Bragg, who was passing, "here's a man who refuses to work," pointing at the youth, who stood as firm as a rock. Gen. Bragg stopped and gazed at the young man, his eyes blazing as no other man's eyes can blaze, and repeated the order to help load those cars at once. The young man repeated his former answer, that he was not able to work; had he been able to work he would be able to march, and would be with his command.

The general's eyes seemed to flash fire as he exclaimed:

"What! You dare to disobey my orders?"

"I do," calmly replied the young man.

The general called a lieutenant of a Louisiana company of regulars doing guard duty, and said:

"Take six of your company and carry this man to that grove and shoot him."

The lieutenant called out six of his men and ordered them to load their guns, and while they were doing so Gen. Bragg beckoned the lieutenant, stepped behind a garden wall, spoke to him in a low tone not heard by any one else and walked away. The guard marched the young man to the grove, about one hundred yards to our right, placed him upon a stool against a large oak and started to blindfold him, which he would not permit, but took off his gold watch and chain and a fine gold ring from his finger, handed them to the lieutenant, and requested him to send them to his mother, at the same time writing her name and address on a piece of paper and handing it to the lieutenant, resumed his position against the tree, and, with a proud smile upon his lips and without a tremor in his voice, said:

"Now, sir, I am ready.

The lieutenant stepped off ten paces, brought his men to "attention," and commanded, in a loud voice, distinctly heard by us: "Ready! Aim!"

I became so weak I thought I should faint, and caught hold of a small oak for support and closed my eyes to shut out the awful deed. There sat the young man, gazing into the muzzle of six muskets pointed at his heart, a single one of which might send his soul into eternity in the twinking of an eye. He looked on as calmly as if he was looking at a camera and was simply having his photograph taken. But the lieutenant's next command was, "Recover arms!" which was willingly and promptly obeyed. The lieutenant then stepped up to the young man, bade him rise, grasped his hand in admiration, returned his watch and ring, which he received with a polite bow and the word "Thanks," and walked away as unconcerned as if nothing unusual had occurred.

The lieutenant and his men returned to their former position, in a few paces of where we were, and pretty soon Gen. Bragg returned and asked:

"Where is the boy?"

"Gone," said the lieutenant.

"What did you do?" asked the general.

"Just exactly as you directed," replied the lieutenant. "He handed me his watch and ring to send to his mother, took his position, refused to be blindfolded, said he was ready, and never batted his eyes even when we were at aim. He's the bravest man I ever saw in my life!" And tears came into the lieutenant's eyes.

"Who is he, and where is he?" demanded the general, evincing much interest and looking in every direction.

"I don't know," answered the lieutenant. Here's his mother's name and address, handing him a slip of paper. He glanced at it, put it in his vest-pocket, and said:

"Well, find him. I'll promote him." And away they went to find the young hero.

But whether they ever found him, and if so, what came of it, I never knew.

When Gen. Bragg first gave the order to shoot the young man I suppose there were a hundred soldiers who heard it. They soon scampered away, some to work, some to hide out, others, —too sick to do either—took the places assigned them in the cars. And only Capt. Weston and myself, and perhaps two or three others, watched this episode to the end. Those others all thought, and those still living think to this day, that Gen. Bragg had that young man shot. Bragg was indeed a severe disciplinarian, but not so bad at heart as many deem him.

The Pacific Mail Steamship company, at a late meeting in New York, did not declare a dividend, though it has $500,000 in the treasury. There is a proposition to reduce the capital stock one-half.

IT WON'T BAKE BREAD.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

Mr. Gladstone writes to the editor of the London Baptist: "I have done my best to reunite the Liberals, and, except inside the house of commons, I am quite satisfied with the results."

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure God Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, the will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. The Harvest of Spoils.

The forthcoming annual report of the appointment division of the first assistant postmaster general's office will contain the following statement of changes in post-offices of all grades during the last fiscal year, ended June 30:

Number of offices established, 3,048; number discontinued, 1,500; appointments on resignations and commissions expired, 5,863; appointments on removals and suspensions, 2,584; appointments on changes of names and sites, 482; appointments on deaths of postmasters, 589. The total number of appointments of postmasters of all grades during the year was 13,079. The total number of appointments for the years 1885 and 1886 was 22,747 and 9,547 respectively, making a total for the three years of 46,373. The total number of postmesters of all grades in operation on July 1, 1887, was 55,157.

A reception was given on board the U. S. S. Yantic at Bar Harbor last Friday, and from three o'clock in the afternoon to six a constant stream of brilliantly dressed ladies and gentlemen were going from the wharf to the vessel and back again in boats. An awning had been stretched over the deck of the Yantic, from the sides of which flags and draperies were suspended. The cabins were prettily decorated with bunting. The officers of the fleet, assisted by their wives, received their friends, while the band from the flagship Richmond discoursed music. Dancing was indulged in, and refreshments served. Secretary Whitney did not attend the reception, and so far as could be learned, he and Admiral Luce had not met up to that time.

Reports received at the navy department from Philadelphia show that the new cruiser Baltimore and gunboat No. 1 are in frame and partly plated. The keel of the dynamite cruiser has been laid. The work has been much retarded by slow deliveries of steel, which prevents the employment of more than half a gang of workmen on the cruisers.

The "Dirigo Rural," hitherto published in Bangor, Me., has been absorbed by the New England Farmer, the oldest northern agricultural paper, and one of the best. Its grange edition, "Our Grange Homes," is the only distinctively grange paper in New England.

"Lippincott's Monthly Magazine" for September opens with a brilliant romance entitled "The Red Mountain Mines," by Ley Vanderpoole, author of "Buhainah," etc., in which the pioneer life of California is painted with a firm and artistic hand. An article of great and timely interest, in view of the approaching Constitutional Centennial to be held in Philadelphia, is Moncure D. Conway's "A Suppressed Statesman." It deals with the life of Edmund Randolph of Virginia, a name now almost unknown, to whom Mr. Conway insists that the initiation and ratification of the Constitution were especially due. The reader will be surprised to learn how important a personage Randolph was in his own day. He was a statesman, an orator, a political writer, a philosophical thinker. At every stage in the development of our nationality his influence was paramount. "His criticisms of the Constitution partly anticipated those of Mill, Bagehot, Karl Blind, Louis Blanc and other authors of Europe. Indeed, a number of works have recently appeared in our own country, in advocacy of organic reforms, whose writers seem unconscious that they are repeating points made by Randolph a hundred years ago." Genie Holtzmeyer (Mrs. Sidney Rosenfeldt) contributes an amusing bit of autobiography entitled "How an English Girl Sought to Make a Living." Frank Carpenter reports a conversation with the man who captured John Wilkes Booth. James Cummings writes of "Social Life at Johns Hopkins University." The poems are by Alice Wellington Rollins, A. Lampman and Robertson Trowbridge. In the Monthly Gossip the editor makes a good-natured reply to criticisms on his July talk to contributors, and in Book-Talk he reviews Howells, Haggard, Sidney Lusks, Miss Baylor and others.

Oliver Optic is still on deck, and delights vast audiences of young people every week with his new story, entitled "The Young Pilot of Lake Montoban," now running in "The Golden Argosy." This favorite juvenile weekly also presents a strong array of other attractive features for the fall months. David Ker, the well known traveller and correspondent, has a serial called "Drowned Gold," describing his own adventures when wrecked on the African coast in 1885; and there are other continued stories by such well known writers as Frank H. Converse, Arthur Lee Putnam, and Matthew White, Jr. Each number contains, moreover, a portrait and biography of some eminent man, an illustrated article on some one of the sports and pastimes or kindred topics, together with editorials, comic sketches and shorter matter, the whole going to make up a paper that well deserves the honor it has won of being called "the boys' favorite." It costs only six cents a copy at any newsdealer's, or you can obtain it for three dollars a year direct from the publisher, Frank A. Munsey, No. 81 Warren street, New York. And not only is it very interesting, but it is clean way through.

New York brokers are considering the question whether the fact that Jay Gould has recently been made a grandfather is not likely to be regarded as an over issue of the Gould stock.

Professor Spencer F. Baird, the celebrated scientist and chief of the United States fish commission, died at Wood's Hole, Mass., Aug. 19th.

Now that we are to have a new police force it is to be hoped that we may have a pound keeper who objects to having the city streets made a public pasturage ground. A generation since, Charles ——, Esq., (a prominent merchant,) was elected pound keeper as a taunt for his efforts to right the public in this direction. He attended to his business, public as well as private, and for many a year stray cattle did less damage to private grounds than they had ever done before, and less than they have done in some of the years since. Please let it be so that a gentleman can have a beautiful open lot or even have his gate open for a few minutes without the danger of having lawn, terrace or garden destroyed by wandering horses or cattle; which have no right to nutrition on the public highways. M. H.

"The Very Nice Thing," to which we referred a month or more ago, in which a gentleman of this city, who was making extensive improvements to his private grounds, gave his employes notice that in view of the superabundant openings for labor during the haying season he would stop work then and see them later, has culminated as such a Quixotic idea might be supposed to do. During the past week many of the same men have been at work on that same job, and it looks as though the present week might see even more work for so thoughtful an employer.

One Dollar. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which this can be truly said; and it is an unanswerable argument as to the strength and positive economy of this great medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself.

"For economy and comfort we use Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. C. BREWSTER, Buffalo.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of. I would not be without it in the house." MRS. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y. 100 Doses

One Dollar

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, all humors, boils, pimples, general debility, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all affections caused by impure blood or low condition of the system. Try it.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. I took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself entirely cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. My whole system has been built up and strengthened, my digestion improved, and my head relieved of the bad feeling. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used, and should not know how to do without it." MARY L. PEELE, Salem, Mass.

AT MUSIC HALL THIS EVENING.

This evening Atkinson & Cook's dramatic company open at Music hall, in "Queen's Evidence." This piece was presented here by this organization two years ago, and was considered the best play in their repertoire. The canal-lock scene and rushing of the waters are thrillingly realistic, and the comedy elements furnished by Isaacs, the Jew, are in striking contrast to the story of the play. "The Marble Heart," underlined for Tuesday night, is one of the strongest compositions on the modern stage.

A party of twenty-five westerners, stopping at the Wentworth, Newcastle, have purchased a block of seats for this evening's performance.

Tickets at Goodrich's; popular prices; see advertisement.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. James T. Fields is at the Appledore house.

Fred W. Lydston is on a week's vacation at Alton Bay.

Ex-Governor P. C. Cheney is to sail for Boston from Liverpool on the Pavonia this week.

The poet Whittier called upon the poet Stedman at Kelp Rock cottage in Newcastle last week.

Mr. John Swett of Boston, formerly of this city, arrived in town Saturday afternoon for a few days' visit.

Mr. Charles H. Magraw, in the employ of George A. Jackson, of this city, is at Alton Bay for a few days.

Mr. William Colby and sister, Miss Ella Colby, of Manchester, are in this city as guests of Mr. Albert H. Sides and wife.

Mr. William P. Walker of Beverly, Mass., is in this city as the guest of Mr. William P. Walker and wife of Hanover street.

Mr. Charles E. Senter, clerk of the common council, started on Saturday with his wife on a visit to Mrs. Senter's family in Meredith.

Hon. Stillman B. Allen has left the Isles of Shoals, where he has been since the early part of the season, and gone to the White mountains.

Mr. Edward J. Moulton last week sailed on the schooner Mary Willey for Bangor, via Portland, on his fifteenth annual excursion to that region by the same conveyance.

Miss Addie Curtis of State street is visiting her aunts in Wells, Me. Mrs. Marston and daughter, of Swampscott, Mass., who have been visiting Miss Curtis, returned home on Friday last.

William B. Randall of the Times force, Clinton Locke, William Johnston, Philip Rand, Charles Stackpole and Bertram Tilton started on Saturday for Wallis' sands, Rye, to camp out for two weeks.

Miss Maud Simpson and Miss Alice Chase, of this city, are at the Prospect house, Foss' beach, Rye, for a term of several weeks. Miss Ida Caswell and Miss Mamie Simpson are at the Caswell cottage, Foss' beach.

ROBBERY AT THE SHOALS.

Information reached this city Saturday forenoon by the steamer Oceanic, from the Shoals, that the house of Lemuel B. Caswell, on Smuttynose island, had been burglarized during the previous night, and $160 in money and a quantity of cigars and tobacco carried off. Sheriff Coffin of Rockingham county was called upon by a messenger from Mr. Caswell, and in company with Dr. J. C. Stewart of York, deputy sheriff for York county, Me., went to the Shoals on the eleven o'clock boat to investigate the case. It is thought that the robbery was committed by men from some of the several schooners which came to anchor in the roadstead on Friday, and who visited Mr. Caswell's house during Friday evening. The money was left, it is said, in the money drawer over night, and on Saturday morning the drawer was found open, its contents missing, and cigars and tobacco scattered about the floor of the hotel office.

MARITIME NOTES.

Among the freight charters reported last week was the British brig Katie, 196 tons, from Richibucto, Nova Scotia, to this port or Boston, with railroad ties at fourteen cents.

The U. S. S. Ossipee was at anchor in the lower harbor on Saturday morning, having arrived from Bar Harbor, which place she sailed from at eleven o'clock Friday forenoon. There was no naval review at Bar Harbor on Friday, and it was not considered likely that one would occur. The Ossipee comes here to go into the dry dock, for examination as to any injuries received by going on the rocks at Halifax, N. S. Her powder was taken out Saturday, in preparation for her coming up to the yard to-day. Her crew will live on board the Constitution while their ship is in dock.

The United States tug Leyden, stationed at this navy yard, started out on Saturday forenoon with a party of about fifty persons, including Congressman Campbell of New York, and officers of the navy yard and their wives, on a trip to Pigeon cove, Cape Ann, and to inspect the government work on the breakwater for the Sandy Bay harbor of refuge; but on arriving off Whale's-back the weather was found to be too thick and threatening for a pleasant excursion.

The schooner yacht Wm. H. Russell, Capt. Drowne, on Saturday evening started out with a fishing party which arrived from Boston by one of the late trains.

The Portland schooner Lizzie Wilson, coal laden, came in collision with the steamer Atlas on Thursday, south of Barnegat, and sunk before the Atlas' boats could reach her. Capt. Chadwick of the schooner, and three seamen, were picked up, but the captain's wife and daughter and two seamen were drowned. A bad hole was stove in the steamer, but her compartments saved her from sinking, and she returned to port.

The Goat Island light to which Mr. Leander White, for many years past keeper of the Whale's-back light station at the entrance to this harbor, has been transferred as keeper, is at the northeast side of the entrance to Cape Porpoise harbor, Me. We should judge that it was a more desirable position than that of keeper of Whale's-back light, and Mr. White deserves it from his long, faithful and efficient service. Mr. Ellison C. White, promoted to be keeper of Whale's-back light, has for some time been assistant keeper there.

The barge Josephine, which brought the boilers from Washington for the Swatara last week, has been towed across from the navy yard to a northend wharf to discharge her cargo of coal, it having been sold to a local dealer.

About 150 persons arrived in this city on Saturday from Manchester and intermediate stations, bound on an excursion to the Shoals, but the heavy shower which passed over the city was at its height just as the steamer was ready to start, and quite a number of the excursionists came ashore and remained in the city.

The schooner Addie M. Bird, Cushman master, of Rockland, Me., well known at this port through having brought numerous cargoes here during a number of years past, struck on Campobello island Aug. 18th in a storm, while on the passage from Windsor, N. S., to New York with a cargo of plaster, and sunk in five fathoms of water about a mile from West Quoddy light. She was built in 1866, and registered 507 tons. Another habitue of this port, the old schooner Oregon, of Rockland, also got into trouble on the 18th inst. in the same gale. She was bound from Rockland for Boston with lime, and her cargo taking fire she was worked into Biddeford pool, and abandoned by her crew. The life-saving crew got the fire under subjection on the 19th, and it was thought the vessel could be saved, though the cargo would be a total loss. The Oregon was built in 1851, and registers about sixty tons.

City Marshal Norton retired from that office on Saturday, and Mr. Jeff. C. Rowe assumed its duties, and was attending to the same on Sunday.

Mr. Charles A. Canney on Friday last resigned as driver of one of the single teams of the city, and Mr. Michael Sheridan was appointed in his place. On Saturday Mr. Sheridan resigned, and Mr. James Broughton takes charge of the team this morning. All the parties named are experienced and competent teamsters.

There were clambakes at Freeman's point and Dover point on Sunday, and both were largely attended.

It is stated that Police Officer Watkins, who was re-elected by the board of mayor and aldermen at their meeting last week, will not qualify for the position.

The new houses on Miller avenue, that of B. F. Webster (for Dr. Jewett) and of Alderman Boynton for himself, are making rapid progress toward completion now. The new electric light on that avenue is unfortunately placed. In its first decided location, at Mr. Laighton's corner, it was found a ledge interfered with the setting of the pole, and it was moved to the contra corner. Alas! it lights the spacious Elwyn field on the east side of the avenue well, but the thrifty trees on the westerly side shroud the avenue in darkness toward the Sagamore road. This is a fault that will increase with years, and the light should be at once removed to Mr. Moran's corner. Then the boys of the fire department will be able to place their hose in the new reservoir to be established in that section, on the darkest night.

The condition of the roadbed of Maplewood avenue, especially directly in front of Mr. Frank Rice's house, is respectfully called to the surveyor of highway district No. 1, or to any one having authority in the matter.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid only $96 25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

—Ignorant foreigner: "You have agricultural fairs in this country, I hear." American farmer: "Yes; every fall. I'm gettin' ready for the next one now." "Rather early to make selections of agricultural fair exhibits, I should fancy." "No, sir-ee; takes a good while to train trottin' horses, mis-er."

Pains in the back entirely disappear when the great pain-cure, St. Jacobs Oil, is applied.

—Pastor: "Thomas! Don't you think your parents would feel very sore if they knew you was fishing on the Sabbath?" Thomas: "Yes, sir; but not half as sore as I'd feel if they found it out."

St. Jacobs Oil cured all pains.—C. Bizon, Philadelphia, Pa.

—The crop of sauer kraut threatens to be short. The rise in the price of tobacco makes cabbage leaves too valuable to make kraut of.

James Pyle's Pearline is considered the best washing compound of the day by all who once give it a trial. It cleanses the most delicate fabric without injuring it. Sold by all grocers.

—"Mankind is as lazy as it dares to be," says Emerson. The audacity of some men is enormous.

—The New Haven Palladium, commenting on advice to put a mosquito under a microscope, exclaims: "Don't you do it! Put him under a pile driver. No microscope that was ever made is capable of doing exact scientific justice to a mosquito. And even a pile driver is liable to miss him."

—The propensity of people for naming their children after great people entails some curious consequences. In Washington last Saturday night, Abraham Lincoln hit Martha Washington with a brick.

—Merchant: "Ah, Mr. Trimble, can you pay that little bill of mine?" Trimble: "That little bill of yours?" Merchant: "Yes, sir." Trimble: "Thunder, no! I can't pay my own little bills."

—A stranger stepped into a Chicago shooting gallery a day or two ago and spent a few minutes in firing at a target. In six shots he broke a window in the side of the building, destroyed one of the gas fixtures, put a hole through his hat which he had hung on a wall, and lamed a dog. The owner of the shooting gallery suspects him of being an escaped French duelist.

—In Boston a horse car stopped on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets; the conductor rushed into a bank and asked the teller for one dollar bills in exchange for a fifty dollar greenback. As small bills were not abundant the conductor gladly took fifty silver dollars, and, in rather a jovial way, remarked that it was "desirable kind of change to give the man who, for the second time, was trying to evade his fare" by tendering a fifty dollar note, relying upon the inability of the conductor to change so large a bill.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be internal, an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child slowly getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one-half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

Cayuga, Livingston Co., Ill.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this fourth day of January, 1887. C. N. COE, J. P.

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

Last spring I was very sick, being covered with some kind of scrofula. The doctors could not help me. I was advised to try the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I did so, and in a day I grew better and better, until I am as well as ever. I think you for it very much, and would like to have it told to the public.

EDW. HOFMANN, North Attleboro, Mass.

SKIN DISEASE CURED.

Mr. Frank McCluskey says that your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured his boy of a skin disease after several doctors had failed to help the boy. He spent over one hundred dollars with doctors. CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the freshness of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it manacles the nervous system and envelops the bones, easing through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of local remedies will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal medication, has never failed; even, when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly vest-pocket in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Its rolling stock is equal to the best, and it can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented, and experience proves valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline is unexcelled. The security of its passenger accommodation is unequaled in the West—emphasized in its speed.

All Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of Day Coaches, Magnificent Palace Parlor and Sleeping Cars, elegant Dining Cars (serving excellent meals, a la carte) between Chicago, St. Joseph, Council Bluffs and Kansas City—and Reclining Chair Cars.

The Famous Albert Lea Route

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

The coroner's jury in the case of Miss Carrie, whose dead body was found at Lewiston, Me., last week, rendered a verdict that she came to her death by suicide while temporarily insane.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brenwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

Very Gallant Knights.

At Dover, last Friday, a strike was threatened in the shoe factory of Martin, French & Co., unless two stitchers, first-class workers and getting full pay, should be discharged. The ladies referred to are Misses Ham and Tanner. Miss Ham has been a Knight of Labor, but was recently suspended for non-payment of dues; Miss Tanner has been often urged to join, but positively refused. A committee of the Knights employed in the shop demanded that both women be discharged, or all hands would strike. The owners promptly refused to accede to the demand, but the threatened strike did not take place on Saturday; the firm however, did countermand arrangements they had previously made for increasing the capacity of their factory, and say they will look up some other place in which to enlarge their business. The firm have articles of agreement with the Knights, of which the following are the first two articles:

Article 1. The firm shall make no discrimination in hiring or discharging employes for or against the Knights of Labor, nor shall the Knights of Labor or their representatives demand that such discrimination be made.

Art. 2. It is agreed that in all cases the firm be their own judges of the competency or incapacity of the employes for their positions.

From this it is apparent that in demanding the discharge of two women for no other reason then that they are not Knights of Labor, the Knights distinctly ignored their own agreement.

Democratic Civil Service Reform.

The National Republican, of Washington, D. C., says: Col. Switzler, chief of the bureau of statistics of the treasury department, is opposed to the civil service reform. The colonel says he has just found out a way to beat the law, and he is beating it right along, too. When he wants a new clerk in his office he always asks to have the usual number of persons, four, certified to him; he gets the address of each, and then ascertains if there is a democrat among the number; if he finds one he selects him from the four eligibles and quietly smiles to himself and says that this is democratic civil service reform.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, Aug. 22d.

Last week one of our citizens called on a friend, and while there heard his horse make a strange noise; on going out it was found that some miscreant had cut the face of the animal, and also cut the tongue out.

On Thursday last the storm of wind and rain was the most destructive of the season; heavy pieces of corn were nearly ruined, many limbs of trees were broken, and the ground was covered with unripe fruit.

The Union house presents a lively appearance, and like all the other public places is full of people. The landlord is ever on the alert to make all as happy and comfortable as possible.

Several city ladies are sojourning at Lake-view Cottage, principally to find peace and rest. On driving by this place we thought it one of the finest in town; the floral display is beautiful and can hardly be excelled.

Rev. W. W. Fay and wife have been spending a few weeks in town; they are weary, and seeking rest. He was not able to preach to the people here, but will do so in September.

Mr. W. L. Drake will obtain a patent on his bed-clothes supporter, in Great Britian, which doubtless will realise him a few thousands.

A large number of our citizens attended the Chautauqua meetings at Epping last week. ——.

"St. Nicholas" for September is a choice number. It opens with a delightful front spiece, by Mary Hallock Foote, illus. along "Tib Tylers Beaux of Mothers," a charming tale of life at a seaside watering place by Nora Perry. A paper that will interest boys is the article on "Christ's Hospital," — the famous "Blue-coat School" of London, — where the scholars never wear hats, dress very nearly as the boys did when the school was founded, hundreds of years ago, and have many quaint and curious customs. Both girls and boys will be interested in the account, in E. S. Brooks's "Historic Girls" series, of "Christina of Sweden," who was much more like a boy than a girl in her nature, and was, in fact, crowned "King" of Sweden. "The Boyhood of William Dean Howells" is pleasantly treated by William H. Rideing, and will carry encouragement to many young literary aspirants; General Adam Badeau writes comprehensively and thrillingly of the "Battle of Gettysburg," and of Pickett's glorious but futile charge; while George J. Manson shows the young man who is "Ready for Business," and wishes to become a "Sea captain," the bright and sunny sides of a sailor's life and the best and safest way of accomplishing his ambition. The serials by Miss Baylor and H. H. Boyesen are continued, with joy for "Juan and Juanita," and sorrow for "Fiddle-John's Family." The "Brownies" indulge in "Archery;" there are poems by Helen Gray Cone, F. D. Sherman, Lizbeth B. Comins, Henry Tyrrell, O. Herford and others; and pictures, among others, by Robert Blum, Alfred Brennan, George Wharton Edwards, Henry Sandham, Lizbeth B. Comins, O. Herford and C. L. Vogt.

They Can't Help It.

"What makes the girls chatter so much?" said the old man to his better half. "Well," she replied, "I guess they have something to chatter about. They have just come from Foye's with six yards tourest ruffling for eleven cents, and the goods that have been marked down from fifty and thirty-nine cents to twenty-five are enough to make the wife of the man in the moon chatter." See adv.

Hay Fever

Is an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear-ducts and throat, effecting the lungs. An acrid mucus is secreted, and the discharge is accompanied with a burning sensation. A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Cornelius Reagan was appointed constable, night watchman and police officer in place of Edward Watkins, declined to qualify.

On recommendation of the committee on bills on second reading, the common council bill making nine hours a day's work on Saturday was passed.

The mayor, and Ald. Urch and Conlon, were appointed a committee to oversee the putting of steam heating apparatus into the Haven school house.

Adjourned to date fixed at previous meeting.

THE TEMPLARS' VISIT.

On Wednesday, Sept. 7th, at 2:40 P. M., Calvary Commandery of Knights Templar, of Providence, R. I., will be met at the railroad station in this city by a committee and members of De Witt Clinton Commandery and escorted to the Rockingham house, from which place after a brief stay the visitors will proceed to the Wentworth. On Thursday morning, the 8th, barges will be sent to Newcastle for the visiting Sir Knights, who on arrival at this city will be met by De Witt Clinton Commandery in full regalia, and a trip will be taken to the Shoals, where a banquet will be served, the party returning in time for Calvary Commandery to take the evening train for Manchester. Reinewald's band, of Salem, has been engaged by De Witt Clinton Commandery for the occasion.

"THE NEW LAW."

The passage used as a leading thought in the Universalist church last Sunday was Matt. v., 17: "I came not to destroy but to fulfill." Also Luke 2, 35: "By this child shall the thoughts out of many hearts be revealed."

The old laws and philosopies were prescriptive and were made up of maxims, proverbs and adages. Much that reached the people was merely constraining and negative, like nine of the ten commandments. They were warnings and edicts, without example. It was saying without doing. It was acting without feeling.

Christ found the world trying to please its God or gods by using pacifying gifts and ceremonies. The world was in doubt as to what God might do next, and was anxious to keep on the safe side. If God were not unchangeable he would have felt the same feelings we do when an acquaintance gives us something to get rid of us. No human being likes a gift that is given with a view to placate, or get rid of importunity, or an evident feeling on the part of the giver that it must be given because it is expected. God is as wise as we are when we sacrifice or worship. He does not want outward deception or placation. He wants the disposition. Jesus Christ revealed this. It applies as well to conduct. The smooth adulterous heart is dragged to light with the discovered unfortunate. The late good motive receives a penny with the early good worker.

In short, although Jesus did deny no Mosaic act of worship or conscience, he sought to enforce a good inner spirit and motive; and to implant that, and dislodge "Satan from heaven" he saw that man must have a motive, viz.: A perfect love to a perfect God. That is, a perfect loyalty to a spirit of goodness. Not talked about as in the Old Testamet, but seen and felt and lived as in the New. Love to God is to many a mere sound, even as love of beautiful color is to a blind man, or love of music is to a deaf man, but it is nevertheless a reality.

It is not to be denied by those who are blind and deaf. It is felt by one who sees that man and the Universe are well made for man's sake, and who actively believes that the natural course of things will some time prevail.

Love to God, love to our neighbor, and love to ourself, rightly balanced, and rightly esteemed, are the new laws of humanity.

POLICE COURT--BATCHELDER J.

MONDAY, Aug. 22d.

Albert Moore, John Sullivan and James Taggett, for drunkenness were fined $3, costs $6.90, with the alternative of a term in Brentwood.

PERSONAL.

Miss Hattie Cady of Providence, R. I., is visiting Miss Gertrude Priest on Daniel street.

Miss Alice M. Marston of this city arrived home from Bethlehem on Friday last, after a visit of several weeks among the mountains.

Frank W. Horrocks, clerk at Moses Brothers' store, is at Alton Bay on a week's vacation.

Mr. William Noyes, in the employ of the Boston & Hingham Steamboat Co., was in this city on a brief visit to his family on Sunday. Mrs. Noyes and son arrived home from Newport, Me., on Saturday.

Mrs. Lawrence Gould of Chelsea, Mass., formerly Miss Kate Payson of this city, who has been passing the summer at Wolfeborough, arrived in Portsmouth on Monday to pass a few weeks with the family of Mr. A. Pearson on Broad street.

THE PUBLIC PASTURE.

Mr. Editor: I was glad to notice your comments upon the cow trespassers. As I passed the South cemetery on Monday and saw a number of cows feeding off the lots which had been carefully put in trim, and in some instances tramping flowers left the day before by bereaved friends, I could but think that the town needed either some one who would put interest enough in the cemetery to drive out the cows which desecrated its sacredness, or some new life in the authorities which should prevent the pasturing of animals upon the public thoroughfares. It is said that the ordinance as to cattle grazing at large, applies only to the compact part of the city, and its provisions do not apply farther west of South street than Mount Vernon street, or south of No. 13 on Richards avenue. If so it is time the limits of prohibition were extended.

X. X.

The U. S. S. Ossipee came up from the lower harbor to the navy yard early Monday forenoon, and was taken into the dry dock during the day.

Police Officer Stott of this city has been appointed policeman at the Weirs for this week, by the New Hampshire Veteran association. He started for that place at one o'clock on Monday to go on duty.

The dividend due on the stock of the Wolfeboro railroad will be paid at the office of Hon. Frank Jones on Market street, Friday, Sept. 2d, from ten o'clock A. M. to noon.

The Pullman train from Boston on Sunday night had eleven cars, including two baggage cars. Two of the passenger cars were dropped at this station. The gear of the Atkinson & Cook dramatic company arrived on this train, and a big lot there was of it, two.

The two young men, Sullivan and Murphy, whose names appeared in an article in the Chronicle last week in relation to the disgraceful row at the railroad station on the evening of the 3d inst., and its possible bearing on the election of police officers, then pending, we are assured were not at the picnic at all nor involved in the rioting, and that the use of their names in such a connection was an injustice.

The advertisement of Jenness & Dowd, marble and granite manufacturers and dealers, appears in another column. The firm have been carrying on business for some months, but the press of work has been such that they could not get a chance to attend to advertising until now.

Mr. Charles W. Randall of this city, a veteran of the late war, died on Monday at the age of about fifty-one years. He was in feeble health for many years, having been severely wounded in battle, and we believe carried a rebel bullet in his body to the day of his death.

The Dover Democrat of last Satuaday says: "Sixty-one members of the Lasters' Protection Union of this city went to Portsmouth to assist in the reception of Mr. Martin of Stoneham, the grand treasurer of the order who spoke there; also to assist with money their striking brethren who demand the same wages paid in the shops of this city, Farmington, Great Falls and Rochester. The Portsmouth boys have plenty of money and pluck, and are bound to win."

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

Advices from China stated that an incipient rebellion, which was brewing in the King Yu district, was quelled by beheading 100 Taviet priests, or men representing themselves as such.

Last Thursday night a number of cottages and tents were visited at the Old Orchard camp-ground by the midnight burglar. One cottager lost $200 and a very valuable gold watch and chain, the thieves forcing an entrance through the windows. Jones and Allen, the evangelist, were also visited, and their pockets rifled of considerable sums of money. From several tents on Evergreen avenue more or less money was obtained. Also money was taken from Mr. Perkins' tent on Oakland avenue and also from places on the "Tent Circle."

Twenty-five armed Pinkerton men are aiding the sheriff and twelve deputies to keep order at the Laurel Hill chemical works, Hunter's Point, L. I. There is a strike of the employes, and the strikers are trying to prevent new men from taking their places.

The colored brother laughs in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression as it thinks of the kinks it will do in the darkey's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that SANFORD'S GINGER will soon be needed.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in all the water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Secretary Whitney has given assurance that the naval forces shall be represented at the Constitutional centennial celebration at Philadelphia, and that the navy department shall be instructed to make a practical demonstration of the advances in naval construction and armament the past hundred years.

Passed Assistant Surgeon Crawford, United States navy, accused upon two informations of having had illicit relations in the District of Columbia with a young girl named Eva White, under fourteen years of age, in violation of the provisions of the statute known as the Utah law, has been found guilty in the police court, and sentenced to six months in jail in each case. An appeal was noted, the bond being fixed at $3000.

The Jersey City police have found the property stolen from the safe of Fairchild & Co. of Bridgeport, Conn., on the night of July 17th, secreted near the house occupied by George Feith, the burglar arrested in Jersey City on the 9th. Although a search had been made of the premises at the time of Feith's arrest, none of the missing property was found. On the 20th inst. another search was made. Underneath some plank in a side alley were indications of fresh earth. The ground was opened, and a rubber bag was found containing all of the stolen jewelry, valued at $12,000.

Citizens in the southwestern part of Indiana are appealing to the governor for protection from the "White Caps," or Regulators. Orange, Dubois, and Crawford counties are terrorized by the band, which, upon the pretense of punishing violators of the law, goes on plundering and marauding trips nearly every night.

The captains of eight American fishing schooners refused to pay pilot fees in Halifax, Nova Scotia, last week, they having put in for a harbor during a storm, and not seen a sign of a pilot at all. They deposited the amounts demanded with the United States consul general, who will fight the payment of such an unjust imposition.

A Healthy Stomach

Is a blessing for which thousands of our dyspeptic countrymen and women sigh in vain, and to obtain which swallow much medicine unavailingly. For no ailment—probably—are there so many alleged remedies as for dyspepsia. The man of humbug is constantly glutted with the dollars and dimes of those who resort to one nostrum after another in the vain hope of obtaining relief, at least, from this vexatious and obstinate malady. Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a means of eradicating dyspepsia, in which a firm reliance can be placed. No remedy has in three decades and over established such a reputation, none has received such unqualified professional sanction. It is an admirable invigorant, because it enriches the blood, and not only this, but it thoroughly regulates the bowels, kidneys and bladder. The nervous symptoms are usually relieved by the medicine.

A despatch of Aug. 22d to the Farmington (Me.) Chronicle says: "Great excitement prevails in the nothern portion of the county, over the arrest this morning by Officer Tootbacher of Phillips, of Abner Searles of Rangeley, for attempting to poison the family of one Locklin with Paris green. The prisoner admits his guilt, and says he was hired by one Dunham to put poison in the food, and given $8 for it. So much poison was put in, however, that it was discovered, and before any one had eaten the food."

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation, you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable; small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

Owing to the drowsiness of an overworked telegraph operator on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad two freight trains came into collision, doing damage to the amount of $75,000.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them they will certainly please you.

At a mass meeting of socialists held in Cooper Union, New York, on the evening of Aug. 22d, red flags were waved and Henry George's name was hissed.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

There was a riot in Glen Lyon, Pa., Aug. 21st, among about 300 persons,—Irish, Welsh, Hungarian and Polish miners and their wives,—over an attempt to prevent Sunday being used as pay day. The rioters were all drunk, and sixty persons were injured with stones and clubs, some of them fatally.

Every shelf should have St. Jacobs Oil. It is the great household remedy.

The steamer City of Richmond, of the Portland, Mt. Desert and Machias line, Captain Dennison, ran on a rock while entering Millbridge harbor from Machisport, Aug. 22d. When the accident occurred only about twenty passengers were aboard. No panic ensued, and the passengers were taken off by the steamer Forest City, which happened along at the time, and were carried to Bar Harbor. The steamer was beached in a safe place. The hole in her will be mended, she will be pumped out, and will make her regular trips next week. The accident was caused by a dense fog, and no blame is attached to pilot or captain.

Using Them for Everything.

Peter Magerus, residing at 251 Johnson avenue, Brooklyn, E. D., N. Y., says: During the last eighteen years I have been using over fifty Allcock's Plasters a year in my family. I have found them a most perfect external remedy. They have repeatedly cured me of rheumatism, to which I am subject every winter. They have cured me of pains in the sides and back three times. My wife, children and mother-in-law tell me Allcock's Plasters are made, so agreeable, so certain. I know they have cured my wife of pains in the back and of a severe cough. My mother-in-law has been cured of a most severe cold, which threatened to turn into pneumonia, by Allcock's Plasters. PETER MAGERUS.

Last Saturday a man with a large ox was about the city markets in Dover, trying to sell it for $50, and no one would purchase, for the price was too cheap. Later the ox was put in a barn. BABY HUMORS

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

Last spring I was very sick, being covered with some kind of scrofula. The doctors could not help me. I was advised to try the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I did so, and in a day I grew better and better, until I am as well as ever. I thank you from my very much, and would like to have it told to the public.

SKIN DISEASE CURED.

Mr. Frank McClusky says that your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured his boy of a skin disease after several doctors had failed to help the boy. He spent over one hundred dollars with doctors. CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him.

J. E. TIFFANY, Pleasant Mount, Pa.

CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and CUTICURA SOAP prompt, gent, and more robust than the rest of the population. The bones of the ancient Gauls, which are uncovered in the excavations of tumuli, while they are of large dimensions, are comparable with those of the existing populations of many places in France.

The Egyptian mummies are the remains of persons of small or medium stature, as are also the Peruvian and Mexican mummies, and the mummies and bones found in the ancient monuments of India and Persia. And even the most ancient relics we possess of individuals of the human species, the bones of men who lived in the tertiary period, an epoch the remote antiquity of which goes back for hundreds of centuries, do not show any important variation in the sizes of the primitive and of the modern man.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Crow Is Black.

The Indians of the extreme northwest have some very remarkable legends about the creation, in which the crow takes the leading part, bringing order out of chaos. Perhaps the most curious was that which accounted for the raven coat of the crow. One night, while making a tour through his dominions, he stopped at the house of the Can-Nook, a chief, and begged for lodging and a drink of water. Can-Nook offered him a bed, but on account of a scarcity of water refused to give him anything to drink. When all the rest were asleep the crow got up to hunt for the water butt, but was heard by Can-Nook's wife, who aroused her husband. He, thinking the crow was about to escape, piled logs of gum wood upon the fire. The crow made desperate efforts to fly through the hole in the roof where the smoke escaped, but the Can-Nook caused the smoke to be denser and denser, and when the crow finally regained the outer air it had black plumage. It was previously white.—American Magazine.

Curious Marriage Customs.

The associations connected with the marriage rites among the Kirghese of the northern steppes of Toorkistan are most formidable, involving the payment of a "kalim" besides the giving of various presents. The first portion is paid by the match maker when negotiations are entered into, but the second not for twelve months, unless the bridegroom be wealthy. Should the bride-elect die during this period her parents must return all they have received or give their next daughter as a substitute, together with a fine of one or two horses and robes or furs. This same law applies in the event of the girl jilting her suitor. On the other hand, should the man die, his parents must either pay a fine and forfeit the "kalim," or take the girl for their next son. At the expiration of the term of betrothal the bridegroom, attired in his best, goes with his friends to the "aulg" or village of the bride, where a tent has been prepared for his reception. Throughout the ceremonies of betrothal the bride's brother has the right of pilfering from the bridegroom whatever he pleases; but at the wedding the bride's relatives, near and distant, come and take as presents almost everything he has. His hat, coat, girdle, horse, saddle, and all that he has are pilfered, each one taking an article, remarking that it is for the education of the bride. There is, however, some reciprocity in the matter, for when the relatives of the bride visit the "aul" of the bridegroom they are fleeced in exactly the same manner. On the payment of the "kalim" the parents of the bride are bound to give up their daughter, giving her as a dowry a "kibitka," or tent, a camel or riding-horse, and a number of cattle, according to their position in life; also a bride's head-dress called "asoukele," or, if poor, another called a "jountonk," besides a bed, crockery and trunk of wearing apparel.—All the Year Round.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

"There Were Great Men."

An opinion was current in the last century that our ancestors, at some time in the past, were the equals or superiors in size to the largest men now to be found. M. Henrion presented to the Academie des Inscriptions, in 1718, a memoir on the variations in the size of man from the beginning of the world to the Christian era, in which Adam was given 123 feet 9 inches, and Eve 118 feet 9½ inches. But after the first pair, the human race, in his imagination, suffered a regular decrease, so that Noah was only 100 feet high, while Abraham shrank down to twenty-eight feet, Moses to thirteen feet, the mighty Hercules to ten feet eight and a half inches, and Alexander the Great to a bare six feet and a half. The communication, it is said, was received with enthusiasm, and was regarded, at the time, as a "wonderful discovery" and a "sublime vision."

The complaint about the degeneracy of the human race is not new, but dates as far back as the time of Homer, at least; for the men of his day were not like the heroes of whom he sang. It is not confirmed, but is contradicted by all the tangible facts, and these are not a few. Human remains that are exhumed, after having reposed in the grave for many centuries, as in the catacombs of Paris, have nothing gigantic about them. The armor, the cuirasses, and the casques of the warriors of the middle ages, can be worn by modern soldiers; and many of the knights' suits would be too small for the cuirassiers of the European armies; yet they were worn by the selected men, who were better fed, stronger, and more robust than the rest of the population. The bones of the ancient Gauls, which are uncovered in the excavations of tumuli, while they are of large dimensions, are comparable with those of the existing populations of many places in France.

The Egyptian mummies are the remains of persons of small or medium stature, as are also the Peruvian and Mexican mummies, and the mummies and bones found in the ancient monuments of India and Persia. And even the most ancient relics we possess of individuals of the human species, the bones of men who lived in the tertiary period, an epoch the remote antiquity of which goes back for hundreds of centuries, do not show any important variation in the sizes of the primitive and of the modern man.—Popular Science Monthly.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE SICK HEADACHE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

HEADACHE

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., New York City.

THIS PAPER is on file in Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it in New York.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

A sad accident happened during a regatta on the Thames below London bridge on the 22d inst. About thirty-five spectators clambered upon a hay-laden barge. The ropes holding the tarpaulin cover gave way, and all except one of the spectators were thrown into the river, seventeen being drowned. The water was only three feet deep, but there was eight feet of mud underneath.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

The Dover Strike.

Two hundred and fifty employes of Martin, French & Co., shoe manufacturers of Dover, left work on Monday in consequence of the refusal of the proprietors to discharge two female stitchers who do not belong to the Knights of Labor. The idea of the trades union is, apparently, that the American workman who is outside the union has no rights whatever.

A Mean Trick.

The first officer of the Dominion fishing cruiser Vigilant was ashore in a port at Prince Edward Island on the night of the 20th inst. in company with the crews of some seventy American fishing vessels which had put in for shelter, and taking a drink with some of them, was drugged into insensibility, and while helpless had the buttons and bands cut from his clothes, after which he was jeered and insulted in all ways by the drunken mob. It was a cowardly and contemptible trick.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., Aug. 22d.

The week past has been one of much enjoyment to the people from the cities who are having a few weeks' vacation, especially to those who are resting on the banks of the Piscataqua; the weather, at least for half the week, has been fine for boating and fishing, and any other out-door sports. It is often intimated that a small steamer on the river for pleasure parties, and to connect with the trains at Kittery depot or Portsmouth two or three times a day, would be a source of pleasure to its patrons and profit to its promoters; and more so if a hotel were erected on the bank of the river, in connection with the boat. From the constant conversation in that direction among our citizens, it is likely that the time is not far distant when something of the kind will be done.

Ira S. Paul opened his house the season for the first time for the city people to come and enjoy their summer vacation, and on Sunday, the 14th inst., he had seventeen people at his house; the past week they numbered twelve. He will no doubt enlarge his premises before another season. The same gives the place by the boarders is the Riverside Cottage.

Edward K. Paul, an adjoining neighbor, has also this season opened his house for the first time; he has had a fine run of patronage, and another year we trust will have all he can manage to do.

Miss Almira Leavitt, a young lady of sixteen years, was driving from York to Eliot after Dr. Guptill recently, when the harness broke and the horse took fright and ran, and striking a wheel of the wagon against a hitching post in the yard of Mr. J. W. Nowell, threw Miss Leavitt to the ground, injuring her considerably about the shoulders and making her partially insensible for a time, though fortunately no bones were broken. She was kindly cared for by Mrs. Lizzie M. Nowell. The horse was not caught until he reached Butler's crossing in Kittery, near the depot. Miss Leavitt lives with her uncle, Hiram Thompson of Brixham, York, and at last accounts was recovering nicely.

The barge "Dragon," owned by Charles W. Coutle of Kittery, took a party from South Eliot to York beach last Wednesday.

J. Howard Paul has recently bought of Samuel Dixon the coal wharf situated near the bank of his father's (Charles E. Paul's) place, where he will engage in the coal business. We hope he will meet with good success, as he is a deserving young man, and liked by all.

James K. Rogers is passing a few weeks at the mountains for his health, and we hope may receive much benefit from the visit.

Mr. Samuel Clark, living near Eliot depot, died on Sunday, Aug. 14th, after a short illness. Mr. Clark had been tax collector of this town for nine years, and will be much missed in town business; he was also engaged in the manufacture of bricks, and was also agent for the Walter A. Wood mowing machines, and other approved farming tools. He was as estimable citizen, and respected by every one. The funeral services were held on the 16th at his house, Rev. K. Atkinson officiating, and was very largely attended. Mr. Clark leaves a wife, a son ten years old, and a daughter somewhat older. HARRY.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., Aug. 22d.

Kittery Point is again enveloped in a cloud of fog and rain. The storm on Thursday last was the most severe witnessed for fourteen years. The harbor was covered with white-capped waves, and many boats went adrift.

Hotel Pepperrell has about ninety guests. The house will probably keep open until the first of October.

Hotel Park-Field has a goodly number of guests. This is one of the most convenient hotels on the coast. The dining room has a view of the Atlantic from its south windows, and from the north windows you can see the ancient elms and the road winding up the slopes. The genial proprietor and his wife are the most hospitable imaginable, and one leaves them with a desire to come again. They are not only courteous and kind to their guests, but those who work for them find them the same. Their help are as well provided for as their guests. A cosy dining room and nice sleeping rooms are furnished for the help; also a pleasant sitting room furnished with tables, rocking chairs, mirrors and a lounge. Much of the popularity of the Park-Field is due to the fine cooking. The meat and vegetable cook from Boston and the pastry cook from Dover, thoroughly understand their business, and one can be sure of a nice dinner well served there.

Prof. I. F. Frisbee, principal of the Nichols Latin School, Lewiston, Me., is spending his vacation at the Park-Field.

The guests of the Pepperrell gave an entertainment last Tuesday evening, and the Park-Field guests have one Tuesday night of this week.

The U. S. S. Ossipee is in the lower harbor.

Mrs. Hariet Call has a fine flower garden in front of her house. She has quantities of the rarest old-fashioned flowers.

The first assistant keeper of Boon island light has returned to the island with his daughter, after a brief visit to the mainland.

The storm last week spoiled the beauty of the vegetable gardens of this village. The ranks of corn and beans have fallen low, and everything has a crushed look.

Picnic parties from this place go to York on the train nearly every day. It is said to be a pleasant ride.

"What Many People Say."

Many people say, "I do not like patent medicines." The writer has said the same, but Little Hop Pills should be an exception to the rule. They are doctor's prescription prepared by a dispensing chemist, and will positively cure what alls nine-tenths of the American people, namely, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Constipation. Simply try one bottle and then judge. These are no humbug but an honest, scientific remedy, and used by the best citizens. Sold at druggists.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

REAR ADMIRAL THOMAS T. CRAVEN.

By a despatch received on Tuesday evening we learn that Admiral Craven died at the Charlestown navy yard on Tuesday noon, Aug. 23d.

The admiral was born at Georgetown, D. C., but his boyhood days were spent in this city. He entered the navy May 1, 1822, being appointed from this state, and in the various gradations through which he passed was a brave officer. He was always a courteous gentleman and a patriotic citizen. He was promoted to be an admiral Oct. 10, 1866, and was retired after a sea service of twenty-one years, in addition to his shore duty. His last cruise at sea ended in March, 1869.

His wife, a native of Washington, and daughter of Surgeon Eastman of the army, died a few years ago. The admiral left the Hotel Pocahontas quite recently to visit his son, H. S. Craven, and his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Merriman, at the Charlestown navy yard. Just before he left he disposed of his cottage, which a few years since he built at Kittery Point. His funeral will take place at Geneva, N. Y., on Thursday.

THE ATKINSON & COOK CO.

The weather was bad again, Tuesday evening, but the Atkinson & Cook company gave another excellent entertainment at Music hall, and had a very good audience. The special merit of this company is, that every part is well taken, and not one or two parts finely performed and the rest dragged along; the two leading performers are very superior, and every one is good.

This evening "The Lancashire Lass," Tom Taylor's most interesting drama, will be the attraction. Tickets at Goodrich's.

AN HONORABLE RECORD.

The old war-ship Ossipee, Comdr. Wm. Bainbridge Hoff commanding, now in the dry-dock at this naval station, is a third-rate screw steamer of eight guns and 1900 tons displacement. She was built at this navy yard, and left here on her first cruise in 1862, being assigned to blockade duty on the Atlantic coast of the states then in rebellion.

There went out in the Ossipee at that time the following residents of this city: Charles W. Adams and Henry Lambert, ensigns; William Black, master's mate; John Adams, gunner; Zachariah Spinney, master-at-arms; William Watkins, boatswain's mate; Frank Ellison, paymaster's steward; Benjamin Freeman, seaman; Daniel Macdonald, Thomas Watkins, Horace Ellison, Woodbury Adams, first class firemen; John T. Larrabee, Edwin Underhill, Alexander Robinson, second class firemen; Jerry Newman, Elijah Newman, Frank Rowe, coal heavers; John Murphy, landsman; Patrick Crowley, messenger; Acanthus Evans, William C. Hazel, John H. Knox, boys.

Of these, twenty-three in number, all shipped without bounty; every one completed his full term of service and received an honorable discharge, and not one was ever punished for any offence of sufficient magnitude to appear in record. Three of the number, namely, Daniel Macdonald, Zachariah Spinney and Acanthus Evans, on being discharged at the end of the Ossipee's two years' cruise, re-enlisted in the navy, and served until the close of the war, being discharged in April, 1865. William Black, Acanthus Evans, Frank Rowe and William C. Hazlett, are dead; the others are believed to be all living, and most of them are residents of this city at the present time—grey headed, dignified old fellows, and much less active than the boys of a quarter century ago, but as patriotic today as then. A small party of them went across the river, Tuesday afternoon, to take a look at the old boat as she now lies in the dock.

YORK BEACH PARK.

A ten-acre tract of land at York beach, lying between Concordville and Union Bluff, has been conveyed to Carlos B. Moseley of Concord, N. H., H. Y. Ellis of York, James Edgerly of Great Falls, N. H., Dr. C. W. Clement of Manchester, N. H., and C. L. Bowden of York, in trust, to be used by the public for a park. At one end of the park a chapel will be erected, and at the other end the trustees propose to have constructed a pavilion large enough to seat 500 people, all to be free to the public.

FIRE DEPARTMENT PARADE.

A meeting of the board of engineers and the fire department committee of the city government was held Monday evening for the further discussion of plans for the parade of the firemen provided for by a recent city ordinance. A committee consisting of the chief engineer and clerk of the fire department to whom was referred the matter of appointing committees and a programme for the day made a report as follows:

COMMITTEES.

SUB-COMMITTEES.

Printing—Fletcher, Sampson, Gray and Page.

Music—Wendell, Jackson, Green and Haddock.

Collation—Sampson, Wendell, Hoyt, Jackson, Cox and Lindley.

Secretary—Clerk of the Department S. R. Gardner.

The following programme was submitted and thought by the committee to be an appropriate one:

First annual parade of the Portsmouth Fire Department to take place on Thursday, Sept. 15th. The several companies will form on State street, right resting on Pleasant street in the following order:

Platoon of Police.
Band.
Chief Engineer and First Assistant.
Engineers and Firemen from abroad.
Col. Size Engine Company, No. 3.
Steamer and Hose Carriage.
Kearsarge Engine Company, No. 3.
Steamer and Hose Carriage.
Moses H. Goodrich Engine Company, No. 4.
Steamer and Hose Wagon.
Sagamore Steamer, No. 1.
Extinguisher Company, No. 5.
Extinguisher Company, No. 6.
Supply Wagon and Company.
Members of the City Government.

The route over which the procession will march has not yet been decided upon. The line will move at 11 o'clock, the signal for starting to be one stroke on the fire alarm apparatus. The procession will doubtless pass through Pleasant street in front of the city building, where it will be reviewed by the members of the city government. The line of march will cover the principal streets of the city in about two hours. At 1 o'clock a clam bake will be served in some central portion of the city. After the collation the line will be reformed and marched to the Parade where the trial of steamers will take place at 3 o'clock. There will also be a band concert on the parade from seven to nine o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. M. A. Brooks of Lincoln Hill has this week gone to Kennebunk for a visit of several weeks to friends there.

Thomas S. Nowell, Esq., of Boston, and his son Willis E. Nowell, the accomplished violinist, were in town on Tuesday, and leave to-day for Portland. Mr. Nowell is reported to have discovered a bonanza in Alaska, concerning which he is congratulated by the capitalists of the Pacific slope. He goes to that region in September. Mr. Willis E. Nowell has in contemplation a professional tour in Europe.

The docking of the Ossipee shows a damage to the shoe, which will be speedily repaired, and the ship at once be restored to a war footing.

Mr. Alden Gilchrist of Beech Ridge, York, has on hand about a hundred tons of first quality hay, both loose and pressed, which he is selling at prices which cannot be duplicated a little later.

There was a good deal of excitement in Biddeford last Saturday morning over the disappearance of Roscoe and Robert Moody, aged fourteen and ten years respectively, sons of Charles A. Moody, cashier of the First National bank of that city, who left their homes the previous forenoon and went toward Kennebunk wood. At night as they did not return messengers were sent searching for them, and on Saturday morning the neighbors turned out to search the surrounding country. At Kennebunk it was learned that they were seen walking toward Wells. Mr. Moody drove to Wells and found them playing croquet at a relative's house, whither they had walked all the way from Biddeford.

The trains on the York Harbor & Beach railroad commenced running regularly between Union Bluff, York, and this city, on Monday morning.

Advices from Biddeford say that Patrick McCarthy, a prominent florist, has disappeared rather mysteriously. He left his boarding place several days ago, and has not since been seen. It is believed he is suffering from insanity caused by domestic trouble. No one was left in charge of the greenhouse, and the plants and flowers are going to ruin. His wife and son have been living in Boston since last spring. Some of his friends fear he has put an end to his life.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

George Brinkse, the man who claimed to have been Grover Cleveland's substitute in the army, died at the Soldiers' home, in Bath, N. Y., of consumption. He was sixty-five years of age.

We Heartily Recommend It.

All forms of chapped, rough, red, pimply skin cured and made soft and clear by Hop Ointment. It is used by the Elite. Prepared by a chemist. Will be its own testimonial. Simply try it, then judge. The national remedy for the skin. At Druggists, 25 cents.

The concert complimentary to Mr. Henry L. Harlow, given at the Hotel Wentworth last Saturday evening by the Wentworth orchestra, assisted by other talent, was the finest musical entertainment ever given there, and drew the finest audience. The honors of the evening were borne off by Miss Edith Wendell, whose splendid voice and brilliant execution have wonderfully improved since her residence in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Samuel Beverly, the oldest locomotive engineer on the Worcester, Nashua & Rochester railroad, died suddenly on Saturday. He had worked on the railroad since it opened.

A Healthy Stomach

Is a blessing for which thousands of our dyspeptic countrymen and women sigh in vain, and to obtain which swallow much medicine unavailingly. For no ailment—probably—are there so many alleged remedies as for dyspepsia. The man of humbug is constantly glutted with the dollars and dimes of those who resort to one nostrum after another in the vain hope of obtaining relief, at least, from this vexatious and obstinate malady. Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a means of eradicating dyspepsia, in which a firm reliance can be placed. No remedy has in three decades and over established such a reputation, none has received such unqualified professional sanction. It is an admirable invigorant, because it enriches the blood, and not only this, but it thoroughly regulates the bowels, kidneys and bladder. The nervous symptoms are usually relieved by the medicine.

Cured of Hay Fever.

This is the season for hay fever and catarrh—the latter is never out of season in America—and those afflicted with either or both troubles will appreciate this letter from Joshua Harvey, of No. 5010 Fim avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.:

I have used Allcock's Porous Plasters for thirty years, and have always found them efficacious in coughs, colds, pulmonary complaints, rheumatism and pains in the back. I was also subject to violent attacks of catarrh or hay fever; to cure this I cut a strip of Allcock's Plaster sufficient to cover the forehead all over and applied it on going to bed. Slept well and got up with a clear head and nose stopped running, eyes bright, and all pain in the head and nose gone. Sometimes I am attacked with extreme hoarseness, but always relieved by an Allcock's Porous Plaster around the throat.

BABY HUMORS

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

Last spring I was very sick, being covered with some kind of scrofula. The doctors could not help me. I was advised to try the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I did so, and in a day I grew better instead of worse. Now I am as well as ever. I thank you for it very much, and would like to have it told to the public.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that CATARRH makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, crippling the power of speech destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Individually, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate cones and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all previous and slightly permanent remedies have been leading to a final catastrophe. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made fearful inroads on delicate constitutions, leaving small hopes, patients have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

AN OPEN QUESTION.

Can a Husband Open His Wife's Letters?

That would depend, many would say, upon what kind of a husband he is. But it cannot be put aside in that flippant manner, for it is a legal right that is in question, and it has recently been decided in a Paris tribunal that the husband has the right to open the letters addressed to his wife. Of course in America an appeal would instantly be taken from this decision, and perhaps by husbands themselves; for in this world rights are becoming so impartially distributed that this privilege granted to the husband may be extended to the wife, and she would read all his business correspondence, and his business is sometimes various and complicated. The Paris decision must be based upon the familiar formula that man and wife are one, and that that one is the husband. If a man has the right to read all the letters written to his wife, being his property by reason of his ownership of her, why may he not have a legal right to know all that is said to her? The question is not whether a wife ought to receive letters that her husband may not read, or listen to talk that he may not hear, but whether he has a sort of lordship that gives him privileges which she does not enjoy. In our modern notion of marriage, which is getting itself expressed in statute law, marriage is supposed to rest upon mutual trust and mutual rights. In theory the husband and wife are still one, and there can nothing come into the life of one that is not shared by the other; in fact, if the marriage is perfect and the trust absolute, the personality of each is respected by the other, and each is freely the judge of what shall be contributed to the common confidence and if there are any concealments, it is well believed that they are for the mutual good. If every one were as perfect in the marriage relation as those who are reading these lines, the question of the wife's letters would never arise. The man, trusting his wife, would not care to pry into any little secrets his wife might have, or bother himself about her correspondence; he would know, indeed, that if he had lost her real affection, a surveillance of her letters could not restore it.

Perhaps it is a modern notion that marriage is a union of trust and not of suspicion, of expectation of faithfulness the more there is freedom. At any rate, the tendency, notwithstanding the French decision, is away from the common-law suspicion and tyranny toward a higher trust in an enlarged freedom. And it is certain that the rights cannot all be on one side and the duties on the other. If the husband legally may compel his wife to show him her letters, the courts will before long grant the same privilege to the wife. But, without pressing this point, the Drawer holds strongly to the sacredness of correspondence. The letters one receives are in one sense not his own. They contain the confessions of another soul, the confidences of another mind, that would be rudely treated if given any sort of publicity. [That is one reason why some communications to the Drawer never see light.] And while husband and wife are one to each other, they are two in the eyes of other people, and it may well happen that a friend will desire to impart something to a discreet woman which she would not intrust to the babbling husband of that woman. Every life must have its own privacy and its own place of retirement. The letter is of all things the most personal and intimate thing. Its bloom is gone when another eye sees it but—who the one for which it was intended. Its aroma all escapes when it is first opened by another person. One might as well wear second-hand clothing as get a second-hand letter. Here, then, is a sacred right that ought to be respected, and can be respected without any injury to domestic life. The habit in some families for the members of it to show each other's letters is a most disenchanting one. It is just in the family, between persons most intimate, that these delicacies of consideration for the privacy of each ought to be most respected. No one can estimate probably how much of the refinement, of the delicacy of feeling, has been lost to the world by the introduction of the postal-card. Anything written on a postal-card has no personality; it is banal, and has as little power of charming any one who receives it as an advertisement in the newspaper. It is not simply the cheapness of the communication that is vulgar, but the publicity of it. One may have perhaps only a cent's worth of affection to send, but it seems worth much more when enclosed in an envelope. We have no doubt, then, that on general principles the French decision is a mistake, and that it tends rather to vulgarize than to retain the purity and delicacy of the marriage relation. And the judges, so long even as men only occupy the bench, will no doubt reverse it when the logical march of events forces upon them the question whether the wife may open her husband's letters.—Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's Magazine.

A young native of Saxony came to this country a few months ago to make a fortune. He secured work in a New York importing house as a clerk, but within four months from the date of his landing at Castle Garden he was on his way back to his motherland, and, being asked why he had not remained longer in America, his answer was: "It was too —— quick for me over there."

The Pacific Railroad Enquiry.

Mr. Pomeroy, many years ago a senator in Congress from Kansas, publishes "interviews" in the Boston Herald, a paper which editorially holds that the modern interview is apt to give undue prominence to the opinions of a man entitled to less weight in the public mind than would be given those of a candid, able editor, but sticks to the interviews all the same. The late senator appears to be in the bear interest in regard to the Union Pacific railroad. The road it would seem is largely invested in by the managers and their friends. The directors neither gamble in its shares, nor direct its affairs in the interest of any rival or clique adverse to the interests they represent. The heavy holders retain their shares, and with them is a conservative, healthy, reflective class of men who hold the stock, have expectations of its ultimate recovery, believe in the management, and look forward confidently to better days after the politicians shall have concluded their efforts to squeeze the property. Mr. Pomeroy thinks, and promulgates as if important if true, that in the past, when Mr. Pomeroy secured his lines into Kansas, or when the interests of the road were the subject of congressional action, there were some things "rotten in the state of Denmark;" that the unsavory condition of affairs of over twenty years since is now attempted to be investigated, and for this reason Congress will not permit the corporation to be relieved of its indebtedness by means of legislation looking equally to the interest of the government and the corporation!

He maintains that the road will be swallowed up. That it will be purchased by the government and the shareholders "frozen out," and the road pass into the hands of the first mortgage bondholders. Mr. Pomeroy may be or may have been an adept in politics. He seems to display a lamentable want of knowledge either of the laws of finance or the composition of congressmen, when he asserts that the holders of the millions of dollars worth of stock in the Union Pacific, represented in ownership in nearly every state of the Union, are quietly to sit by and see themselves mulcted of their property because somebody sinned twenty years ago, and when the punishment for the crime or misdemeanor has long since been barred by the statute of limitations. Not if they know themselves.

The system of management of the Union Pacific seems to be an anomaly in railway tactics. The managers appear not to be speculators. They have no organs of the press. They are not "fixing" congressmen, and perhaps even go so far as to deny passes to those honest men who charge their Uncle or some one the cost of their travel. The financial world watches the movements of the stock market as it affects the prices of Union Pacific shares. If the price goes down the directors never seem to feel alarmed, but if they have spare funds they buy, not for the purpose of speculation, but for investment; if there is a rise, the hand of the managers is not seen at the lever of the stock market. The bears have interviews, dire predictions and doleful prognostications all over the country. Still the market price of shares remains almost undisturbed. The managers smile serenely. The shareholders patiently wait.

Whether there will be an ultimate provision made for the payment of the debt upon a judicious plan, depends very much upon how much Congress heeds the carefully-reached conclusions of President Adams. But to suppose that because somebody sinned long ago, or because the present powers will not avail themselves of the very means for whose use by their predecessors they now so severely are arraigned, the road is to be punished, is simply idle and absurd.

The Railroad Contest.

On Wednesday, Aug. 24th, in the state House of Representatives, the railroad committee submitted reports on the Hazen and Atherton bills, so-called, the former being supported by the adherents of the Boston & Maine railroad, the latter by the adherents of the Concord road. The majority report favored the Hazen bill, and was signed by Messrs. Pike, Cheney, Brown, Woodward, Marble, Hodgdon, Calef and Cotton. The minority report, favoring the Atherton bill, was signed by Messrs. Moore, Clark, Philbrick and Pearson.

The shoe manufactory of Martin, French & Co. at Dover remained closed on Tuesday, the 23d inst., and the Democrat reporter who visited the establishment found the work of taking down and boxing the machinery, in readiness to remove the business elsewhere, in progress. The hands were paid off in full that day, and each one definitely discharged. The payroll of the company has been about $2200 a week, and this seems likely to be transferred to some other place. The representatives of the Knights of Labor, who ordered the strike, informed the reporter that they were determined the shop should be run as a union shop, with no employes outside the Knights of Labor, or not run at all so far as their help was concerned.

A new post-office has been established at North Kennebunkport, York county, and Charles K. Littlefield appointed postmaster.

The Biddeford Journal says: "Mrs. John Emond presented her husband with a young son last night." Most of such presents are young when made.

The committee in charge of the labor parade in New York city announce that no red flags will be permitted to be displayed in the procession.

In a drunken quarrel at Clinton, Mass., Michael Flannagan was seriously, and, it is feared, fatally stabbed. His opponent, Bartholomew Coyne, was arrested, but denies all knowledge of the cutting.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. F. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." "I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

THE ATKINSON & COOK CO.

Unfavorable weather is insufficient to keep the people away from Music hall during the Atkinson & Cook engagement, another large audience attending on Wednesday evening, and of course enjoying another excellent entertainment.

This evening the sensational Irish drama "The Peep o' Day Boys" will be produced, with special scenery and accessories, and all the care and faithful attention to details which characterize this company. Tickets can be procured at Goodrich's.

REAR ADMIRAL CRAVEN.

Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, U. S. N., retired, whose death has before been announced, was the oldest son of the late Tunis Craven, a purser in the navy in 1812-13. He was born in the District of Columbia in 1808, and attended school in this city until 1822, when he entered the navy as midshipman, rising through the various grades to be rear admiral, and retiring in 1869 after forty-seven years of faithful service.

As a lieutenant he commanded the Vincennes, the flag-ship of Capt. Wilkes' exploring expedition to the Antartic ocean, which added more to the world's knowledge of high southern latitudes than all other expeditions before and since combined. During the early part of the war of the rebellion he was in active service on the Mississippi, being captain of the steam frigate Brooklyn in the passage of the forts below New Orleans, and later at Vicksburg. In the night battle below New Orleans the Brooklyn became entangled in the hulks and rafts which sustained the chain barricade of the river, and while in this predicamet received a severe fire from Fort St. Philip; she was also attacked by a large ram and a steamer, and nothing but the coolness of her commander saved the Brooklyn from destruction. A well directed broadside delivered at sixty yards' range silenced the attacking boats. After the war he went in the steam frigate Niagara, on special duty in European waters.

Admiral Craven leaves three children, a son and two daughters. The son, Henry S. Craven, is a civil engineer in the navy, and now stationed at the Charlestown navy yard; one daughter is the wife of Commander E. C. Merriman of the navy, and the other is the wife of Frank W. Hackett, Esq., of this city. Another son, Commander Tunis A. M. Craven, died bravely in the fight at Mobile bay in 1864, he being then in command of the ironclad Tecumseh, destroyed by a torpedo while entering the bay.

PERSONAL.

Capt. I. H. Washburne, U. S. M. C., and his son Henry, are camping out in the woods at Orono, Me. Mrs. Washburne and two children are visiting Mr. Howard L. Jackson and family at Scituate, Mass.

Thomas Bowden, Esq., secretary of the Chicago Underwriters' Association, with his wife and two daughters, and Mrs. Natt A. Burley, all of Chicago, are now making a brief visit to Mr. Wm. P. Burley of Middle street.

Albert W. Rix, formerly master machinist at the navy yard, now engaged in running a machine shop at Lebanon, and who owns a cottage at York beach, was in town on Wednesday of this week, and called at the navy yard upon some of his former associates.

George J. Brown and Wallace Spinney, of Boston Highlands, are visiting their grandfather, Mr. Joseph Spinney of Union street.

Mr. Woodbury Gerrish, formerly of this city, now of Cambridgeport, Mass., is on a visit to friends here and in Kittery.

Mrs. Arthur P. Frost and children have gone on a visit of several weeks to relatives in Chelsea, Mass.

E. E. Holmes, Esq., of Kansas City, is in town.

Lieut. Francis H. Delano, U. S. N., Mrs. Delano and two children, who have been passing the summer in the mountain region, have returned to this city and are domiciled at Wingate's on State street.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., Aug. 23d.

A little child of Fernando Manson of North Kittery, aged a trifle over a year, was fatally scalded last Thursday afternoon. The little fellow, just learning to walk, was at play about the room, and seeing the dish containing the boiling water sitting on the table, which some one had carelessly placed near the edge, childlike was inquisitive to see what it contained, and reaching his little hands up took hold of the pan and tipped its contents down over his neck, shoulders and stomach, burning him fearfully; he lived in great agony that night, and death relieved his sufferings in the morning.

Now that the line of the York railroad is established beyond a doubt, and the road running through its entire length, the next thought is the erecting of suitable stations, and of course the sites for these buildings should be in places best adapted for the convenience of the public as well as for the road. We do not know the exact location of the Foreside station, but should think the triangular piece of land at Traipe's corner would be the best possible place for all concerned. Since our remembrance this corner has been an eyesore to all, although it has been considerably improved in the past ten years. Now with a little more improvement such as filling-in and grading, and the building of a commodious station there, it would add much to the locality. Being at the junction of four roads from different parts of the town, we think no better site could be found where it could be reached as well. All citizens interested in improving and beautifying our pleasant town should look the matter over, and make suggestions.

Miss May Hammond of South Boston is visiting relatives in North Kittery and Eliot.

York District Lodge, I. O. G. T., will meet for its quarterly session at Sanford on Wednesday, Aug. 31st.

Dr. Walter E. Fernald, assistant superintendent of the Wisconsin state insane asylum at Mendota, is visiting his parents, Mr. William A. Fernald and wife, in North Kittery.

Our roads are in a fearful condition to ride over, and we have no hope of any better. The late heavy rains have washed everything away except the rocks. "Things without remedy are things without regard," does not apply to our roads.

MARITIME NOTES.

Wednesday forenoon, Aug. 24th, a hoisting-scow belonging to C. E. Walker & Co., partially capsized off Appledore wharf, and the hoisting engine slid overboard, when the scow at once righted. The engine, which went down in sixty feet of water, was raised late in the afternoon, but little harmed.

The schooner Gen. S. E. Merwin, from Baltimore, and the H. Curtis, from Port Johnson, both with coal to E. F. Sise & Co., arrived at this port Aug. 24th. The first-named is a big craft and brought in 1306 tons of coal, which she will discharge at the Concord railroad wharf.

The drill-platform, alias the "band stand," at Gangway rock, was taken up on Wednesday of this week; operations have been suspended for this year, the contract of the present (or late) contractors having been completed.

The schooner yacht Joseph Friend, of Lynn, Mass., the sloop Ralph, of Salem, Mass., and another sloop yacht, also of Salem, were anchored off Russell's wharf on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 24th, waiting for decent weather to put to sea. The lower harbor was well filled with vessels of all sorts and sizes, weather bound.

We are asked to say that "There are many well meaning persons who seem to regard it that the street department, which goes through so much to accomplish so little, ought either to have a less soft surface-coating on Islington street, or else restore the cross-walk which from time almost immemorial lay between the academy and the corner of Bridge street. It is quite annoying to persons coming from Middle or State streets, going to the railroad station, to find themselves in the soft mud at this place where there should be a proper crossing. At the rate the work is done under the present dispensation, it is hardly possible that this walk could be restored this year. Still it is one of the things hoped for."

"Nat" writes as follows from Andover, Mass.: "'Zion's Hill' can beat 'Old Strawberry Bank' all to pieces on the right-blooming cereus display. In the Chronicle of the 16th inst. you mention one with eight fully opened flowers on it. Mrs. Irving, who resides near the Mansion house, has one which had eleven flowers on it Sunday night, the 14th, and on Monday night twenty-three more, making thirty-four in all, in two days. It was a big show."

A friend tells us that a gentleman came into his office on Wednesday, transacted his business, and departed without a single allusion to the spell of bad weather. The presence of such men is indeed a benediction, and their calls like the sight of the sun as we remember it gilding the universe with its glittering rays.

The men who are to serve in the life-saving station at Rye were examined this week by the surgeon designated for that purpose by the treasury department.

Capt. P. C. Pope, U. S. M. C., attached to the marine barracks, Washington navy yard, has been granted leave of absence for one month from Aug. 24th.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

THE REASON WHY.

Foster's Democrat maintains that the decrease of the republican vote in Portsmouth is perhaps attributable to the efforts in political affairs, of one of the republican papers in our city. Why cannot Mr. Foster be fair, and admit that the great increase of the democratic strength in proportion to the republican vote is due to the judicious appointment of our friend of the democratic organ to an office, and the consequent earnest zeal of his paper in support of the administration, contrasted with the critical conduct of the Dover Democrat?

Breen & Berry of Farmingham have entered suit against the Dover Times for alleged libel, claiming $6000 damages.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

Dr. N. A. Archer, professor of hygeine in the university of Pennsylvania, was drowned while surf bathing at Longport, New Jersey.

The liver and kidneys must be kept in good condition. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a great remedy for regulating these organs.

The Mackerel Fishery.

The steamer Novelty, of Portland, Capt. Joyce, arrived at Boston a few days ago with a trip of 600 barrels of mackerel, selling over $10,000; she reported a large body of mackerel in the vicinity of Block island, but that they are very hard to approach; her fish were very large. But it remains for the captain of a steamer recently arrived at Boston from Jamaica to tell the most encouraging story that has gladdened the fisherman's heart this season. He says that he sailed for more than a day through the largest school of mackerel that he has ever seen. The school extended forty miles, and the fish were very thick. The school was seen off New York, and all along up to Block island and Nantucket. The seeing of these mackerel, or the report of their having been seen, has given new courage to the fishermen, and it is possible that a way out of the present short supply is in sight.

The total catch of the mackerel fleet to date (Aug. 23d) has been but 26,430 barrels; same time last year, 15,814 barrels; same time in 1885, 186,372 barrels; same time in 1884, 155,142 barrels. The falling off from 186,000 barrels to less than 20,000 is significant of something wrong, as it could hardly occur without. Possibly the enormous and useless destruction of young fish by the modern methods of fishing may account for it. In some seasons this destruction has been so great that for every ten barrels of fish saved and brought into market, scores and hundreds of barrels of small ones, "tinkers," "spikes" and "nails," have been thrown away; these small fish were of no value at the time—certainly of no value after being killed and thrown overboard—but would in time have become marketable. In nothing has criminal and destructive wastefulness been more marked than in the conduct of our fisheries during late years.

They give prompt relief in sick headache, dizziness, nausea, &c.; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles; remove Sallowness and pimples from the complexion, and are mild and gentle in their operation on the bowels. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small and easy to take as sugar. One pill a dose. Price 25 cents.

William Kelley, thirty years old, was drowned in the Blackstone river at Pawtucket, R. I., while bathing. His body was brought to the surface once by a steamer's wheel, but has not been recovered.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96 25 for doctors, and their medicines; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

—Examiner: "Now, if I were to give fifty marbles in charge of this boy (indicating the biggest) to divide equally among you, how many would you each receive?" Small boy (of experience): "Please, sir, we shouldn't get none at all, 'cause he'd collar 'em all! issslf!"

—Miss Saratoga Geyser—"Is Mr. O. Shaw any relative of yours?" Miss Wauka Shaw—"Oh, yes, he's a distant relative." "How distant?" "He's my brother, but he is the youngest of nine children and I'm the eldest."

A Healthy Stomach

Is a blessing for which thousands of our dyspeptic countrymen and women sigh in vain, and to obtain which swallow much medicine unavailingly. For no ailment—probably—are there so many alleged remedies as for dyspepsia. The man of humbug is constantly glutted with the dollars and dimes of those who resort to one nostrum after another in the vain hope of obtaining relief, at least, from this vexatious and obstinate malady. Experience indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a means of eradicating dyspepsia, in which a firm reliance can be placed. No remedy has in three decades and over established such a reputation, none has received such unqualified professional sanction. It is an admirable invigorant, because it enriches the blood, and not only this, but it thoroughly regulates the bowels, kidneys and bladder. The nervous symptoms are usually relieved by the medicine.

The Boston police inspectors have been trying to find traces of the crimes confessed by the alleged forger, Robert S. Bullard, who surrendered himself to the Philadelphia police on Sunday. The officers of the Blackstone bank deny that any such forged check as described by Bullard was ever cashed by them. That is the only specific crime confessed by the prisoner, and it turns out to be a myth. For that reason the police do not know what to make of the confession.

Many New Ideas

In the home cure of diseases, and how to treat them, and many hints of value to the sick will be found in Dr. Kaufmann's great medical work; elegant illustrations. Send three two-cent stamp to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

The Rangley poisoning case is causing a good deal of excitement in Franklin county. All the people concerned are under bonds to appear at the September term of court. The general opinion is that it is a conspiracy against Dunham, the man who it is claimed hired Scales to do the poisoning.

Hay Fever

Is an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear-ducts and throat, affecting the lungs. An acrid mucus is secreted, and the discharge is accompanied with a burning sensation. There are severe spasms of sneezing, frequent attacks of headache, watery and inflamed eyes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy that can be depended upon to quickly relieve and cure. BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about three weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, and we saw the child gradually and steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"Is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn death of misery and disease, robbing the sense of hearing, transmitting the power of speech, destroying the fidelity of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate chain and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the sufferer, and all palliatives and simply procrastinated sufferings lead to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Substitution and by Internal administration, has never failed, even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, leaving smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Amusing Metaphors.

George Stephenson was once asked by a scientific lady what he considered the most powerful force in nature. "Oh," said he in a gallant spirit, "I will soon answer that question; it is the eye of the woman for the man who loves her; for if a woman look with affection on a young man, and he should go to the uttermost ends of the earth, the recollection of that look will bring him back. There is no other force in nature that can do that."

Equally ready with a similitude was the negro, who, when giving evidence in court, was asked about the honesty of a neighbor. "I know nothing against him," was the reply; "but if I was a chicken I would roost high when he was hanging around."

A thoughtful writer describes one-eyed travelers who see a great deal of some particular class of objects and are blind to all others, and adds: "The Irish jaunting car, in which the passengers sit back to back, is a sort of type of what befalls many tourists in Ireland. Each sees a great deal, and reports faithfully what he has seen on one side of the road, and the other on the other. One will have seen all that is green, and the other all that is orange."

"A cunning knave can form no notion of a noble nature," says the same writer. "He is like the goats on Robinson Crusoe's island, which saw clearly everything below them, but very imperfectly what was above them, so that Robinson could never get them from the valleys; but when he came upon them from the hilltop, he took them quite by surprise."

Ridicule, says a German critic, is like a blow with the fist; wit, like the prick of a needle; irony, like the sting of a thorn; and humor, the plaster which heals all these wounds. All of these qualities may be found in one metaphors.

Man is said to be an animal that has a means for getting up societies and making himself president. If the presidency has been already claimed, he contents himself with the position of treasurer. In a cynical old bachelor's opinion, ideas are like beards—men only get them when they are grown up. And woman never established, it was probably another old bachelor who said: "Nature shudders when she sees a woman throw a sponge but when a woman attempts to spill wood, Nature covers her head and retires to a dark and moaning cave in tears, prayer despair." A spinning mill old bachelors are freer—not old bachelors in the flower-bed of life.

To say that a coquette is a rose-bush from which each young beau plucks a leaf, and the thorns are left for the husband, is not very complimentary. Compliments are the coin that people pay a man to his face; sarcasm what they pay him out with behind his back.

A farmer said: "One thing I don't like about city folks—they be either so stuck up that yer can't reach 'em with a haystack pole, or so blamed friendly that they forget to pay their board."

A rural old poet said of his lady love, "She is graceful as a water-lily, while her breath is like an armful of clover." An American poet wrote a eulogy of Washington, whose glorious life should compose a volume as Alps immortal, spotless as its snows. The state should be its types, its press the age, the earth its binding, and the sky its page. Truly, some American poets go in for marvels of metaphor.—Chambers' Journal.

Medical Officers in India.

The grievances of medical officers in India have more than once formed the topic of conversation and comment, but there is evidently one appointment in the east the incumbent of which ought to be satisfied with, if a statement published in one of the Bombay papers just to hand be true. That appointment is the post of residency surgeon with the nizam of Hyderabad. The horse-keeper of a native official of the state having died under suspicious circumstances, the residency surgeon was asked to inspect the body, but this he refused to do (so the report goes) unless he received an honorarium of fifty gold mohurs, equivalent to a fee of 800 rupees, which was paid. The reason given for the charge being put at that figure was that the day was Sunday, and the medical gentleman declined to disturb his sabbath calm for a less amount.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

An insurance paper has been collecting the statistics of suicide in the United States. Among the most singular and preplexing things is the fact that "the classification by condition shows a greater proportion of suicides among the married than the unmarried, which is contrary to the accepted theory."

Pleasant Thurman, father of the ex-Senator and "noble old Roman" of Ohio, was a carpenter of shiftless habits but of a religious turn of mind. Now and then he preached, and in old-fashioned Methodist "revivals" he was a great shouter. Allen was a slender, row-headed boy, pale and delicate, and quiet in habits. He was not noted for brilliancy, but was careful and industrious. Before he was admitted to the bar he was a saddler, and while working at that trade he met a Miss McArthur, daughter of a man of wealth and social rank. He asked the privilege of escorting her home from the gathering where they first met, but she rather haughtily refused him, not wishing to associate with "a mere mechanic." But she afterward changed her mind and became Mrs. Thurman.

CROP REPORTS.

There has been a lot of cheap talk in regard to the present season in a fruit bearing way, but, from an interview with an eminent horticulturist, we are glad to be able to place our readers on a firmer basis as to the excellence of crops this year. He says: "In cherries, the robins gathered all that was finest and best, so there was no less there. The Colorado beetle or potato bug has been plentiful the entire season, and no good farmer need have gone without a full supply. Of the little insects that perforate the leaves of cabbage, cauliflower and kindred plants, to give them better ventilation, there has been no lack, and we should have large returns for our purchase money in that direction this fall. Much hay was got in in good order by the use of ferry boats. The canker worm was a little too old fashioned to attend strictly to business, but his aide (a new pest) has fixed all the best branches on the oberty trees for next year. The corn crop, from which we receive our necessary supplies—most of our whiskey and a little bread—looked well up to the time of tasselation. Then the rains and warm weather produced a stuck-up growth, but a few little cyclones imported from the westward have levelled this distinction, and the farmer can easily gather the beans and pumpkins he expects from the same land where he harvested his green corn. For the left wing of this division, including hens, cats, dogs, roosters, ducks and other fancy poultry—it is only necessary to state that they have done their duty well. Where man has dug and planted, they have dug and transplanted. Flower beds, carefully fixed, have been transformed into the home of the pig, the rag and other joyous weeds, disporting in a series of introverted Indian mounds. The early lettuce was sampled, the early corn was picked, the early tomatoes were carefully looked into to judge of their fitness for the table, and where ducks had access to cucumber vines they readily risked their own stomachs, to preserve those of their humane protectors."

Seriously, we think it has been a good year. Better a little extra water than the droughts from which we have suffered within a few years. J.

Forty Autumn Trips.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb announce a long and attractive list of tours for the month of September, including several new excursions and many fresh combinations of routes. Among the new places included are the Green mountains, with a visit to the summit of Mount Mansfield and a sojourn at the Mount Mansfield house. One excursion includes the battlefield of Gettysburg, the Blue Ridge of Maryland, the Luray Caverns, the Natural Bridge of Virginia, Richmond, and Washington. The other trips are confined chiefly to New England, Canada, and the Middle states, with such points of interest as Niagara Falls, Saratoga, Watkins Glen, Mauch Chunk, the Thousand Islands, the Hudson, St. Lawrence, and Saguenay rivers, the Catskill, Adirondack, White and Green mountains, Ausable Chasm, Lakes George, Champlain, Placid, and Memphremagog, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, etc. With the long list of trips to select from, tourists can make almost any kind of a combination in the way of routes and places of sojourn. In addition to these tours, there will be one more excursion to the Yellowstone National Park, with an added tour across the continent, leaving Boston September 12th, and a second transcontinental trip October 11th. Send for descriptive circular to W. Raymond, 296 Washington street (opposite School street), designating whether book of "Forty Trips" or circular of Autumn Tours to California is desired.

Collector Saltonstall, of the Boston custom house, keeps a record of all the letters received and calls made upon him by politicians in regard to appointments, removals and the like. When the democratic bosses attempt to bulldoze the collector he sometimes has a few cold facts which are not always desirable to have referred to.

Mrs. Eunice Joy of Sanford, Me., is in Boston for the purpose of trying to secure a pardon for her son, who was convicted of the murder of Charles Gilman at Rockport in 1883. Mrs. Joy does not believe her son is guilty, and since his conviction she has been unceasing in her efforts for his release. She will see Governor Ames and present a petition signed by hundreds of prominent citizens of Rockport urging him to grant the pardon.

The store of Hanson & Folsom at South Berwick was broken into on the night of Aug. 23d, and a small sum of money and some valuable cutlery and other articles stolen, to the value of $350 in all. An unsuccessful attempt was made to open the safe, which contained $500. The thieves did the work in an amateurish style.

William Durham Jewitt of South Berwick died on Wednesday, Aug. 24th, in his seventy-fifth year. He was well known as a business man, and formerly held large shipping interests, but retired from active business life over twenty years ago. He was a man of great uprightness and dignity of character, trusted by the entire community, and loved by all who knew him best. Mr. Jewett was for many years president of the South Berwick national bank. He left no family.

An accident which might have been serious happened Aug. 23d to the Boston & Maine railroad engine Sachem, which draws the vestibule train between Boston and Portland. The run from Boston to Portland was made without any special incident, but scarcely had the engine been released from the cars at the latter place, to make way for the Maine Central locomotive which takes the train to Bar Harbor, when one of the Sachem's eccentric rods became disconnected, and created much havoc. The eccentric rod was broken, one cylinder stove up, and the engine otherwise injured, so that it had to be sent to Boston for repairs. The singular thing in connection with the affair is that the engine should draw a heavy train at great speed all the way from Boston to Portland without mishap, and then, after being released, before it had proceeded a car's length and while going very slowly, such a serious accident should happen to it. It was very fortunate however that it was so, for had the mishap taken place while the train was making full speed a terrible calamity might have resulted.

Franklin H. Sargent, director of the New York (Lyceum theatre) School of Acting, will receive candidates for admission from New England on Monday, Aug. 29th, at the Tremont house, Boston.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less. I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

CITIZENS' EXCURSION.

An excursion train leaves the station in this city at 9:10 o'clock this (Friday) forenoon for Old Orchard, Me., and will leave Old Orchard at five o'clock in the evening on its return; fare for the round trip, from this city or Kittery, $1.25.

THE ATKINSON & COOK CO.

There was a very large attendance at Music hall on Thursday evening—as indeed has been the case every evening this week—when "The Peep o' Day Boys" was performed. This evening Shakespeare's play "The Merchant of Venice" will be presented, with Mr. E. P. Sullivan as Shylock; and for an afterpiece "The Little Rebel" will be given, Miss Annie Louise Ames, the charming young actress who has won so high a place in the public favor during the week, appearing as Laura. There will be a matinee to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon, and in the evening the great western drama, "Jess, the Pet of the Mines," will be presented.

A WORD FROM TEXAS.

Among the graduating class of the Sam Houston State Normal school at Huntsville, Texas, whose spring term has just closed, was Miss Mattie Guppy, daughter of Mr. Charles C. Guppy, formerly of this city, and associate editor of the Evening Times. When living in this city Miss Mattie was an attendant of Miss Fitch's school on High street, and her old schoolmates and friends will be pleased to learn of her success. The graduating class numbered thirty members, all but one being several years older than she, but she stood third on the roll of honor, and was highly complimented by the State Board of Education and other official visitors to the school during the commencement exercises, which continued four days.

GOOD TEMPLAR DELEGATES.

Rockingham Lodge, I. O. G. T., of this city, on the evening of Aug. 24th elected delegates to the grand lodge of the state, which meets at Laconia in October, and to the Rockingham and Strafford district lodge, which meets at East Rochester on Monday, Sept. 5th. The delegates are as follows:

Grand lodge—Charles T. Wiggin, Fred S. Scadding; alternates, F. E. Hall, B. F. Russell.

BUILDING NOTES.

Work has been commenced on the foundations of five small houses on Dr. Potter's land at the southerly end of Cass street. Anderson & Junkins have the contract to erect the buildings.

Mr. Andrew M. Gardner, who recently purchased the lot of land on the corner of Johnson's court and South street, has commenced work there on the foundations of a house to be occupied by himself.

The frame of Capt. Ed. Robinson's new house on the corner of Salter and Water streets is up, and will soon be covered in.

The house being built by Mr. Moses Yeaton on the corner of State and Union streets, for the occupancy of Mr. Charles A. Hezlett, is a very handsome one. After completing it, Mr. Yeaton will move to the rear the small house next it on Union street, and put up two more houses on the street front.

Elvin Newton's large and fine looking house on Gardner street, in course of construction for his own occupancy, is so far advanced toward completion that the plasterers are at work on it.

AT APPLEDORE.

Some very fine tableaux were shown in the music hall at the Appledore house on the evening of Aug. 24th, gotten up by the guests of the hotel. The honors of the evening were easily carried off by Dr. Warner, as Henry VIII. The audience was one of the largest of the season, and the affair was very successful.

On the 25th a lawn tennis tournament for a prize racquet was in progress, and some fine play was exhibited. The day was a splendid one, and the guests rejoiced once more in clear skies and bright sunshine.

Among the notables still remaining at Appledore were Prof. J. K. Paine, Wm. Mason, Hon. Chas. Levi Woodbury, Hon. Chris. E. Rymes, D. C. Anderson, R. C. Parsons, J. Appleton Brown, Ross Turner, Dr. J. W. Warner, Lawrence Hutton, David Stewart, F. Eckstein, J. P. White, W. E. French and a host of others.

PERSONAL.

Nathan W. Dearborn and wife, of Boston, are visiting friends in this city.

Hon. John H. Broughton and wife are on a trip to Bangor and St. John, N. B.

Horace G. Vaughan and family, of Manchester, are in this city on a visit to relatives.

Mr. Charles W. Shannon of Brockton, Mass., formerly of this city, was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Lee and wife of Brooklyn, N. Y., are here on a visit to Mrs. Lee's mother, Mrs. White, on State street.

Mrs. Charles E. Akerman of Charlestown, Mass., is visiting her father, Mr. T. G. Perkins, on Deer street.

Mr. Frank Marden of State street, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Langdon Marden, and his daughter Della, left this city on Thursday last for a visit to friends in Xenia, Ohio. Mrs. Frank Marden and two children left the same day for Maynard, Mass., for a visit of several weeks to friends in that place.

A HINT.

Editor of Chronicle: In a communication in your issue of Aug. 25th, reference was made to the miserable condition of the cross-walk leading across Islington street at Bridge street, and its restoration spoken of as "one of the things hoped for." I was taught years ago that "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." How would it do to speak of this as "Faith crossing," and have the street department issue a daily bulletin of the depth of mud? Such a bulletin cannot be issued regarding the depth of the mud on Vaughan street, science not having yet invented any appliance capable of reaching the bottom of the slough on that street. Yesterday, the 24th, the houses situated on that much-travelled thoroughfare were indeed a sight to behold, passing teams having coated them with mud as high up as the second-story windows. The city should put ferry boats on that street, and station men with buckets of water and sponges at convenient distances to wash down foot passengers when they get so encrusted that they are not sure of their own identity.

RUBBER BOOTS.

The sale of tickets for the performance of "Upside Down," the Daly Brothers' new extravaganza, at Music hall Monday evening, commences at Goodrich's bookstore to-day.

A seaman of the U. S. S. Ossipee, while practicing on the horizontal bar on the 24th inst., fell and fractured his skull, receiving injuries that were considered fatal. He was taken to the navy yard hospital.

Admiral Craven's funeral was held Aug. 24th at the residence of his son, Civil Engineer Craven of the navy, at the Charlestown navy yard; prayers were read by Chaplain Thomas Royce of the navy. The body was taken to Geneva, N. Y., for interment.

Walker block in Newburyport, owned by J. Albert Walker of this city, was damaged about $500 by a fire on the night of Aug. 24th. The occupants of the block lost about $17,500 by smoke and water.

The guests at the Shoals hotels made up and presented to Lemuel B. Caswell, whose house on Smuttynose island was robbed of $160 on the night of Aug. 19th, a purse which fully repaired his loss. It was a kind act, for Mr. Caswell could ill afford to lose so large a sum.

It is stated that when the Parochial school in Austin street is opened the desolation of noxious weeds which disgraces the surroundings of our High School house will not be permitted at the new institution.

Rev. James DeNormandie will preach in the Unitarian church on Sunday, Aug. 28th.

Mr. J. P. Simpson of York, treasurer of the York Harbor & Beach railroad, has been in town for the past week, making some extensive repairs at the Portsmouth Savings bank, and remodelling the vault. Mr. Simpson was one of the old firm of Denio, Roberts & Co. of Boston, and has had a large experience in building bank vaults; and among many other large contracts he has put in new vaults for the New Hampshire National bank, the National Mechanics & Traders' bank and the Rockingham National bank, and refitted and strengthened that of the First National bank, all of this city.

The stone used in the construction of the naval dry dock at San Francisco is of such inferior quality that its use will seriously impair the value and durability of the dock. This was reported to the navy department, and a sample was ordered to be sent to Washington. A sample was sent, but of another and better kind of granite. The dock leaks badly. This little irregularity is but a sample of the mode in which some of the navy yards are run in the interest of democratic economy and true reform.

The county convention of Strafford county on Aug. 24th voted to accept the offer of the city of Dover relating to a site for the proposed (and very badly needed) new jail; and also to raise $25,000 in addition to what may be realized from the sale of the old jail property, for the purpose of building a new jail.

The Eureka Bakery on Daniel street after suspending operations for three days, has reopened for business in the name of C. A. Stevens, and hot bread is now delivered in all parts of the city twice a day, in the morning and afternoon, as heretofore.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

MARITIME NOTES.

There was a very large party out on the steamer Oceanic for the Isles of Shoals on Thursday last; "the season" is drawing toward its end, but there is no better time of the year than now for a trip to the islands. The hotels are filled with guests as yet.

The sloop yacht Winsome, about twenty tons register, of Boston, arrived at this port Thursday afternoon, Aug. 25th, and came to anchor off Rollins' wharf.

The schooner G. W. Raitt, Coleman, from this port for Nantucket, sailed from Hyannis on Aug. 24th. She lost her deckload of bricks during the gale of the 22d.

The great yacht race at Bar Harbor, set for Thursday, Aug. 25th, was postponed to Friday on account of unfavorable weather.

HARMLESS WITH SANFORD'S GINGER.

The colored brother laughs in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression as it thinks of the kinks it will tie in the darkey's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that SANFORD'S GINGER will soon be needed.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, dispel disease germs in all the water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for

The Lane Meeting.

Hampton, Aug. 15.—The notice of the meeting of the descendants of William and Dea. Joshua Lane in the Congregational church, Aug. 31, like similar notices in other papers, needs a slight amendment in the matter of collation. The Hampton kinsfolk have never been asked nor expected to provide wholly; and as at the two previous meetings, it is this year arranged that those within the day's driving distance, shall help make it a basket picnic, having in mind beside their own provision, the wants of invited guests and those coming from a distance. The church wardens have cheerfully given us the use of their building and organ, the Hampton kin are ready to do more than their part, and if the weather is favorable we expect a good meeting. The monument fund is nearly complete and we expect to finish its work for Hampton's quarter millennial in 1888. At the coming meeting it is proposed to take measures to further our genealogical record.

A Comet.

A large comet is announced as having been visible in the northern sky to persons in Indianapolis on the night of Aug. 24th. It is reported as being very large, and though dim, plainly visible to the naked eye.

Maggie Fitzpatrick, recently from Taunton, Mass., was arrested in New Bedford, charged with the larceny of three bank books with $680 deposit and $50 in money, from Mrs. Daniel S. Eaton, proprietor of a notorious house there.

While switching a train of coal cars at Wellesley, Mass., Aug. 24th, Frank Welch, an employee on the Boston & Albany railroad, was run over and instantly killed.

The simplest and best regulator of the disordered Liver in the world, are Carter's Little Liver Pills. They give prompt relief in sick headache, dizziness, nausea, &c.; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles; remove Sallowness and pimples from the complexion, and are mild and gentle in their operation on the bowels. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small and easy to take as sugar. One pill a dose. Price 25 cents.

Isabella, the fourteen year old daughter of William and Margaret Auketell of Peabody, Mass., has been missing from her home since Thursday, August 18th, when she started as usual to attend to her duties as clerk in a store at Salem, and all efforts to find her proved futile. Her parents cannot account for her strange disappearance.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

The ameer is now reported in a dying condition, owing to the amputation of one of his legs.

The great strike in the Cohoes, N. Y., mills is breaking, and operatives are returning to work.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

A Chinese Complexion,

When observed in one of the Caucasian race, is indicative of bile in the blood. Who would be yellow when he or she can exhibit the hue of health on cheek and brow through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an antagonist at whose onset liver complaint takes refuge in flight. Fur upon the tongue, nausea, sick headache, pains under the right ribs and shoulder blade, an unpleasantly odorous breath, are remediable with this benign alterative, which does not, like a potent cathartic, drench the intestines or, like the mercurial preparations, contaminate the blood. Not only the liver, but the stomach and bowels are aroused, toned and regulated by this fine family medicine, which has won the confidence of the respectable classes, not by startling assertions on its behalf, but by the consistency of the claims made for it with its performance in every instance when tested.

Senator Edmunds has received a retainer of $25,000 to represent the Chicago dressed-beef interests in their battle with the railroads before the interstate commerce commission. Ex-Senator Conkling will appear for the railroads.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation, you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable; small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

A floating exhibition of Spanish products will shortly leave Valencia for South America, and will visit all the principal South American seaports. The object is to open new markets for Spanish goods.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them they will certainly please you.

Cured by Cuticura.

Our little son will be four years of age on the 28th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA; and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. EGRYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-liquid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and results life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Individually, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranes lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, ready wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Good Advice to New-Comers.

You come into this country to earn your living and a little more; give it your heart in exchange for what it gives you. Become Americans, and that as quickly and as thoroughly as possible. Cherish the Netherlands in your memory, but do not immediately condemn everything that you see, hear, and experience in this country. Do not be too hasty in your judgment, for after you have lived here several years you will then see that at first your knowledge was too limited to judge correctly.

Help yourself. Do not think that somebody else will prepare your bed for you. No, you must look for yourself that you may find for yourself. You must work for yourself in order to enjoy for yourself. Therefore, do not rely upon others; rely upon your arms and legs, and a little upon your head. If you do your best then you can rest assured that you will receive help if you need it.

People must find out what is in you. If you have a "job" stick to it until you find something better. Do not let anybody persuade you that your wages are too low, and that you ought to get much more for the same work. Let strikers strike and howlers howl, keep yourself a little in the background. You know nothing of affairs here as yet, and it is rather presumptuous, to say the least, to judge things about which we know nothing. If things do not go as well as you would like, do not forget the condition of the majority of your friends in the old Fatherland. It is deplorable, but true, that those who shout the loudest here about the wages being too small would, in the Netherlands, have thanked God upon their knees if they had things but half as comfortable as they have here. Strive always for more, but do it with a thankful heart for what you now have.

Do not allow yourselves to be misled by disaffected persons. They will give you many evil reports about Chicago—about the employers in general, and about "slavedrivers" among our own nationality in particular. Do not believe such reports; wait until you have some experience of your own.

Cast off all provincialism. We are here all Dutch-Americans, no matter in what province of the Netherlands we were born. But do not cast off your sterling qualities. Preserve your honesty, your diligence, your economy, your prudence, your religious convictions. These qualities have given our countrymen in this grand Republic a good name, and this must be still better.—De Nederlander (Chicago).

Napoleon After Waterloo.

Whether any course was open to Napoleon after the disaster at Waterloo other than that which he adopted, a second abdication, is certainly very doubtful. Had he taken the precaution to dissolve the chamber before setting out on the campaign, he probably could have rallied the nation and protracted the struggle. But the chambers were unfriendly; any parliamentary body is naturally unfriendly to a military despotism, and, at that juncture, nothing less than a military despotism could possibly have saved France from the calamity of the restoration of the Bourbons by foreign bayonets. Hence, unless Napoleon should execute a new coup d'etat, there was nothing for him but abdication.

On the 15th of July, 1815, Napoleon surrendered himself on board the British man-of-war Bellerophon. Of his appearance and bodily condition during the two months of his stay on this vessel we have an interesting account in the narrative of Captain Maitland, who commanded the ship. Maitland describes him as "a remarkably strong, well-built man, about five feet seven inches high, his limbs particularly well formed, with a fine ankle and very small foot, of which he seemed rather vain, as he always wore, while on board the ship, silk stockings and shoes. His hands were also very small, and had the plumpness of a woman's rather than the robustness of a man's. His eyes light gray, teeth good, and when he smiled, the expression of his countenance was highly pleasing; when under the influence of disappointment, however, it assumed a dark, gloomy cast. His hair was of a dark brown, nearly approaching black, and, though a little thin on the top and front, had not a gray hair among it. His complexion was a very uncommon one, being of a light, sallow color, differing from any one I ever met with. From his having become corpulent he had lost much of his personal activity, and if we are to give credence to those who attended him, a very considerable portion of his mental energy was also gone. It is certain his habits were very lethargic while he was on board the Bellerophon; for, though he went to bed at 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening, and did not rise until about the same hour in the morning, he frequently fell asleep on the sofa in the cabin in the course of the day. His general appearance was that of a man rather older than he then was."—Scribner's Magazine.

Among the visitors at the Vassar college commencement was a graduate who has made $10,000 in an unique manner. Upon her graduation she was promised by her father a dollar for every cent she earned by working at anything. She accepted the offer, and, entering a factory where she obtained $6 a week, kept on working until her father had paid her $10,000 and broke the contract because his little joke was becoming too costly.

The Blair Educational Bill.

The state house of representatives on Aug. 24th resumed the discussion of the resolution relating to the Blair educational bill. After several gentlemen had spoken, the following substitute was adopted for the original resolution, on a roll call of 136 to 126:

That in view of the alarming state of illiteracy now existing in certain sections of the country and considering the great danger to republican institutions that may result therefrom unless some adequate remedy is afforded, we approve the measure known as the Blair educational bill substantially as it passed the senate in 1886.

Great Increase in Fire Losses.

According to the most authentic sources of information the fire losses this year reached $76,928,100 up to August 1st, making a seven month's loss larger than the entire annual loss of any year previous to 1881 excepting 1879, when there was only a slight excess. The aggregate loss this year bids fair greatly to exceed that of any previous year in the history of the country. And what is singular is the large increase in the percentage of losses in the Eastern states. Of this increase New Hampshire exhibits a large proportion, the great conflagrations in interior towns during the dry spell of the early summer having rolled up a formidable total.

Politics in Maryland.

It is possible that the sending of Higgins and other notorious wire-pullers from Washington to Baltimore to carry the democratic primary meetings for Cleveland and reform, may not pan out according to prospect. The republican state convention of Maryland was held in Baltimore on Aug. 24th, a strong platform adopted, and nominations made as follows: For governor, Walter B. Brooks of Baltimore; for comptroller, R. B. Dixon of Talbot county; and for attorney-general, Francis Miller of Montgomery county.

After the business of the convention was concluded, a sensation was caused by the appearance on the floor of John K. Cowen of Baltimore, a prominent lawyer and leader of the reform movement in the democratic party. He was introduced, and in a strong speech speech pledged to the republican ticket the full support of the independent democrats. He arraigned the regular democracy for gross frauds in the late primary elections, and said that decent democrats were sick and tired of being deluded by promises of reform within the party, and had finally concluded to try and get it from their old enemies, the republicans. The reform movement has gained considerable strength, and the indorsement of the straight republican ticket by the reform democracy has caused not a little excitement.

In a locality at Biddeford, Monday evening, Aug. 22d, the air was alive with peculiar-looking insects which flitted about in such numbers that they resembled snow flakes in a driving snow storm. They seemed to move about in swarms, and as soon as the electric light came on they left the damp atmosphere over the river and circulated around the light. They hovered so near the carbons that they were killed by the hundreds, and fell to the sidewalk. Next morning a half peck of the dead insects could have been picked up near the street lamps. They are larger than mosquitoes, and have wings nearly as large as bees. Their heads are black, the body white, with two long, hair-like appendages protruding from its extremity. They puzzle every natural history student who has seen them.

The Manchester Mirror says: "The Portsmouth Penny Post is still shrieking to the legislature to save the republican party by defeating the Hazen bill. Judging by the election returns lately there isn't much danger that the Hazen bill or anything else will hurt the republican party in Portsmouth much; but perhaps the suppression of the Penny Post might help it some. When that paper started Portsmouth was a republican city."

The finest cottage in Kennebunkport, owned by Rev. Dr. Edward L. Clark of New York, was burned early in the morning on the 25th inst., the occupants narrowly escaping in their night clothes. The loss will reach $7000; insurance $800. Nothing was saved. A valuable collection of bric-a-brac was destroyed.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

THE ATKINSON & COOK CO.

The reputation of Atkinson & Cook for always giving a good show was of value the first part of this week, when in spite of the very unfavorable weather Music hall was filled quite full enough for comfort every evening; and the performances were such as to repay all who attended, and fully maintain the good repute of the management. The new leading lady, Miss Annie Louise Ames, is a very pleasing and versatile young actress, and there is not a member of the company but adds strength to it.

The engagement of this excellent organization closes to-day, with a matinee this afternoon and "Jess, the Pet of the Mines," this evening.

BIG ROBBERY.

It was reported on Friday last that an extensive robbery was committed at the Farragut house, Rye beach, on the previous Sunday night, the rooms of several guests being entered through windows opening on the roof of the piazza, by some person who had evidently studied up the matter. A lady from Cleveland is said to have lost nearly $4000 worth of jewelry; a gentleman from Philadelphia lost about $100 in money, and a diamond pin; and another room was robbed of a pocketbook containing a small sum, and several jewel cases which fortunately were empty.

POSTAL AFFAIRS.

A correspondent enquires why there cannot be a gathering of the letters from the street boxes early enough in the morning for letters to go by the mail which leaves for Boston at 8:20 A. M. He also wishes to know why the Sunday mail closes at one o'clock, or three hours before it leaves the station.

We are unable to answer these questions. The carriers have certainly a good deal of tramping to do, but they must have some time off. Persons having letters for mails on the Concord road had better send them to the post-office. Letters for the Pullman mails which leave here at four o'clock A. M. for the west, are in great numbers sent to the police station and mailed by the night watchmen. The Sunday mail is a closed mail, and no letter can go to Boston which is mailed after one o'clock P. M. on Sunday, unless the clerks happen to be at the office for a later closing. The delivery and receiving of letters here by means of carriers is new, and perhaps bye and bye the postmaster may find that different hours for taking the letters from street boxes will better accommodate persons living at a distance from the office. The great accommodation shown by the police officers in receiving letters for the four o'clock A. M. mail, is of course a convenience; but the post-office department should in some way be ready to accommodate mail patrons by means of a mail closed perhaps after the mail arriving at nine o'clock in the evening shall have been distributed. The practice of our people sending such numbers of letters as are nightly deposited at the police station should be succeeded by some effort on the part of the post-office department by having the letters mailed up to a later hour, for example ten o'clock P. M. With a delivery by carriers and a larger mailing of letters at the railway station, the work in the office must be much less than it otherwise would be.

THE DALYS NEXT MONDAY.

On Monday evening next the ever popular Dalys, supported by Lizzie Derious Daly and a carefully selected company, will appear at Music hall in a brand-new vehicle for their exuberant spirits, written by Thomas A. Daly, author of "Vacation," and John J. McNally, dramatic editor of the Boston Herald, and entitled "Upside Down." This is a rather ambiguous title, but the Daly Boys will "get there" with any name and always be found right-side up, for with their push, talent and energy there wouldn't be a particle of doubt but what they'd make a success of even a dramatized version of the inter-state law, or the new base ball rules. Competent critics who have witnessed several of the rehearsals, which have been in progress at the Hollis street theatre, Boston, for the past four weeks, predict a still greater success than "Vacation"—the new play being far superior in literary merit and originality, besides affording a greater scope for the Dalys' peculiar talents.

The company, this season, is under the management of Rich & Harris of the Hollis street theatre and Howard athenæum, Boston, which is a still further guarantee that the new candidate for public favor will be produced in a satisfactory and artistic manner, particularly as they carry all their own special scenery and paraphernalia, which is an expensive feature, considering the arbitrary terms of the inter-state law.

The tickets are going fast at Goodrich's, and those wishing desirable seats will do well to apply at once. See advertisement.

City workmen on Friday morning commenced to remove the wrecked material with which Vaughan street roadway was swamped some time ago. The Times of Friday evening says: "The city teams commenced this morning the work of scraping Vaughan street, which has been in a very muddy condition during rainy weather since it was repaired in the spring. Islington street will have to be treated in the same way. The gravel used for the repair of these streets came from the Plains gravel pit, and looked to be of the best quality when the committee examined it some time since."

HARMLESS WITH SANFORD'S GINGER.

The colored brother lurks in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression as it thinks of the kinks it will tie in the darkey's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that SANFORD'S GINGER will soon be needed.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Clove Aromatics, and Fresh Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine. It is used to work summer complaints, prevent indigestion, dismiss disease germs in all the water drank, restore its circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" officiously urged by unscrupulous druggists on those who call for —McRielly—"I can't make out your friend Bowser. Yesterday I read him an original poem of thirty stanzas, and at its conclusion he walked away without a word of comment." Bangley (enthusiastically)—"That's just like Bowser! He's the most forgiving man I ever knew."

The simplest and best regulator of the disordered Liver in the world, are Carter's Little Liver Pills. They give prompt relief in sick headache, dizziness, nausea, &c.; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles; remove Sallowness and pimples from the complexion, and are mild and gentle in their operation on the bowels. Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96 25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

—When a man goes into Wall street and comes out several millions in debt he is a Napoleon of finance. When he goes in and drops all he owns he is merely a commonplace every-day fool.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

—"I don't want that young poet around here any more," said a father to his daughter, "he will never amount to anything." "Why, papa, George has discovered a sure cure for corns and bunions, and has given up poetry forever." "Oh," said the father, "I'm afraid I've misjudged the young man. Just let things go on as usual."

Hay Fever

Is an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear-ducts and throat, affecting the lungs. An acrid mucus is secreted, and the discharge is accompanied with a burning sensation. There are severe spasms of sneezing, frequent attacks of headache, watery and inflamed eyes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy that can be depended upon to quickly relieve and cure. Fifty cents at druggists; by mail, registered, sixty cents. Ely Bros., 235 Greenwich street, New York.

—"Say," said Berkey to his wife at dinner, "you didn't say anything to anyone about what I was telling you night before last, did you? That's a secret." "A secret? Why, I didn't know it was a secret," she replied, kind of regretfully. "Well, did you tell it; I want to know." "Why, no, I never thought of it since. I didn't know it was a secret."

Chronic Rheumatism Cured.

Valley Stream, N. Y., January 23, 1885.

I am a boatman, and upwards of sixty years of age. During the past two years I have suffered severely from rheumatism of the lower part of my back. My back ached without cessation, and at times I thought I would be paralyzed. I procured two Allcock's Porous Plasters and put them across the lower part of my spine. In twenty-four hours all pain had ceased. At the end of a week I put on two fresh Allcock's Porous Plasters, wore them ten days, took them off, and washed my back with a little alcohol, which removed every trace of the plaster. It is now three months since the plasters cured me, and I feel very much stronger and better than ever before.

ROBERT G. ELDERT.

—"John," said the wife of a Kentucky editor, "your patent combination pocket knife is all rusty—all but the corkscrew part."

—Mamma: "Freddie, how did you like Johnny's party?" "Freddie: "Well, mamma, as they say of President Cleveland, I think Johnny is a good deal better than his party."

—John (just from the club and about to retire for the night): "I say, Tom, there's a brick in my hat sure this time. It's so heavy it breaks off the nail heads." He had been trying to hang up his hat on a fly.

A Chinese Complexion,

When observed in one of the Caucasian race, is indicative of bile in the blood. Who would be yellow when he or she can exhibit the hue of health on cheek and brow through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an antagonist at whose onset liver complaint takes refuge in flight. Fur upon the tongue, nausea, sick headache, pains under the right ribs and shoulder blade, an unpleasantly odorous breath, are remediable with this benign alterative, which does not, like a potent cathartic, drench the intestines or, like the mercurial preparations, contaminate the blood. Not only the liver, but the stomach and bowels are aroused, toned and regulated by this fine family medicine, which has won the confidence of the respectable classes, not by startling assertions on its behalf, but by the consistency of the claims made for it with its performance in every instance when tested.

Rev. A. P. Tracy of Sutton, Vt., has received a unanimous call to the Free Baptist church at Alton.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

Mr. J. Langdon Quimby, who had for some time very acceptably supplied the pulpit of the North Sandwich church, closed his labors there Aug. 23th.

Big Anti-Poverty Society.

The annual report of the New York state savings banks shows total deposits of $469,030,000, an increase of $26,500,000 from last year, and enough to give every man, women and child in the state over $100 each. The number of open accounts is 1,298,045, which is more than one for each family in the state. This showing indicates that there is a much larger anti-poverty society in New York than Henry George will ever be able to muster under his banner.

Pain is the world's bane; St. Jacobs Oil the antidote. The world says so.

In consequence of the death of Albert Cogswell of Essex, Mass., the Cogswell homestead at Henniker, this state, which has been in the posession of the family since 1635, will be sold.

Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodation is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave up the only dose of the RESOLVENT, and the second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all, we used less than one-half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, transmuting the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

A Japanese Magician.

Stories of oriental magic have always their own fascination. One is half inclined to credit wise men of the east with possessing a tradition of occult science long lost among the restless changes of the west. Such a story now came under my notice. The khedive sent for me one evening, and said:

"I have something curious to tell you. There is a Turk here in Cairo who wears a ring which he pretends is gifted with magic virtues. I have seen him and the ring—it is a plain hoop of gold set with a red stone, which is said to have come from Mecca. The Turk also showed me a plate of silver engraved with verses from the Koran. He explained that he could not work the charm himself, but required a child under 10 years of age. The child takes the ring, the silver plate is put on his head, and in a little while the color of the stone changes to white. Thereupon the child looks into the stone, and sees in it visions, and can answer any questions."

The khedive went on to say, that, being quite incredulous, he asked for permission to take the ring home and try it in private. The owner consented. So the khedive took the ring to Ismailia palace, where there happened to be a little girl 8 years old belonging to the nurse—an ignorant child, unable to read or write. When the plate of silver was laid on her hand, almost immediately she cried out, "The stone has turned to white." The khedive then asked questions about persons whom the child had not seen, and received correct descriptions. Another person present asked:

"How many children have I?"

"Two sons and a daughter."

"That is right. What is the elder son like?"

"He wears a coat with a row of buttons down the front, and striped trousers, and has a saber?"

"What is the second son like?"

"He has a coat with two rows of buttons in front, little gold cushions on his shoulders and an anchor embroidered on his cuffs.

The one was in the Turkish army, the other in the Turkish navy, and both were absolutely unknown to the child. Collusion was impossible; for even a wizard would find it hard to penetrate into the ladies' apartment of the khedive's palace. Moreover the questions were too rapid and too varied to admit of shuffling or guessing answers. The khedive's conclusion was: "I cannot believe it, and yet I cannot understand it."

After some talk about English mesmerists and clairvoyants, the khedive related that once, before he came to the throne, he consulted a soothsayer in company with the minister of war.

"What is the news for Egypt?" he asked.

The soothsayer demanded two minutes delay, and then replied: "War with Abyssinia."

"Will the Egyptian army conquer?"

"Give me six minutes," replied the sorcerer.

At the end of that time his face became very troubled, his voice faltered, and his whole body shook as he answered: "The Egyptians will be defeated and their army destroyed; only a small remnant shall be left." The prince laughed at the prophecy and forgot it; but two months later the same minister of war showed him a dispatch from upper Egypt stating that the army had been utterly routed, and four battalions out of six annihilated. After showing the dispatch the minister remarked: "Do you remember our friend the sorcerer?" and the prince recollected. Now as khedive he regards the thing as a curious coincidence.—Court Life in Egypt.

A Mistake Somewhere.

"Oh, you dear, darling old papa!" exclaimed the fair-haired daughter of a Nob Hill plutocrat. "You know how much I wanted those lovely sapphires, and it was so good of you to buy them."

"But, my darling, I have not bought any sapphires for you," said the fond papa, with a puzzled look on his face.

"Oh, you tried to keep it a secret, I know," replied the dear girl, "but I was down at ——, this morning, and he was packing them up, and he told me that they were to be sent to your office, so I knew they were for me, because mamma will only wear rubies."

A Baptist Transformation.

Some fifty years ago (writes a veteran) the orthodox Church people in this town, which is not far from Boston, were much disturbed at a movement to organize a Baptist church from among them, and a little congregation of that faith had already been gathered, which was receiving accessions from the old church. The pastor in charge of the Baptist church took courage, and assured the brethren that if they would only subscribe liberally and build a meeting-house, "Parson P.'s chickens will all turn to ducks."—Harper's Magazine.

It is reported from Philippopolis that M. Petros Papageorgin, a Greek scholar, residing in that city, has discovered an ancient manuscript containing passages of Aristotle's works. The manuscript is believed to be of the fourteenth century, and consists of 180 pages.

"The Political Railroad Scheme."

The Nashua Telegraph, whose editor ought to be somewhat familiar with the complaints of travellers, when unable to effect close connections at points where trains cross each others track, is as earnest, nay, unrelenting in its opposition to the Boston & Maine railroad as in its advocacy of the narrow policy of the Concord. Is it possible that this lack of breadth of vision could have induced the executive to select a new man for railroad commissioner when the Nashua people came to have an officer "no more?"

As we scan the columns of our enterprising contemporary, we note a fact among the advertisements, that a man can leave Nashua at 4:01 P. M. on the train for Rochester, and connect at Epping with the train reaching Portsmouth at 6:10 P. M. and going to Great Falls, Dover, Exeter, etc., by trains leaving Newmarket Junction at 5:50. Now, before this "powerful consolidation" the Boston & Maine railroad, which has done so much to accommodate everyone going near Great Falls, Dover and Rochester, or Newburyport, or any other point where useless competition of trains which did not connect has been succeeded by close connections in the same stations, a passenger from Nashua to reach Portsmouth and the seashore was obliged to leave Nashua at 2:13 P. M. and come to Manchester, where he had to remain from 2:43 until 4:25, and then start for Portsmouth and stations on the line of the Boston & Maine. Does any one pretend that the Worcester, Nashua and Portland division of the Boston & Maine road is not operated to a greater advantage to the public under the present lessees than it was when controlled by managers as far off as Worcester? Is not Nashua to-day better served in the way of various connections than before the Boston & Maine came to its aid?

From the Telegraph comes too the note of political alarm, which seeks to induce members of the legislature to vote against a measure of a financial character only, on the ground that it has among its advocates members of a political party in sympathy with the national administration? Is this manly? Is it to this kind of service the oath of office of legislators relates? Is New Hampshire to stop in all its efforts to develope its interests, to consider how the grantees of some new corporation will vote at the next presidential election? Are we to say that our railway property shall be managed, for example, only by the men in sympathy with the present state administration? That Harry Bingham and men of his kind shall step out from the direction of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad, that a time-honored democrat like John H. Pearson shall retire from the direction of the Concord road, and Frank Jones shall not be the president of the Portsmouth & Dover or a director in the Boston & Maine, or A. W. Sulloway longer remain president of the Northern? Such advocacy, even if concealed under the Quixotic feint of attacking a "political railroad," is a confession that with no confidence either in the financial conditions assured or the success of the schemes it endorses, it can carry on war only by attacking what does not exist, and seeking to arouse prejudice against measures the passage of which could not be prevented by a fair, straightforward discussion of their merits, and a candid examination of any and all objections to their enactment. We still have faith that not even the extended duration of the session has exhausted the supply of good sense and capacity to view these questions in the broad light of progressive liberality which has always characterized the members of the New Hampshire General Court.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Mary E. Douglass, of Boothbay, Me., and the barque Sarah, of Boston, were destroyed by the hurricane of Aug. 20th and 21st. All hands saved, excepting one man of the Sarah's crew.

The whaling schooner Ellen Rispah, of Provincetown, Mass., foundered in the gale of Aug. 20th; four of her crew were picked up; when lost she had 260 barrels of sperm oil and sixty barrels of whale oil on board. The whaling schooner Agate, of Provincetown, lost both masts in the same hurricane.

The first open regatta of the Bar Harbor yacht club was sailed on Friday, Aug. 26th. Much disappointment was felt that none of the big sloops were present to take part, and the arrangements for the yachts that were present were not wholly satisfactory. The Gitana won the race for first-class schooners, beating the Iroquois; and the Adrienne beat the other second-class schooners. The Ulidia won the prize for second-class sloops.

Steamer St. Paul, at San Francisco Aug. 24th, from Ounalaska, Alaska, reports that the schooner Angel Dolly was seized July 28th, and her captain killed the same day while lifting the gun off the cabin house, the shot going through his body, and striking the man at the wheel, breaking his arm; her catch was 180 skins. The total number of seal skins found on the captured vessels taken by the United States revenue steamer Richard Rush is 4885, valued at about $100,000.

—Striped bathing suits are tabooed at high-toned bathing beaches. Suggestions of Sing Sing are unpleasant to some of the visitors.

—Ives, as a graduate from the compositor's case, has proved the biggest typographical error of the period. He has used the cipher box too much.

—Jack—"Is that a valuable ring you have on, Gus?" Gus—"I've hung it up for $75." "You don't say so?" "Yes. Seventy-five times. Dollar each time."

—"That is cool," observed Spilkins, as the plumber's bill for $16, for stopping a leak, was handed him. "It may be cool," replied the man with the bill, "but it is not collected."

—Jessie—"If that bull should attack us what could you do?" Tom—"I could reach that fence in less than two seconds." "Yes, but what could I do?" "You? Why, your parasol would keep his attention until I was safely over!"

—Professor Nishigava, of Japan, is studying the German art of beer brewing at its source in Munich, where he spent as much as eight days in one brewery. He was sent thither by the Japanese government, which is desirous of checking the growing consumption of brandy, and contemplates the introduction of German and English beer free of duty, while putting a high tax on stronger alcoholic liquors.

UPSIDE DOWN.

This evening, at Music hall, the Dalys will play their new piece "Upside Down" to as many as the hall will hold. As it has never been given here, the following synopsis will be of interest to all ticket purchasers:

All the scenes of the piece are on the estate of an eccentric inventor, who has mortgaged all his property and is almost penniless through patenting inventions which are failures, and who has applied his own patent contrivances to nearly every piece of property he possesses, and the spectator cannot help laughing when he sees doors, windows, trellises, fences and hay cutters used in a most remarkable manner and with most comical results.

The pet project of the inventor is the marriage of his daughter and niece to the son and nephew of his old college chum, a wealthy retired merchant. As the young couples have never seen each other, they naturally object to this matrimonial arrangement, and the young men run away from home and join a circus, where, being athletes, they succeed very well. The show, however, fails and disbands near the inventor's home, and the young men make their way to the farm of the inventor, and there meet the young ladies. The inventor is in despair, as he had hoped to use the ground rent which the showman was to pay him, for the purpose of paying the instalment on his new patent. The young men come to the rescue, and agree to give a circus performance, with the assistance of the inventor and the members of the family. The circus is given in the second act, and is amusing in the extreme.

The third act is more quiet in tone than the preceding ones, but is very enjoyable nevertheless, having a number of novel features, much good music and a very lively dance—called the "Mugwump Fling," because it can be danced in any party. This act is devoted to furthering the love schemes of the young people, and the scene is the interior of a barn, where a quilting frolic is given. There are two amusing sub-plots running through the piece, which is unusually well constructed for a comedy of its class; its lines are bright, and hit at the follies of the day; the characters are clearly outlined, and contrasted with no little skill; and the pantomine and trick business, introduced with great effect, has not been excelled by any American provider of light entertainment. The original music is not the least attractive feature of the comedy. It is far above the average, and several of the number will no doubt prove very popular.

ACCIDENTS.

Mr. Samuel Dimond, of Winter street, employed at the Portsmouth machine shop, while at work on Wednesday of last week had one of his eyes very badly injured by a flying fragment of steel, which cut the eye in two places, the hurt being so serious that it is feared the sight may be destroyed or permanently impaired. Dr. Berry attended him.

Mr. Charles A. Lozier, clerk of the Kearsarge house, while hanging a blind on the Goodwin cottage at York beach last Friday fell to the ground, a distance of twenty-five feet, through the slipping of the ladder on which he was standing, and was taken up insensible, and bleeding from the ears and mouth. Dr. Hawkes of York was called and found no bones fractured, and thinks Mr. Lozier will be able to resume his duties in a week or two. We hope so.

PUNISHED FOR CRUELTY.

John Hunt of this city was complained of before Judge Bufford, on Friday last, for cruelly overloading a horse on the previous Sunday, and was fined $5 and costs. Mrs. Flora Spinney was fined $2 and costs at the same term, for overdriving a stable horse on Sunday night. Col. T. E. O. Marvin, state agent of the New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, brought both complaints.

Earlier in the week John White of Ossipee was held in $500 for the supreme court, and Henry White was fined $10 and costs, by the police magistrate of that district, the pair while drunk having beaten to death a span of horses; these cases also were prosecuted by Col. Marvin.

PERSONAL.

Miss Nellie M. Flagg of Boston is visiting at Mr. James W. Wingate's on Austin street.

Mr. Jesse H. Wilson starts for Wenham, Mass., this morning, for a vacation of a week or two.

Mrs. Louis Harris and son Robert, of Longwood, Mass., are visiting the family of John Sise, Esq., on Court street.

Mr. Frank Chapman and wife, and Miss Chapman, of Cambridge, are visiting at Hon. Daniel Marcy's, Pleasant street.

Mrs. Korner of Baltimore and Mrs. Worcester of Newburyport are guests of Mrs. F. W. Miller and sisters at Lincoln hill.

Mr. M. A. Alexander, general fuel agent of the Concord railroad, and formerly Concord & Portsmouth station agent in this city, is with his family at Rye beach.

Capt. Nath'l S. Patten and wife, of Florida, who have been in this city for some weeks on a visit to Capt. Albert Rand and wife, leave this morning for Covington, Ky., where Capt. Patten has considerable property interests.

Engineer Charles W. Green, who was injured by an accident in Boston several weeks ago, was on the street last Saturday, and down town. Everybody was glad to see him, but would be more glad to see him looking better. But then a man who is knocked about by a moving locomotive is very lucky to have any look left to him at all.

A NAVAL NABOB.

Foster's Democrat of Dover calls attention to the junket that Secretary Whitney—whom it styles "an elegant little nabob"—was last week indulging in at government expense down at Bar Harbor. Mr. Foster says that when Secretary Chandler excursionized in the Tallapoosa, the democratic papers "piled it up mountain high against the republican party and administration for such reckless and infamous squandering of the people's money wrung from them by taxation," and promised to reform the "gross abuse" if the people would give them the power. Now it is not the Tallapoosa but the Dispatch, which "trig little vessel is on a bender down east, anchored at Bar Harbor with all the jolly Democratic Secretary Whitney's dear friends and relations on board."

The North Atlantic war fleet rendezvoused there by his order, and really the goings on were extraodinary, if not downright scandalous. The official salutes, the visiting, the receptions, the feasting, the toasts, "drank standing," in government champagne, the dancing, the racing, the display of dress, gold lace and diamonds, remind one most strikingly of the extravagance and follies of the corrupt court of Louis XV. of France, while they put the blush of crimson to the cheek of the neglected goddess of Jeffersonian simplicity and reform, about which we heard so much in 1884.

And not the least strange thing about it all is that, in face of their past record, not a democratic paper utters a word of rebuke. "They are as dumb as oysters now. What was a great crime when practised by republicans, has become a cardinal virtue" when the party of reform and democracy undefiled is running the machine.

Bro. Foster is a very uncomfortable kind of man to have round, when little things you don't care to have mentioned are going on. He got hold of a very sharp pen years ago, and hasn't lost it yet.

THE STRIKING SHOEMAKERS.

The strike at the Portsmouth shoe factory is completely over, so far as the factory is concerned, there being now at work as many lasters as the managers can employ, and all departments of the factory running to the full capacity.

The executive board of District Assembly 179, Knights of Labor, on Friday evening declared off the strike in Martin, French & Co.'s shoe factory at Dover, and ordered the strikers back to work Saturday morning. The factory started up on Saturday with many of the strikers at work, and also Miss Ham and Miss Tanner, the two stitchers whose employment led to the strike. The Knights of Dover held a meeting Saturday evening to discuss the strike, and also took action against patronizing any newspaper opposed to the principles of the order.

See notice of horses and carriages for sale by auction at No. 47 Cabot street this forenoon at ten o'clock.

A barrel of "Elredge Brewing Co.'s Hop Beer, not intoxicating," was seized at Haverhill, Mass., last week. Upon the trial before Judge Carter it appeared that there was no evidence that the beer was intoxicating nor intended for sale, and the beer was returned to the custody of the respondent.

The Unitarian Sunday school will resume its sessions next Sunday.

Smelts are being taken in large numbers from the platform in the rear of the old north mill, the first time for years.

Among the freight charters reported last Saturday was one of a schooner from Baltimore to this port with 600 tons of coal at $1 25 per ton.

The work on the new Jones brewery is being rapidly pushed, and the walls are fast rising.

Last Thursday was political temperance day at the camp of the New England Royal Templars at Old Orchard, and some stirring speeches were made. Colonel W. E. Eustis of Dixfield, Me., attacked the republican party, and was replied to vigorously by Rev. Mr. LeLacheur of Portland, and others.

The Eureka Bakery on Daniel street after suspending operations for three days, has reopened for business in the name of C. A. Stevens, and hot bread is now delivered in all parts of the city twice a day, in the morning and afternoon, as heretofore.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruchings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

BETTER AND FUNNIER THAN EVER.

City Marshal Rowe called at the various liquor saloons of the city on Saturday, and notified the keepers thereof that the Sunday ordinance in regard to liquor saloons is to be enforced to the letter, so far as in his power lies. The new marshal starts in well; not with any grand splurge, to throw up a shower of spray to attract public attention for a moment and then pass out of sight, but as though he intended to do his sworn duty to the best of his ability. He has only to do this to have the unanimous support of every citizen whose support is worth having, of whatever political party.

Rev. Mr. Hovey, at the close of the services in Christ church Sunday afternoon, stated that he had just come from the bedside of Mr. Harry G. Tanton, who was at the point of death.

Burglars broke into C. O. Battin's house at Derry Depot, Wednesday night of last week, and stole some tools. They also broke into the hand-car house and secured a crowbar, with which they effected an entrance into the railroad station ticket office, breaking a window in the ladies' room, and forcing the office door. They got no money.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

Hay Fever.

I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for fifteen years and have tried various things without doing any good. I read of the many wondrous cures of Ely's Cream Balm and thought I would try once more. In fifteen minutes after one application I was wonderfully helped. Two weeks ago I commenced using it and now I feel entirely cured. It is the greatest discovery ever known or heard of. DUHAMEL CLARK, farmer, Lynn, Mass.

The independent democrats of Maryland have started a determined revolt against the domination of Gorman, Higgins, Rasin and other machine bosses. Mr. John K. Cowen, the leader of the movement, gives an outline of what it is proposed to accomplish.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "perfection."

A Chinese Complexion,

When observed in one of the Caucasian race, is indicative of bile in the blood. Who would be yellow when he or she can exhibit the hue of health on cheek and brow through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an antagonist at whose onset liver complaint takes refuge in flight. Fur upon the tongue, nausea, sick headache, pain under the right ribs and shoulder blade, an unpleasantly odorous breath, are remediable with this benign alterative, which does not, like a potent cathartic, drench the intestines or, like the mercurial preparations, contaminate the blood. Not only the liver, but the stomach and bowels are aroused, toned and regulated by this fine family medicine, which has won the confidence of the respectable classes, not by startling assertions on its behalf, but by the consistency of its claims made for it with its performance in every instance when tested.

Elaborate preparations are being made at Philadelphia for the grand banquet to be given on the occasion of the centennial of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

Stimulate the Blood.

Brandreth's Pills are the great blood purifier. They are a purgative and blood tonic, they act equally on the bowels, the kidneys, and the skin, thus cleansing the system by the natural outlet of the body—they may be called the purgative sudorific and diuretic medicine. They stimulate the blood so as to enable nature to throw off all morbid humors, and any disease no matter by what name it may be called. One or two of them taken every night will prove an infallible remedy.

Herbert A. Johnson, proprietor of the corn-canning factory at Gorham, Me., has died from injuries received at the explosion of the boiler Aug. 26th.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

Charles Alexander Percy, of Suspension Bridge, N. Y., went through the Whirlpool rapids Aug. 28th in a small life-boat built by himself on his own pattern. His trip he says was not for notoriety but to test his invention, and he will now model a large boat of the kind, and seek a patent.

Thomas Stevens, the bicycler, who travelled around the world on his wheel, states that one custom that appears to be universal is the use of tobacco. In some form or other, he says, the weed is used by men of every country, and in most of them by the women as well. Another custom that is even more universal is asking: "Is it hot enough for you?" In cold climates the question is changed to suit the temperature.

BABY HUMORS

And all Skin and Scalp Diseases Speedily Cured by Cuticura.

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, transmuting the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Individually, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, suffering and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply present palliatives merely, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been restored, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

The Family Medicine Chest.

Every family should be supplied with a small medicine chest, especially in the country where the drug store cannot be promptly reached or a doctor visited. These chests can be bought at prices ranging from $3 to $25, according to size, kind of material used and beauty of finish. They contain square, velvet-lined compartments into each of which a square bottle with a ground-glass stopper is fitted. Beneath is a drawer for salves, plasters and medicines in a dry state. You can make your own chest, if handy with tools and disposed to be economical.

I have had such a chest in use for twenty years. It has paid me over and over, and has often spared me great anxiety of mind. It contains six four-ounce bottles in which I keep Jamaica ginger, camphor, sweet spirits of nitre, a mixture of sweet oil and lime water, etc.; it also contains six two-ounce vials filled with laudanum, paregoric, hive syrup, arnica, etc. In the drawer I keep chlorate of potash, sugar of lead, court plaster, ready-spread mustard plaster, lint, a wad of cotton, etc. Every article is plainly labeled, and thus I have at hand many of the remedies most needed in ordinary emergencies.

It does not require a great knowledge of medicine to know what to use for the ordinary ailments of the human family, especially for the younger members. In cases of fever a teaspoonful of sweet spirits of nitre in a glass of water taken in small sips at short intervals is most excellent. A relief for scalds, burns, poison ivy, etc., will be found in an external application of sweet oil and lime water. Jamaica ginger is used for cramps in the stomach. Sugar of lead water used externally will reduce swellings in the limbs. Hive syrup is given for croup. Arnica is rubbed on sprains, bruises, insect bites, etc. Chlorate of potash is used for sore throat.

Of course, if the case is a serious one, a physician should be promptly consulted; but during the interval these simple remedies can be intelligently used, and such prompt intelligent use is often of great service previous to the arrival of the physician. More than one physician has said to me, in substance, "you have checked the disease in early stage; I have little to recommend beyond what you have already done.

My wife and myself have been alarmed scores of times by symptoms of fever or croup in our children on a midwinter midnight, the nearest physician five miles away. In almost every instance by giving the patient sweet spirits of nitre for the fever, or hive syrup for the croup, we found the child much better in the morning, our fears allayed, and the visit of a physician unneeded. These statements, borne out by a long experience, should be sufficient to extend the introduction of the family medicine chest. I have found it of such great use to me, in a practical, beneficial and economical way, that I am urged to call the attention of others to its merits.—Frank. H. Stauffer, in Good Housekeeping.

Col. Bob's Philanthropy.

Everybody knows Col. Ingersoll's reputation as a lawyer and a politician, but everyone can not speak of his personality truly. Take word "friend," for instance. The broadness of the term can not be better shown than by something he said to a man last week. They were talking of the prosaic matter of "new shirts," when the colonel declared he was not going to have another made for him until he could find a shirt-maker who was honest enough to give the woman who did the work the $1.50 each he was willing to allow.

"I'm afraid you'll have to wait some time. Shirtmakers' fortunes are not built that way."

"Then I'll wait," said the colonel. Henceforth I wear no shirt until I have seen the woman who makes it, and she has told me herself that she got paid for her work."

This, then, is what the word "friend," as applied above, means. No man can say that Col. Ingersoll ever paid him less than his work was worth, even in the most liberal sense of the word, or that he was ever asked for a good turn and was refused. It is not to his friends that this highhearted man is a friend, but to all honest men and women.—New York World.

They Were Both Losers.

"Yes, speculation ruined me," he sighed, as he bit off another chew of cheap plug. "In my last deal in stocks I lost my elegant home on Fifth avenue."

"Was it No. 0946," asked a man on the box.

"It was."

"Then I was the man who got it."

"Possible? But you also seem to be in bad luck."

"I am. The wages of the servants in that house for six months bankrupted me, and I haven't been able to brace up again."—Wall Street News.

A small boy, swimming with others in the Erie canal, near Clyde, suddenly yelled with vigor that 'so thing' had hold of him. He scrambled ashore, and the something proved to be a small snapping turtle, that had grabbed him by the leg. His beak had gone through the skin and some of the flesh of the boy's leg. These animals never let go their hold while there's life. In this case the jaws did not open till after the head had been cut off. The wound made by the turtle's beak was not very serious. The boy wrapped a handkerchief around his leg and started for home, carrying the turtle.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headache, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

The widely circulated Yankee Blade has a new editor, Mr. S. W. Foss, a journalist of experience. Mr. Foss has attained a wide reputation, his humorous verses in Tid-Bits, Puck, Judge, the Detroit Free Press and other papers having made his name familiar everywhere. He was long the editor of the Lynn Saturday Union, and his contributions in prose and verse to other papers have been very numerous.

Trouble in Cuba.

A special despatch from Key West, Fla., under date of Aug. 28th, says: "Advices received here last night state that the greatest excitement prevails in Havana, occasioned by the recent act of Captain General Manin, in taking possession of the custom house and placing the officials under arrest. The city is in charge of regular troops and the situation becomes daily more desperate, recalling events attending the massacre of medical students in 1871." The captain general is said to have called to his presence the colonels of the volunteer regiments, whose members are opposed to his administration, and ordered them to disarm their men. Serious troubles are feared, and something very like a panic prevails in Havana.

In the Swim.

Six young girls, the oldest but sixteen and the youngest eleven years old, had a swimming race of one mile at Coney Island, New York, Aug 27th, for the championship and a gold medal. The winner was Grace Blankley, aged thirteen, who made the mile in thirty-seven minutes, Alice Ward being second, three minutes later.

Another Brotherhood.

The first annual meeting of the Baseball Players' Brotherhood was held at Earle's hotel in New York on Aug. 28th, every league club being represented, and took steps toward securing a new contract system between club managers and players, looking to the unconditional release of players when their services are not further needed. It is time the humiliating "selling" of players were abolished, for the good of the game.

MARITIME NOTES.

The steamer E. B. Shaw brought to to this port on Monday about 200 excursionists from Haverhill and Newburyport, Mass. The steamer started at four o'clock in the afternoon on her return.

The ship Lillian, of St. John, N. B., 1200 tons, was totally wrecked in the storm of Aug. 26th, 300 miles east of Halifax. The captain and crew of fifteen men, and the captain's wife, were rescued by the Scotch steam yacht Mohican, bound from Glasgow for New York with her owners, the Clarks, cotton-thread manufacturers and principal owners of the cutter yacht Thistle. The yacht was five hours in saving the ship's company, as a tremendous sea was running, and the people had to be hauled from the wreck to the yacht's boat with lines, and again hauled from the boat to the steamer through the water. The Mohican arrived at Halifax, N. S., Aug. 28th, with her bulwarks stove, and short of coal.

The annual open regatta of the Hull yacht club was sailed Saturday, Aug. 27th, there being over sixty starters, in nine classes.

The 123d regatta of the Beverly yacht club was sailed in Buzzard's bay, off Monument beach, Aug. 27th; there were five contestants in the first class, seven in the second, and twelve in the third. There was a stiff breeze and a short race, and the favorite in each class won.

The first open regatta of the Cohasset yacht club was sailed on Aug. 27th, off Sandy cove. There were three classes and many entries, and all started out well, but the wind died away and the races ended in a drift.

Gov. Hill of New York is rapidly forging his way to the front as a democratic candidate for the presidency. In fact he has reached that point where he has the gratitude of the New York Liquor Dealers' Association, and its formal vote of thanks for defending its interests as exemplified in his veto of the high license bill. The third party prohibitionists also thank the governor for the same veto. The liquor dealers and ultra prohibitionists of New York are in the same boat.

Viscount Doneraille of Ireland, who died last week in Dublin from hydrophobia caused by a fox bite, was a viscount of the peerage of Ireland, and since 1885 has held a seat in the house of lords as one of the Irish representative peers. The bite was given by a pet tame fox, which bit the coachman at the same time. Three days afterward the fox died from rabies. Lord Doneraille and the coachman were both treated by Pasteur five days after the biting, but, as it now appears, ineffectually, so far as the viscount was concerned.

All hod carriers in Chicago working for less than standard wages were on Aug. 28th, under pain of expulsion, ordered by the union to strike on the 29th, unless accorded full prices. Since the confusion in the building trades caused by the bricklayers' strike, about 1200 or 1500 of the 5000 hod carriers there have, as a matter of policy, been submitting to a cut of three cents an hour. The leaders of the hod carriers now believe that this submission is no longer necessary.

The president has appointed Judge Alexander McCue, solicitor of the treasury, as the United States commissioner of fish and fisheries, to succeed Professor Baird. Judge McCue will retain his position as solicitor of the treasury, and will render his services gratuitously on the fish commission, as Professor Baird did for years.

An Albany watchmaker to whom a watch that had been dropped overboard on a fishing excursion was taken found that some of the works were so badly rusted that they were useless. "If," said he, "you had dropped your watch in oil as soon as you took it out of the water, or, better yet, had dropped it into alcohol or any kind of strong liquor, it would have cost you nothing but the cleaning."

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

DEATH OF HARRY G. TANTON.

Mr. Harry G. Tanton, one of the best known business men of the city, and than whom none was more respected, died about 12:30 o'clock Monday morning at his home on Deer street, after being confined to his house about a month. His many excellent qualities had endeared him to all who knew him, and in his death the community at large, as well as his family and immediate business connections, suffers a loss. Such men can never well be spared.

THE BENNETT & MOULTON OPERA CO.

This company, which has for a number of years past given our citizens entertainment of a high order at a low cost, opens the season of 1887 at Music hall on Thursday evening, Sept. 1st. In a chat yesterday with the treasurer of the company, Mr. B. S. Driggs, he said:

The company will present as the opening opera on Thursday evening, Sept. 1st, the "Chimes of Normandy," and we have some choice voices to present to your people. Our prima donna is Miss Mamie Siegfried, an attractive, sweet singer, formerly of the Boston Ideals, the second being Miss Etta Reed, a highly accomplished singer. Sig. Jules Cluzette as tenor, and Mr. Frank Woolley, baritone, also have voices of excellent compass; besides we have two great fun makers in the persons of Mr. Gilbert Clayton as first comedian and Mr. Jerry Slattery as second; and the people must laugh this year sure. A bevy of bright girls with choice voices compose the chorus, principal among them being Miss Emily Waite, Miss Blanche Nichols, Miss Lillie Nichols, Miss Anna Lee, Miss Lulu Nichols, and others. The gentlemen strong in chorus are J. A. Donnelly, G. H. Bicknall, W. C. Robbins, and Mr. Charles Anderson, the stage being under the efficient management of Mr. Gilbert Clayton, while Mr. Milton Smith in his careful manner acts as musical director.

In answer to a question as to how he accounted for the Bennett & Moulton company achieving such uniform success, he replied:

By giving the people the best of entertainments; and the proprietor, Mr. Geo. A. Baker, rigidly insists on this, and having ample capital to back the enterprise, he can call to his aid skilled artists, as they know their money is always ready; and he gives his personal attention to the business, and has as acting manager the veteran, never-sleeping gentleman, Mr. Rufus Somerby, as his principal aid. Hence crowded houses greet the company. Through Mr. Ayers, your local manager, I learn that this company drew the largest crowds ever in the Portsmouth opera house when here two years ago, and we shall do it again this week.

On our remarking that the billing of the company was very fine, he answered:

Yes, sir; we have some very attractive paper, and our large lithograph stand we consider one of the finest posted in this country, besides numerous smaller lithographs; but I must not take up your time longer, so drop in and hear the "Chimes of Normandy" on Thursday, Good evening.

And the treasurer was gone.

ACCIDENTS.

The steamer Mineola came into the lower harbor from Newburyport on Sunday, and landed a load of excursionists at the wharf at Newcastle used by the steamer James Sampson. There were several hundred of them, of both sexes, and after a stay of about two hours the whistle sounded the recall, and all hands made haste to get on board. Three young men, the last of the party, were hurrying down the wharf lest they should get left, and when about midway, several boards over which scores of women and children had just been passing suddenly broke under them, and let all three down. One went into the water feet foremost; another went down head first, bruising his head somewhat, and destroying a new Derby hat, whereat he expressed much wrath; the third caught hold of some part of the wharf, so that he did not have to swim, but he got a thorough soaking up to his neck. The wharf has been complained of as being very unsafe, and this accident emphasizes the complaints.

The collector of internal revenue carries a cane. It is not because of the increased dignity of his official relations, but because by reason of a wheel coming off his carriage last week he was thrown out, and somewhat bruised and injured by the accident.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The York Beach trains are packed on every trip, standing room in the aisles of the cars not being always easy to secure.

The engine which draws the trains on the York beach railroad is called the North Wind. It would be better just at this time to have people drawn to York by the "Sea Breeze."

The White mountain express train, which usually leaves this city at 1:55 P. M., was very heavy on Monday. The large amount of baggage to be put on here, and which more than filled the baggage car, delayed the departure of the train till 2:15 P. M.

The vestibule cars which run over the Boston & Maine and Maine Central railroads cost $18,000 each. The porter will take a two-dollar bill for blacking the boots and routing out passengers when they reach a sleeping period, if they do not happen to have a five about them, just the same as in the ordinary Pullman.

"PIETY WITHOUT DISPLAY."

The difference between letting one's light shine, and making a display of piety, was the subject in the Pleasant street church last Sunday.

Jesus said "do not your alms before men." He also said, "Let your light shine before men," leaving us, as he often does, to extract the common sense and find the common hidden motive of both passages.

The monastic orders of the middle ages arose from a feeling that the world was diametrically opposed to God; that flesh and spirit were at perpetual variance. This feeling and these orders are survivals of the old oriental idea of the quality of nature. It is a heathen idea that one must crucify the flesh in order to be pious or religious. Pagans believed that spirit was of God and that flesh was of the devil, and the man who was the most pious was the man who could inflict the most pain upon himself, or dress and look the most unnatural. Christ did away with the whole system by warning us not to disfigure our faces that we might appear outwardly to fast, for all these things are a display of false piety. The flesh does not belong to the evil one; it is ours to glorify and spiritualize, and this so far from being ostentation is letting our light shine.

Again, church architecture and service and dress are to be progressive and natural. They are to appeal to the highest senses and tastes, so as not to be unnaturally conspicuous, outwardly dramatic, for that is "to be seen of men" when they are the latter. We are to give to the moral and spiritual culture of men the best that the world affords. The motive for opposing this is often not candid.

Again, a display of respect for piety is seen in people who are not their natural selves in the presence of a clergyman, as if swearing and a man's favorite stories hurt a minister, and were liable to corrupt him. The man is defiled out of whose mouth it comes, and in order to study human nature the clergyman is anxious to see it just as it is, not over nice, nor over brusque.

So we are not to display anything for piety or in the presence of piety, but for our own sakes. No man can injure a religion that has had boulders of geology roll over it, and yet rises serene among the planets of heaven and even there finds favor. Take religion out of your pocket and let it consecrate the world.

Two of the street commissioner's men were on Monday afternoon engaged in boarding up the windows and nailing up the doors of the old mill on Maplewood avenue.

The Dalys had a packed house at Music hall on Monday evening, and of course caused unbounded mirth. Their new play, or farce, or comedy, or whatever it may be called, is far superior to "Vacation" in which they have appeared for several years past.

Sixty boarders from the Hotel Wentworth left on Monday morning for Chicago. A special car was engaged at the railroad station in this city for their accommodation.

See advertisement of groceries, boots and shoes, etc., at auction; the goods are selling very cheap.

The Portsmouth base ball club played a game at Wallis' sands, Rye, Saturday afternoon, with the "Rye Boarders" club; nine innings were played, when darkness prevented further play, the score being ten to ten.

The trains from this city to Boston are now very heavy, and rarely able to start on time, owing to the immense quantities of baggage which have to be stowed away. "The season" begins to draw near its end, and the innumerable birds of passage are working toward their homes.

Mr. Charles Brooks of Kittery, mail route agent between Kittery Point and Portsmouth, drove into this city on Monday in a new and very handsome wagon, the production of Kittery workmen. The vehicle was built by Mr. Granville Spinney at his shop near Portsmouth bridge, and was painted by Mr. John Walker; and it is evidence that the people of Kittery need not go outside the borders of their own town for any ordinary carriage they may require.

The new fire-alarm box at the Kearsarge house was connected with the system on Monday afternoon.

"Which Their Language is Plain."

Messrs. Sweet & Bond, shoe manufacturers of Haverhill, Mass., under date of August 26th issued the following card, which certainly leaves nothing to ask for in the way of plainness:

We learn that there are rumors afloat that the factory of Sweet & Bond will be run as a union factory after the present season is over. This we most emphatically deny. Let it be understood once for all, now and forever, that we shall never do business except on free American principles. SWEET & BOND.

Burglars entered Strong & Isham's store at Gilsum on the night of Aug. 26th. The postoffice is in the store. Three hundred dollars in town funds were stolen, and $150 belonging to the postoffice funds were also taken. There is no clew to the robbers.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

Hay Fever.

I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for fifteen years and have tried various things without doing any good. A fresh attempt to kill the czar was made Aug. 20th. A nihilist disguised as an officer of the guards approached the imperial carriage on a journey from St. Petersburg to Krasneosels, and fired a revolver twice. The first shot missed the czar, but the second perforated his coat.

A Chinese Complexion,

When observed in one of the Caucasian race, is indicative of bile in the blood. Who would be yellow when he or she can exhibit the hue of health on cheek and brow through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an antagonist at whose onset liver complaint takes refuge in flight. Fur upon the tongue, nausea, sick headache, pains under the right ribs and shoulder blade, an unpleasantly odorous breath, are remediable with this benign alterative, which does not, like a potent cathartic, drench the intestines or, like the mecurial preparations, contaminate the blood. Not only the liver, but the stomach and bowels are aroused, toned and regulated by this fine family medicine, which has won the confidence of the respectable classes, not by startling assertions on its behalf, but by the consistency of the claims made for it with its performance in every instance when tested.

Eben Richardson and his son were drowned in Southwest Harbor, Mt. Desert, Aug. 28th. The body of Mr. Richardson was recovered, but that of the boy has not yet been found. It is supposed that a plank started on the boat in which they were sailing, and that it filled in consequence, with the sad result.

Stimulate the Blood.

Brandreth's Pills are the great blood purifier. They are a purgative and blood tonic, they act equally on the bowels, the kidneys, and the skin, thus cleansing the system by the natural outlet of the body—they may be called the purgative sudorific and diuretic medicine. They stimulate the blood so as to enable nature to throw off all morbid humors, and cure disease no matter by what name it may be called. One or two of them taken every night will prove an infallible remedy.

"Jimmy" McDevitt, a notorious rough, thief and burglar, and nephew of "Jimmy" Elliot, the prize fighter who was killed by "Jerry" Dunn in Chicago a few years ago, was caught robbing a store in New York on the night of Aug. 28th, and in attempting to escape by plunging through a plate glass window was disembowelled by the broken glass, and soon died.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

Secretary Whitney and party went to Widow's island from Bar Harbor, Aug. 29th, on board the United States steamer Despatch, to inspect the government works at the naval quarantine station there.

Rev. David Seymore, of Janesville, Minn., who enloped to Europe with Mrs. Fanny Henry of that city, was arrested on his return to New York last week aboard the Aurania. Mr. Henry chased him across the ocean and back.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation and disordered stomach.

Owen A. Calvin is appointed United States attorney for the district of Massachusetts in place of George M. Stearns, resigned.

Girl Missing.

Rochester was intensely excited on Tuesday over the disappearance of Mollie Hussey, a beautiful young girl of fifteen years, who left her home Monday forenoon to place flowers on her mother's grave in the town cemetery. As she did not return at noon search was made, and the flowers found on the grave, but no Mollie. Late in the afternoon a general alarm was given, and hundreds of men went in search. Late at night it was learned that some railroad men saw her walking on the track toward Great Falls, and on going to that place the station master said she was in the ladies' room at the station about five o'clock, insensible; she was soon restored, but acted as if not in her right mind, and soon left. Tuesday morning the selectmen of Rochester ordered the bells rung, and authorized the livery stables to supply teams to seaching parties; and Wallace's tannery and shoe factory, and other establishments, shut down, that all might join in the search, it being feared that the girl's reason had become unsettled by grief at her mother's death, and that she was sick in some wood or field. Late on Tuesday the station master at Salmon Falls reported that a girl answering her description bought a ticket there on Monday evening, for some station south of Dover.

Saturday of this week is the last day that the trade dollars will be redeemed. After that they will only be worth their value in old silver.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to sit up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and one cake of CUTICURA SOAP.

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assails the membranous lining and envelops the bones, entring through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all palliatives and simply procrastinate suffering, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on healthy constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Who? What? Which? Where?

She scarcely can peep thro' the leaves of her fan.
Her heart doth so flutter, her cheeks do so glow,
As she asks all a-trembling: "Who is the man?"

Twenty doth bring her to years of discretion,
No longer she blushes, but changes her plan;
With thoughts of the pocket, the place, the profession,
She questions the circle with: "What is the man?"

At thirty, each day she thought doth appal her,
That hour by hour her roses grow wan;
Her circle of lovers grow smaller and smaller,
She dons each deceiver with: "Which is the man?"

Forty changes her tune, and, grown romantic,
Deems it charming to simper as much as she can;
Haunts watering-places, streams the Atlantic,

House Building in Honduras.

When the Carib or the inland Indian reaches the conclusion that the time has come for him to secure the services of a woman to cultivate his maize, and platinos, his yams and rice, and to cook the fish he may bring home; he clears a spot of ground where he purposes to put a house. Next he plants firmly in the ground two parallel rows of posts some eight feet high. To the tops of these are firmly lashed the long bamboos or other poles that are to be the "plates" to which the lower ends of the rafters are to be fastened. The latter are slender poles rising steeply to the light ridge-pole, some twenty or more feet above the side of the house. Across these rafters are lashed horizontally thin, long sticks split from Spanish cedar, from bamboo or from the palm. The frame for the roof is now complete. The builder then goes, machete in hand, to the nearest thicket of palmettos or to a coarse palm and hacks down the graceful fronds, sweeping in wide arches upward from the rich black soil. Shaving off the sharp edges of the leaf-stalk, that cut the unwary like a keen knife, he splits the butt end and placing, a part on each side of a small sapling, he pulls sturdily. The stalk splits evenly throughout its entire length, and the operator has two slender, tapering stalks, perhaps twenty feet long, each having pendant at right angles to itself a fringe of leaves, rich and glossy green and one to two inches wide and from twelve to twenty-four inches in length. These grow so closely together that their edges touch. In the young palmetto the tips of these long, narrow leaves are connected by a filament which gives to the whole frond a delicate, lace-like appearance.

Dragging these split palmetto fronds to his house that is to be, the builder places the first two stalks on the lower ends of the rafters, the butts at the gable ends of the house, and the fringe of leaves downward. The stalks are fastened to the horizontal poles by tough vines, and a second course is laid a little higher up, lapping over the first course as shingles lap on a roof. The tips of the fronds overlap in the middle. Tier after tier, and course after course are added in regular order, until the thatch has reached the desired thickness, perhaps more than a foot deep, making a roof absolutely rain-proof, that forms a safe and agreeable refuge for spiders, mice and other pleasant neighbors. However, such things seldom trouble the human occupants of the dwelling unless the mice become too free in their raids on the maize—a word that is by the way, pronounced "mice."

If the walls are to be of mud, slender poles are fastened horizontally from post to post, the doorways being between posts placed the proper distance apart. Poles three or four inches in diameter are placed upright between the larger posts, and to these the horizontal strips are secured. When this has been done the tempered clay is plastered on thickly, day after day, beginning at the ground and gradually working upward, a few inches each day, until the eaves are reached. When the wall has dried, a coating of clay is spread over the surface, filling all cracks and making a smooth wall. Whenever the wall becomes injured a handful or two of wet clay makes it all sound again, wherein the Carib house has great advantage over the massive structures of our effete civilization; but Carib houses are not fire-proof.

The house itself is finished, but the kitchen, which is the heart of Honduranian as of other houses of greater pretensions remains to be made. For the foundation of this important structure posts are often set in the earth that forms the floor of the house, or of an attachment thereto. These posts support a platform about two feet from the floor. On the sticks forming the platform a thick bed of mud mortar is spread, and from this rise clay walls drawing near to each other at the top. Often the walls form an arch in the top of which is a range of holes of various sizes, over which pots and bowls of pottery are placed containing fish, flesh or fowl, yam, yucca or maize, frijoles or platinos. A fire is started, and housekeeping has begun. Sometimes the owner or his friend has an artistic talent, and beside the fireplace the clay image of a man will rise two or three feet, the flat surface made by the headdress forming a platform on which blazing splinters of fat pine are placed at night—a household god lighting the dusky priestesses offering up the daily sacrifices to humanity's exacting appetites.—*E. IT WON'T BAKE BREAD.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

William P. McFee hung himself to an apple tree in the garden of E. H. Cheney of Laconia, where he lived, Aug. 29th. He was a harness maker, fifty-six years old, and an excellent citizen, but had been greatly depressed since the recent fire which destroyed his house and shop, and the death of his wife shortly before. In his memorandum was found written, "Insanity or death—Mind all gone." He leaves three children.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

The "Glenn Bill."

As so much has been said about the Glenn bill, introduced in the Georgia legislature some time ago, and the admirers of the "new South" may desire to know precisely what the terms of the Glenn bill are, we print below the text of the bill:

A bill to be entitled, "An Act to Regulate the Manner of Conducting Educational Institutions in this State, and to Protect the Rights of the Colored and White People, and to Provide Penalties for the Violation of the Provisions of this Act, and for other Purposes."

Sec. 1. Be it enacted that from and after the passage of this act, no school, college or educational institution in this state, conducted for the education and training of colored people, shall matriculate or receive as a pupil any white person; nor shall any school, college or educational institution, conducted for the training of the whites, receive or matriculate any colored person as pupil; nor shall any school, college or educational institution receive or matriculate both white and colored persons.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted that any teacher or manager or controller of either of such institutions violating the provisions of this act shall be punished as prescribed in Section 4310 of the Code. If such institution be a chartered one, then not only the teachers thereof but the President, Secretary and members of the Board of Trustees or other persons filling corresponding offices who shall knowingly permit the same to be violated shall be subject to indictment and punished as aforesaid.

Sec. 3. Be it enacted that all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Section 4310 of the Code, referred to in section two of the bill, reads thus:

"Accessories after the fact, except where it is otherwise ordered in this Code, shall be punished by fine not to exceed $1000, imprisonment not to exceed six months, to work in a chain-gang on the public works not to exceed twelve months; and any one or more of these punishments may be ordered in the discretion of the judge."

It will be observed that the bill is so broadly drawn that if white and colored children were admitted even to the same Sunday school, every teacher in the school would be liable to the chain-gang penalty. Suppose a Sunday school, for example, connected with the work of the American Missionary Association, and conducted primarily "for the education and training of the colored people;" and suppose that such a school should "receive as a pupil" a single white child; the case would come under the proposed law.

There is not the slightest ground for the pretence that this bill is necessary in order to provide separate schools for the races. That is provided for already in the Constitution and the laws of Georgia, and is secured in the entire system of public schools. It is carried even to such an absurd extent that at the Teachers' Institutes, held in connection with the Peabody Trust, the colored teachers are not permitted to occupy the same hall with the white teachers. The entire programme is repeated for their benefit, a speaker who gives an address to the white teachers speeding immediately after to the hall where the colored people are waiting, to repeat the address there. An amusing feature of this system is that while white teachers, who happen to be late for their own exercises, do not hesitate to sit with the colored teachers, in order not to miss an address, and no harm was ever known to come of it, the social fabric of the state would be shaken to its foundations if a single colored teacher were to stray into the hall occupied by the white teachers. At the last Teachers' Institute in Atlanta, a few days ago, the superintendent made the unfortunate mistake of forgetting all about the colored contingent, and omitting to have the programme repeated for them. After they had waited a while and perceived that they had been overlooked, they dispersed and could not be reassembled. The blunder was an unfortunate one to make just at this time.

Had the legislature undertaken to punish in the chain-gang any one who violated the state laws regarding separate public schools for the two races, the thing would have been barbarous enough. But the Glenn bill goes farther than this, and imposes its barbarous penalties upon professors in Atlanta university, a private institution, if they teach their own children in the same classes with colored pupils.

This chain-gang education bill was recommended by the governor of the state, supported by the leading organs and managers of the dominant party, and passed by the house of representatives by an overwhelming majority. It has not been heard of for several weeks, and will probably be quietly smothered by the senate in some pigeon-hole, the representations of northern democrats as to the damaging effect its enforcement would have on party prospects in the north having been heeded by the upper house. But the animus of such an atrocious piece of proposed legislation cannot be pigeon-holed so easily.

The Colorow War.

The advices received at the war department in Washington respecting the Ute outbreak confirm the previously expressed opinion of army officers that the difficulty was precipitated by the civil authorities of Colorado without justification, and that the Indians have been badly treated. It is stated that the alleged horse stealing had no other foundation than that the Indians and cowboys engaged in horse racing, and the cowboys sent away for a "dark horse" to beat the Indian ponies. It turned out, however, that the Indians were up to the trick, and they procured a faster horse and won the race, the stakes of which were horse for horse. The cowboys refused to give up the horse they had lost, and the Indians embraced the first opportunity to take him.

In regard to the fight on Aug. 25th it is repeated by an army officer that "The Colorado militia, under Major Leslie, and some cowboys, surprised Colorow's camp, after having assured Colorow at Wolf Creek the day before that they would be allowed to go back to the reservation unmolested. The attack was a complete surprise to the Indians; one child was killed and one man and one woman were slightly wounded. The Indians returned the fire, killing one cowboy, wounding three others, and mortally wounding three militia soldiers."

A still later telegram, from Meeker, Col., says that "at Thursday's battle with Colorow there were five whites killed instead of two, and four wounded. Seven Indians and two squaws were killed, and five wounded. There has been no fighting since Thursday, but over six hundred Indians are camped within six miles. The Indians are ready to fight at the least provocation. The loss of nearly three hundred ponies and their squaws has made them wild, and they are ready for revenge. Colorow, it is reported, says he can get 'heap young bucks from White River, heap Uncompahgre, heap Navajo, who are young and want heap fight, and unless white man go back, Colorow send for them.' If he should, and make an attack, the militia and settlers estimate it would take the combined efforts of 2000 regulars to drive them back to the reservation."

Preparations are being made at Atlanta, Ga., for a grand reunion of Confederate and Union soldiers at that place in October.

Dr. F. J. Bonney, dentist, formerly of this city, now of Portland, Me., spent Sunday in this city calling upon his old friends.

ACCIDENTS.

A cutter named Simmons, employed at the Portsmouth shoe factory, inflicted a bad cut on one of his hands last Monday afternoon. The cut was in the palm of the hand, two inches long, and very deep. It was found necessary to take two stitches in the wound to close it up.

At a late hour on Monday evening, one of two ladies who were embarking in a rowboat at Fernald's landing to cross the river fell into the water, and a gentleman who was seeing them aboard, in attempting to rescue her also fell in. They were pulled out unharmed, except for the wetting, by gentlemen on the wharf. The lady's dress was ruined, and she lost a valuable opera glass which was in her hand when she fell in.

As Mr. Frank Pearson of South street was on Saturday driving from his house toward Richards avenue, having in the wagon with him his six-years-old son, the horse jumped suddenly at sight of some obstruction by the roadside, and threw the little boy out over the dasher, the wheels of the wagon passing over his bowels. Mr. Pearson was also thrown out and received a bruise on his forehead, but was not seriously hurt; the child was so badly injured that on Sunday it was thought he could not live, and on Tuesday afternoon he was not out of danger.

SLOW CITIZEN'S CRITICISM

Dear Chronicle: I know I am behind, but as others say the whole city is, I am willing to be reckoned with the rest. No use talking; when Harlow sets out to give a nice concert he succeeds. And his last effort was best of all. The hall was crowded, even the doorways filled. Close attention was paid until the close. The orchestra opened with a grand selection from Mignon, by Thomas. I think he would have been satisfied with the portion of the opera they played so well. The "Polacca," which was played by Mr. Whitmore, was a work of art; the backing and delicate work of the strings told more than well in the whole work. There did not seem to be a weak spot from Mr. Harry Mullaly's leading first violin to the most excellent bass of Mr. Wm. Clarke. I felt quite disappointed at not hearing a solo from the 'cellist, as there must have been a master's hands at the bow, judging from the work done. I understand that the gentleman is Max Kort of the Boston Symphonic orchestra. The tympani and drums were very skillfully played by Mr. A. R. Ryder of the Boston Ideals. The trombone (a valve instrument) was played by Mr. S. W. James, also of the Ideals. Mr. James puzzled me, for I had always supposed that it was necessary for the performer to use a slide instead of valve instrument to do the best work; but Mr. James proved to me that as good work and tone could be produced from a valve instrument, which he uses. That the orchestra were all first-class in accompanying and general work there was not the least doubt left in my mind at the close of the concert.

Numbers two and six of the programme were rendered by Miss Carlotta Patti Whitmore, a very bright-appearing young lady who has been studying piano for a long time with Mr. Parabo of Boston. That she was a conscientious player was manifest at once in the Invitation a la Valse, by Weber; the ease with which she used both the fingers and wrist showed dil gent practice. The fine interpretation of the Valse merited the applause she received. In her second number I think she did the best work, Tarantelle, by S. B. Whitney. From beginning to end she held the audience, and received the applause, and a large bouquet, with a great deal of grace and modesty.

Next came Miss Edith Wendell in Regnava nel Silenzio, from Lucia, by Donizetti. That Miss Wendell's appearance and dress were beyond criticism was the general verdict. She was accompanied by the full orchestra, who showed great skill in helping her carry out the difficult work. Never was she heard, I think, to better advantage in this vicinity. Her singing in New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia with Gilmore and others, I hear has been most heartily received. Her voice is pure soprano, of great range, power and purity. The selection was a good one to show her voice in all its pureness and beauty. The first movement (the larghetto) she sustained and phrased most beautifully, the bell-like tones of her voice captivating all within hearing. Her cadance before the allegro was very even and under good control, and from there to the finish she showed great execution and fine command of the vocal organs, singing from C natural below to C sharp above the staff with apparent ease. She received from the audience a perfect ovation to which she responded with "Old Folks at Home." All that need be remarked is, what a member of the orchestra said, "Perfect," and that quite a number of handkerchiefs were used by different persons in the audience to wipe away the mist that would gather in the eyes. Old Portsmouth ought to be proud that she was born here.

Mr. E. P. Becket's flute solo was more than interesting. He produces a very pure tone, and there were none of the ear piercing sounds one often hears. His selection was excellent, finely orchestrated by the composer, and rendered by Mr. Becket in a masterly manner.

Miss Becker, the contralto, gave Ruckden's Good Night Farewell, and a German song by Chopin, in a musicianly manner. No ranting or roaring of tones, but good, pure and clean work. She has a voice of great compass and richness, which she uses more than well. I have heard it in the Unitarian church of our city when all the beauty and power of her voice were brought out, and she appeared to greater advantage. She is no doubt an artist.

Mr. Louis Post, the bassoonist, played Beethoven's Andante from Pathetic Sonata. He is a member of the Boston Symphonic Orchestra, which is sufficient guarantee to start with. Mr. Post's jolly face peering from behind his bassoon was a fine picture of itself. The instrument we have not heard much here, but Mr. Post left an impression on the audience that it will take some time to erase as he played the beautiful sonata with so much expression and feeling. I wish it may be my fortune to hear him again before the season closes.

Last, but not least by any means, came Mr. O. A. Whitmore, the famous clarionetist, who has played probably more solos to more people than any other clarionet player now living in the United States. No sooner did his number come then the audience commenced applauding heartily, and when his genial face was in sight the applause increased and it was some time before he was allowed to go on. He played an air Varie by Ch. Ibert. His big, round tone came right out, full, clean and clear, with execution enough to satisfy all. A small boy remarked that he just whittled the tune right down fine.

Manager Hill was seen flitting from place to place looking after the interests and pleasure of both guests and visitors. I cannot finish this article to my mind in fairness without asking how could we have had all this pleasure without the foundation and corner stone of the Wentworth, Hon. Frank Jones?

SLOW CITIZEN.

In the police court on Monday, a woman and two men who were taken in on Sunday for drunkenness were asked by the prosecution if they wished to save themselves from punishment by disclosing where they got their liquor. The woman said that as well as she could remember she got hers at Kittery; one of the men said he got his all 'round, and the other said he got his allowance in the saloon of a common councilman a few minutes before midnight, Saturday night. No prosecutions for sales resulted from this inquisition.

Reserved seat tickets for the performances of the Bennett & Moulton Comic Opera Co. are now on sale at Goodrich's. Persons who vainly tried to get seats at the box-office in Music hall last Monday evening, and do not wish the experience repeated, will do well to call at Mr. Goodrich's store before the plan is criss crossed all over.

Denman Thompson is to appear at Music hall next Monday evening, Sept. 5th, in his new play, never before presented here, "The Old Homestead." This play was performed 171 times in the Fourteenth Street theatre, New York city, from Jan. 10th to June 4th of this year, and to crowded houses up to the very last. Reserved seat tickets go on sale at Goodrich's on Friday morning.

Mr. C. W. Morss has hired Mrs. Cushman-Tilton's house on Washington street.

The Wentworth house orchestra will remain at the hotel until Saturday, Sept. 10th. Calvary Commandery of Knights Templar, of Providence, R. I., will have supper and a reception at the Wentworth on Sept. 7th, and the Athletic club of this city will have a supper and dance at the house on the evening of Sept. 9th.

The general impression of those who attended the Daly's entertainment in Music hall on Monday evening seems to be that some of the allusions in the "topical" songs, and some of the attempted "bits," could be left out to the marked improvement of the performance.

The annual dance of the help at the Hotel Wentworth, Newcastle, will be held this (Wednesday) evening under the management of Mr. Grant, the steward.

The largest amount of money ever taken for an entertainment at Music hall was on Monday evening last, when the Daly's turned things "Upside Down." There were scores of demands for seats which had to be refused, and the total receipts amounted to $692.90.

The Bar Harbor limited train leaving Boston at 9:15 A. M., will be discontinued after Friday, September 9th, and the train leaving Portland for Boston at two P. M. will be discontinued after Sunday, September 10th.

Ladies will find a very complete line of new Ruckings, nearly a hundred different kinds, from the cheapest to the finest quality, at Lewis E. Staples' small ware department. Also Collars and Cuffs of latest styles.

A Maine judge has decided that it is perfectly legal for the members of a church choir to whisper to each other during the service. This decision may seem to be contrary to the traditional ideas of reverence; but it will do much to strengthen church choirs as an institution. A church choir which couldn't whisper would soon go to pieces, although in some instances silence is observed, for the reason that the choir are not on speaking terms.

A special meeting of the Concord railroad directors was held on Tuesday afternoon to consider the subject of making the passenger rates on all their lines two cents a mile.

At the national lawn-tennis tournament at Newport, R. I., which commenced last week, Slocum, the winner in the recent Wright & Ditson tournament at the Hotel Wentworth, Newcastle, on Aug. 29th beat his last competitor, H. A. Tayler, winning the first prize in the all-comers' match, the special prize in the singles, and the opportunity to face R. D. Sears, the champion, in a contest for the championship. Slocum is a son of Gen. Slocum, one of the famous union generals during the rebellion. The championship games were to be played Aug. 30th.

The Scotch cutter Thistle, which hopes to capture the America's cup, took her first sail under her racing rig in New York harbor on Monday, running out as far as the Wreck of the Scotland lightship. She stood up well under a press of canvas, cut through the water at a great rate, making hardly a ripple, and was acknowledged by the yachting experts who saw her performance to be a wonderful boat, and much the most formidable antagonist ever sent across the Atlantic to race the American sloops.

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

Hay Fever.

I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for fifteen years and have tried various things without doing any good. I read of the many wondrous cures of Ely's Cream Balm and thought I would try once more. In fifteen minutes after one application I was wonderfully helped. Two weeks ago I commenced using it and now I feel entirely cured. It is the greatest discovery ever known or heard of. DUHAMEL CLARK, farmer, Lynn, Mass.

Rev. Mr. Goss' Chicago church has by an almost unanimous vote upheld him against the few members who found fault with his sermon portraying the deplorable condition of working girls.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "perfection."

Much anxiety is felt at New Orleans for the steamer Knickerbocker, several days overdue from New York with thirty-one passengers. She was out in the gale of Aug. 24th.

Lucky Boston.

At the last drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery held in New Orleans June 14, New England was especially favored by the blind goddess, as parts of both the second grand prize of $100,000 and of the fourth prize of $25,000, as well as a great number of smaller prizes, were drawn by tickets held in Maine and Massachusetts. Mr. A. B. Clark and Mr. R. J. Taffin of this city each held a portion of the ticket that drew the fourth grand prize, and each are correspondingly elated. —Boston (Mass.) Courier, July 2d.

I had kidney disorder and say for the good of others that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me.—Rev. S. C. Chandler, Lebanon Springs, N. Y. I had Stone in the Bladder and Gravel in the Kidneys. I used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and am now well.—E. D. Parsons, Rochester, N. Y. Price $1. Send 2-cent stamp to Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., for a book on Kidney, Liver and Blood disorders. A Chinese Complexion,

When observed in one of the Caucasian race, is indicative of bile in the blood. Who would be yellow when he or she can exhibit the hue of health on cheek and brow through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an antagonist at whose onset liver complaint takes refuge in flight. Fur upon the tongue, nausea, sick headache, pains under the right ribs and shoulder blade, an unpleasantly odorous breath, are remediable with this benign alterative, which does not, like a potent cathartic, drench the intestines or, like the mecurial preparations, contaminate the blood. Not only the liver, but the stomach and bowels are aroused, toned and regulated by this fine family medicine, which has won the confidence of the respectable classes, not by startling assertions on its behalf, but by the consistency of the claims made for it with its performance in every instance when tested.

The Biddeford Times says: "From the picture of the early autumn hat, which Harper's Bazar published last week as a frontispiece, it is painfully evident that the ladies have abated no jot from their determination to defend their doubted right to hide the pulpit and the stage from the view of the little, bald-headed man in the seat behind, who says all the sarcastic things about ladies' tall hats in the newspapers. The new hat is apparently a great pyramid of felt, feathers, ribbons and stuff, all, no doubt, possessing the quality of opaqueness to a degree calculated to throw the luckless bald-head into convulsions of indignation, while the wearer is all innocence and unconsciousness."

BABY HUMORS
Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1883, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and wrap him with cloth in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

SCROFULOUS HUMORS.
Last spring I was very sick, being covered with some kind of scrofula. The doctors could not help me. I was advised to try the CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I did so, and in a day I grew better and better, until I am as well as ever. I thank you for it very much, and would like to have it told to the world. EDW. HOFMANN, North Attleboro, Mass.

A Word About Catarrh.
"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long, drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, transmelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the sweetest pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all palliatives save simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."
SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

Help for the Kitchen.

Says the New York Commercial Advertiser, the complaint of difficulty in securing competent cooks, housemaids, and so forth is chronic, of course, but there can be no doubt that the actual difficulty is greater at present than ever before. Even the managers of unintelligence offices—who habitually omit the negative prefix when speaking of their shops—declare that it was never so difficult as now to secure competent servants for their customers.

The search for a reason has been diligent, but the searchers seem to have overlooked one fact which probably plays an important part in the matter—namely, the general prosperity of the country and that activity in all branches of industry which is popularly called the "boom." We are living in a period when work is ready to the hand of the workman, whatever his craft may be, and wages are high. The bricklayer, who a few years ago was glad of a job at almost any price, is now sought out by the builder and kept busy at full wages throughout the year. The digger is equally busy preparing the way for the mason's work; the carpenter, joiner, plasterer, painter, and all the rest rejoice in full work and fair pay. They live better than usual, too, which gives the grocer and the shoemaker and the tailor a share in their prosperity.

The result is that every mother's son of them looks about him for a wife, and who so attractive in that respect as the neat-handed Phyllis, who, besides being comely, and fresh-faced with youth and health, knows how to get a good dinner, and delights to keep her surroundings brilliantly clean and refreshingly tidy? Is it any wonder that the butcher or grocer who finds his business good, looks longingly upon the pretty and smart serving maid who gives him his orders in modest or coquettish fashion at his customer's area door every morning? Is it surprising that he sees visions of a home of his own, with some such maid converted into a matron for its mistress?

The plain truth is, that good girls are scarce in the kitchen just now than ever before, because the very qualities that make them desirable as servants in the houses of the well-to-do render them attractive to men of their own class as wives, and the condition of industry enables such men to marry much more freely than they were prudently able to do a few years ago. Most of the good girls get married, and the fact speaks well for the good sense of the thrifty fellows who marry them and make homes for themselves, and for the prosperity of the times in which we live.

Meantime householders are terribly put to it to get the help they need, and the economic law which provides that excess of demand over supply shall cause the price to advance, has made itself very plainly apparent, and will in time, perhaps, bring relief. With advancing wages the inducement for good girls to go into domestic service must become steadily greater and ultimately it must create a larger supply. So will hard times, if hard times fall upon us.

The Savior's Sentence.

A correspondent sends what he believes to be a correct translation of the sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate on Christ. He says that this curious document was discovered in A. D. 1280, in the city of Aquili, in the Kingdom of Naples, in the course of a search made for the discovery of Roman antiquities, and it remained there until it was found by the Commissaries of Arts in the French army of Italy. Up to the time of the campaign in Southern Italy it was preserved in the sacristy of the Carthusians, near Naples, where it was kept in a box of ebony. Since then the relic has been kept in the Chapelo Caserta. The Carthusians obtained, by petition, leave that the plate might be kept by them as an acknowledgment of the sacrifice which they had made for the French army.

The French translation was made literally by members of the Commission of Art. Denon had a fac-simile of the plate engraved, which, on the sale of his cabinet, was bought by Lord Howard for 2,890 francs:

"Sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate, Intendant of Lower Galilee, that Jesus of Nazareth shall suffer death by the cross. In the seventeenth year of the reign of the Emperor Tiberius, and on the 25th of March, in the most holy city of Jerusalem, during the pontificate of Annas and Caiaphas, Pontius Pilate, Intendant of the Province of Lower Galilee, sitting in judgment in the presidential chair of the Prator, sentences Jesus of Nazareth to death on a cross between two robbers, as the numerous testimonials of the people prove that: 1. Jesus is a misleader. 2. He has excited the people to sedition. 3. He is an enemy of the law. 4. He calls himself the Son of God. 5. He calls himself falsely the King of Israel. He went to the temple, followed by a multitude carrying palms in their hands. It likewise orders the First Centurion, Cutrilius Cornelius, to bring him to the place of execution, and forbids all persons, rich or poor, to prevent the execution of Jesus.

"The witnesses who have signed the execution against Jesus are: 1. Daniel Robani, a Pharisee. 2. John Zorababel. 3. Raphael Robani. 4. Capet. Finally he orders that the said Jesus be taken out of Jerusalem through the gate of Tournea."—Notes and Queries.

Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

"On The Main Line."

A reduction of rates to two cents a mile on the main line of the Concord railroad was ordered the same day on which the counsel for that corporation appeared before the railroad committee of the senate in opposition to the Todd bill, which had passed the house, fixing the passenger tariff on railroads earning dividends to ten per cent on their capital stock, at two cents per mile! The Concord railroad says to the legislature, "Now don't do that. We will reduce on the main line between Nashua and Concord, where we do the carriage of over seventy-five thousand inhabitants, but hands off the North Weare, Suncook Valley and Portsmouth roads, if you please. We will put our rates down from September 1st to the time we raise them again, but do not enact a law for this, because we only mean on the main stem." The directors should go a step further, but perhaps in drafting the vote, the leased lines were forgotten!

An Old Story Repeated.

Additional advices from the Indian war in Colorado say that at the time Colorow and his party were attacked by Sheriff Kendall they were not engaged in a raid of any kind, and that the Indians have acted on the defensive only, to protect their property and their women. Sheriff Kendall's cowboys and the Colorado militia under Major Leslie stole 300 horses, 2000 sheep and large herds of goats from the wicked savages. Indian Agent Byrnes of the Uintah and Ouray agency, and several army officers, having all sent despatches of similar tenor to the authorities at Washington, the United States forces have been ordered to take a hand in the game and stop any further plundering.

Another "Young Napoleon of Finance."

Saco and Biddeford were much excited, on the morning of Aug. 31st, by the announcement that Frank C. McNeeley, a gentleman of the mature age of nineteen, assistant cashier of the Saco & Biddeford Savings Institution, one of the oldest and strongest savings institutions in Maine, had gone to Canada, taking with him everything except the bank building and the cellar.

It seems that on Monday afternoon, Aug. 29th, the cashier of the bank had occasion to go to Kennebunk, and left McNeeley, who had been employed in the bank about a year, "had the entire confidence of the president, trustees and cashier, was acquainted with the combination of every lock in the bank vaults," and "was considered one of the most trustworthy young men in the city," to close up the day's business. The boy devoted himself to his business with so much zeal that the cashier found next morning that $3500 in cash, United States registered four per cent bonds of 1907 to the amount of $185,000, and railroad, municipal and other bonds to the amount of $91,000, had departed for parts unknown, presumably in company with the assistant cashier, who however left behind a large amount of gold and currency. The registered bonds cannot possibly be utilized by the thief, who is supposed to have struck out for Canada.

The bank officials say the bank is perfectly solvent, in any event. It is to be hoped so; but the bank deserves whatever loss it may sustain, for putting such gigantic temptation in the way of a mere boy.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

Kittery Point, Me., Aug. 30th.

The inhabitants of our town were startled last Thursday by the news that George W. Paul had suffered a shock of paralysis. The doctor and Mr. Paul's daughter were sent for immediately. In spite of the doctor's skill and the loving care of his family he passed away at three o'clock the next morning. He leaves a wife and three daughters. The funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon. He was buried at the old homestead. The G. A. R. were present, and had their burial service at the grave. The coffin was draped in the American flag, and decorated with flowers. He was a man loved by all who knew him. The bereaved widow has the sympathy of all her townspeople.

Mrs. Hattie Fernald has gone to the lakes to spend her vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ogden took tea at the Park-Field last evening with Mrs. Ogden's mother, Mrs. J. P. Bartlett of Portsmouth. Aunt Molly.

Kittery Point, Aug. 31st.

Quite a daring robbery was committed here Monday night. The post-office was broken into, and all change in the money drawer taken, and a quantity of stamps and postal cards. The robbers entered by boring a hole through the outer cellar door just above the bar, so they could easily unbar the door and gain access to the cellar. The next obstacle in their way was the door leading from the cellar into the store, and fastened by a bolt. They bored a hole just above the bolt, large enough to put a hand through and draw the bolt. The money drawer was wrenched from its place and carried away, and was afterward discovered back of the Pepperrell tomb, quite a little distance from the store. The stamp draw was emptied of its contents, but the safe was untouched. The tools used by the burglar were left lying around; it has been discovered that they belong to a man living near the store, whose barn was broken into and the tools stolen. A suspicious-looking person has been seen around for some days, and on Monday evening about half-past ten a man was seen around the Park-Field hotel. He tried the shop door, and finding it fastened walked around and then went away. Tools are kept in the shop at the Park-Field, and it is thought he was in pursuit of them then.

Mrs. James P. Bartlett of Portsmouth, who is stopping at the Park-Field, gives a tea-party at that place this week. Many of the invited guests are from Portsmouth. Aunt Molly.

The democrats in Indiana have been repeating history. They took control of the state four years ago, with over $600,000 in its treasury. By crooked and fraudulent methods they have taken out every dollar, and today the treasury is worse than bankrupt. Who says the democracy cannot reduce the surplus?

James Bellefontaine, a Malden, Mass., carpenter, fell fifty-six feet Aug. 30th, but was not fatally injured.

THE OPERA THIS EVENING.

This evening, at Music hall, the Bennett & Moulton Comic Opera Co. will make their first appearance, in that charming production "The Chimes of Normandy." There are fine voices and experienced actors in the company, and they have been industriously rehearsing together for several weeks. The organization has given excellent satisfaction in seasons past, and the managers claim that they have this season the best company they ever put on the stage. The sale of tickets has been heavy, and a large audience is assured.

ACCIDENT.

Jerry Kilrow, a boy fifteen years old, son of a widow living on Cass street, had both legs cut off below the knees shortly after eight o'clock on Wednesday evening of this week, in the railroad yard, near the Creek. The unfortunate boy, with others, had jumped on a freight train to steal a ride—said to be a very common practice with a good many boys, right along—and fell under the wheels.

SUIT AGAINST COLLECTOR PAGE.

A despatch from Washington in the Portland Argus of Aug. 30th says:

The state authorities of Maine are preparing charges with which to bring action against Collector of Internal Revenue Page of the New Hampshire district. The recent consolidation of the district of Maine with that of New Hampshire has baffled the authorities of Maine to a great extent in securing the conviction of liquor sellers. According to the recent Maine law the purchase of a United States license is regarded as a prima facie evidence of guilt. According to a section of the revised statutes, the collector of internal revenue is compelled to post conspicuously in his office a list of all persons purchasing United States licenses. This the Maine authorities say Mr. Page has refused to do, in defiance of the law. The attorney-general of Maine has on several occasions called on him to produce his memoranda, but has only been met with a refusal. The action will probably be brought at the next term of federal court. It is thought Mr. Page is acting under instructions from Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller, but as the latter is not in the city nothing definite can be learned on the subject. As regards the sale of liquor in original packages in Maine, the department will oppose the state authorities on the ground of interference with the United States revenues.

INTERESTING, IF TRUE.

Mr. Stagg, Yale's famous base ball pitcher, entered Phillips Exeter academy some years ago a poor lad, says the New York Tribune. For the first month he lived on sixteen cents a day, his food being oatmeal and cornmeal, with meat, the toughest kind of beefsteak, as a rare treat once a week. The second month he succeeded in getting fairly good day board in return for the care of a horse. At the end of that month he was still better off, for he found board and lodging for caring for a horse and doing all the odd chores around the house, and thus he supported himself through Exeter. At Yale he earned his way by tutoring, and writing for the papers. In the meantime he found leisure to be one of the best amateur pitchers in the country, and to maintain a high scholarship. As for his social standing, it is only necessary to say that he is a member of the Skull & Bones society, the right to wear the badge of which is one of the most desired honors in college. He has a remarkable face, less handsome than strong, a highly interesting study to those who know the facts of his past life. The lines in his countenance all denote endurance and determination, with keen perceptive powers.

PERSONAL.

Miss Mamie E. Waldron of Maplewood avenue is passing a few weeks with Mr. Silas Jenkins and wife of Durham.

Mr. Cornelius Lewis, formerly of Portsmouth and a member of the Times force, but now employed on the Boston Herald, is with his wife spending a week in this city.

Miss Rosa L. Marston of Brockton, Mass., is visiting friends here.

Mr. Albert F. Howe, wife and daughter, of Cleveland, Ohio, are visiting Mrs. Howe's father, Mr. Samuel Spinney, on Myrtle street, Christian Shore.

Mrs. John J. Donovan of Lowell, Mass., and two daughters, are visiting at Mr. George Stott's, Hanover street.

Mr. Oliver Manson and wife, of Union street, are on a visit to their son, A. C. Manson, at Warsaw, N. Y.

Mrs. Sarah Neal Harris, of Concord, is announced as intending to establish a class in elocution in this city. She is a native of Hampton, and an elocutionist of acknowledged merit, being in possession of voluminous testimonials from eminent professionals, and having under her instruction many of the public school teachers of Manchester and other places.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Grace Choate, Capt. Edw. Robinson, came in on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 31st, with 2000 fresh mackerel.

The schooner Agnes E. Downs of this port, Capt. Levi Downs, sailed from Boston on Monday, Aug. 29th, intending to go to Block island on a hunt for mackerel. She arrived back in Boston on Wednesday morning, the 31st, with 240 barrels of fresh and forty barrels of salt mackerel, taken off Provincetown.

The sale of reserved seat tickets to the performance of Denman Thompson's new play, "The Old Homestead," in Music hall next Monday evening, will commence at Goodrich's store to-morrow morning. The play, like "Joshua Whitcomb," the delightful character sketch in which Mr. Thompson for years delighted so many thousands of people, and at the same time so greatly increased his bank account, deals with New England home life and characteristics; in fact, the old favorite "Uncle Josh" is the leading personage in it. The New York Times calls it "One of the few substantial theatrical triumphs witnessed in New York in recent years."

The train over the Boston & Maine western division which connects at Newmarket junction with the evening train north from this city, was an hour late on Monday evening of this week, and the Concord train went on without waiting for it. The result was that the Boston & Maine's passengers for the other road, about fifty in number, took passage in a car attached to a freight train, those for Manchester arriving there at 10:30 P. M., while those for Concord did not reach home until after midnight.

A number of smelt fishermen took good fares at the second Newcastle bridge on Wednesday morning of this week; one man caught fifteen dozen of the little fishes in about two hours.

The town is flooded with copies of the National Real Estate Index, printed in that rapidly growing but modest western settlement known as Kansas City. It contains a summary of forty-five reasons why we should invest our money in Kansas City. We can knock the entire stuffing out of each and every of these reasons by just one of our own—we are not bothered with money for investment or any other purpose.

The corner stone of the new Catholic church at South Berwick was laid last Monday at noon with appropriate ceremonies.

The funeral of the late Harry G. Tanton took place on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 31st, under the direction of De Witt Clinton Commandery of Knights Templar, of which he was eminent commander at the time of his death, being the first to die while holding that office. In accordance with his expressed wish, the obsequies were very quietly conducted.

Among the boys fishing for smelts from the Maplewood avenue bridge, a few mornings since, was Mr. A. Tappan Goodrich, who was on the spot as early as any of the other youngsters, fished with a float, as was universal fifty years ago, and carried home a good mess of fish.

A proposed law forbids a person to have more than ten pounds of brook trout in his possession at one time. As a rule the law would not be violated. The legislators may reduce the amount to ten ounces if they like, and it will not interfere with us even then.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., Aug. 30th.

A large number of the people of this town have been rusticating the past week at the Alton Bay camp-meeting, which broke up on the 29th; some very interesting meetings, and we hope profitable to the participants, were held during the session.

Willard H. Spinney and Miss Annie B. Foster were married on the 27th inst. by Rev. Kusman Atkinson, and we wish them success through life. Mr. Spinney has got nearly completed the house they will occupy for a home; in the meantime the couple remain at the home of Mrs. Spinney's father, Mr. Simon Foster.

George O. Athorne is about to erect a new barn, a portion of which he will use in connection with his stocking room. Mr. Athorne is doing a large business in stockings, in this town and in Kittery, to the great help of many persons in both towns.

Mr. Daniel Lydston died Aug. 23d, after a sickness of only four days. He was seventy-seven years old the day before he died. He lived with his son Wm. A. Lydston; he was a fine old gentleman, and will be much missed as a neighbor. His wife, who died about three years ago, was a most estimable woman, and is deeply regretted up to this day.

Miss Mary K. Spinney and two of her young lady friends have been pleasure-seeking for a few days at the Ocean house, York beach; they returned on the 28th.

Mrs. Annie Edgerly of Great Falls has been visiting at Joseph B. Remick's.

Charles B. Remick is slowly recovering from illness consequent on taking cold; we hope he will soon be able to resume his duties as brakeman on the Boston & Maine railroad.

Mrs. Daniel Hanscom of Boston is visiting at Mr. Wm. J. Paul's for a few days.

There will be services at the Congregational church on Sunday next, Sept. 4th. The pastor has been absent a few Sabbaths on a vacation, spent with his father in Boston, and vicinity. HARRY.

A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP THAT THE

by reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago, and continuous lines at terminal points West, North West and Southwest, is the only true middle link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Adelphi, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown, in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

The Great Rock Island Route

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted, its track is of best steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its method of operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodation is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

All Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of Comfortable Day Coaches, magnificent Pullman Palace Parlor and Sleeping Cars, elegant Dining Cars providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—world Reclining Chair Cars.

The Famous Albert Lea Route

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Pullman Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of Interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short, desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points. All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly treatment.

THIS PAPER is on file in Philadelphia at the Newspaper Advertising Agency of Messrs. N. W. Ayer & Son, our authorized agents.

A well known citizen of Lancaster, Pa., Mr. L. B. Keifer, writes: Having a sprained leg of almost thirty days standing, and after trying half a dozen advertised preparations in the market without satisfactory results, I was advised to try Salvation Oil, did so, and in less than three days my leg was all right again. It did the work.

The New England fair opened at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 30th, with over 650 head of cattle on exhibition; sheep, swine and poultry were in smaller numbers than usual; the display of vegetables was small, but good; agricultural implements in great variety are shown.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

Baird Knox Snyder, an English adventurer, last week attempted to murder Miss Mabel Harton of Weaverstown, Pa., because she wouldn't marry him, she having discovered that instead of being the high-toned English "gentleman" to whom she had engaged herself, he was a gambler and confidence man.

All disorders caused by a bilious state of the system can be cured by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. No pain, griping or discomfort attending their use. Try them.

It is rumored at Victoria, B. C., that McGarrigle, the escaped Chicago boodler, has for several days been a guest at a hotel in that city, and that he sailed Aug. 28th on the steamer Parthia for Hong Kong, accompanied by Carter Harrison. The emperor of China wants to put all his cities under lock and key over night, if that pair visits his dominions.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "perfection."

One object of the visit of Ex-Governor Alexander Shepherd to this country is to organize a syndicate to work a tract of mineral lands nine miles square, of which he has received a concession from the Mexican government.

Economy and strength are peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true.

Wall street, New York, is greatly exercised over the reports regarding the manipulation of two southern railroads by Grovesteen & Pell, the failed stock exchange brokers. It is said these Napoleons of finance have floated immense amounts of bonds by irregular means.

The Green Apple Terror.

The green apple in some form will torment us as long as boys are boys. There is but one thing to do, and that is to keep a bottle of SANFORD'S GINGER in the house, and thus provide a sure preventive and never failing cure for ills incidental to summer, and to change of water, food and climate.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in all water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for

Don't Laugh at Nervous People.

Their sufferings are very real, although you, with your vigorous physique and strong nerves, can scarcely believe it. Rather suggest the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, in removing every trace of dyspepsia, and regulating the liver and bowels, strikes at and extirpates the most prolific cause of chronic nervous trouble. That nerve-shattering disease, fever and ague, is among the formidable ailments, to the removal of which this genial remedy is specially adopted. Nervous prostration, resulting from prolonged mental or physical effort, is also a state of the system where the intervention of this tonic is very desirable, more particularly as its use is to quiet and relax the tension of overwrought nerves. The Bitters are invaluable in rheumatism, neuralgia and kidney troubles. Employ no substitute for it.

The barn of Andrew Whalen, near the head of Westport Village, seven miles from New Bedford, Mass., was struck by lightning just before noon on Tuesday and totally destroyed. Loss about $500. The singular part of the matter is that no rain fell and there was but one clap of thunder heard.

Many New Ideas

In the home cure of diseases, and how to treat them, and many hints of value to the sick will be found in Dr. Kaufmann's great medical work; elegant illustrations. Send three two-cent stamp to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation and disordered stomach.

Lester B. Baxter, aged sixteen years, who robbed a house in Yarmouth, Mass., of $1600 on the night of Aug. 18th, has been arrested in New York, and brought back for trial. When arrested he had $450, a rifle and revolver, and tickets for Iowa.

Let Me Show You

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

While farm hands were threshing on the farm of Lyman Curtis, five miles east of Flint, Mich., on Tuesday, Aug. 30th, the grain stacker caught fire, and while the men were fighting the fire the steam boiler exploded, killing Daniel Steegar outright and severely injuring William Rockwood, John Bennett and three young ladies who were assisting. The barns, with the entire crop of the season, are destroyed. The house and yard have the appearance of an hospital.

BABY HUMORS

Our little son will be four years of age on the 25th inst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a very painful breaking out of the skin. We called in a physician who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggravated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally, we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily growing worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the RESOLVENT about every second day for about two days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrible malady. In all we used less than one half of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, a little less than one box of CUTICURA, and only one cake of CUTICURA SOAP. H. E. RYAN,

A Word About Catarrh.

"It is the mucous membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that CATARRH makes its stronghold. Once established, it eats into the very vitals, and renders life but a long-drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammelling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath, and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assails the membranous lining and envelops the bones, eating through delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of 1000 years of test and ceaseless vigilance can secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives and simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, by Inhalation and by Internal administration, has never failed; even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered, and the disease thoroughly driven out."

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE consists of one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and one IMPROVED INHALER, neatly wrapped in one package, with full directions; price, $1.00.

An Hour of Horror.

Robert Stevens, of Tarentum, Pennsylvania, an active oil-well operator, but now a shriveled cripple, with both hands gone, has brought suit against John Denman and Mills & Mullin, the rich oil-well owners of Macksburg, Ohio, to recover $50,000 damages, charging that they knowingly subjected him to the danger which resulted in his crippling and in the horrible death of his two fellow-workmen, a danger of which both he and the other two victims were kept in ignorance. According to the statement of the plaintiff in the suit, the defendants had drilled a well in the Macksburg field, in a pioneer district and to further the ends they had in view they made a "mystery" of the well. They represented that it would be but a very small producer, and permitted no stranger to come near it. Edward Mills, a young man named Joseph Ayers, and the complainant in this suit were employed one day to assist in pulling the tubing in the well for the purpose of adjusting the packer. Stevens, on going to the derrick, noticed that the boiler, instead of being at a safe distance from the engine and well, was in close and dangerous proximity to both. Stevens now charges that this was done to indicate that the well was not yielding much oil, in order that anyone who might be "scouting" about it would be deceived as to its character.

Stevens and Mills were at work at the derrick floor, and Ayers was stationed in the derrick forty feet from the ground. The moment the packer was disturbed the well made a tremendous flow of oil and gas. Mills and Stevens ran from the derrick, but the gas quickly settled down about the boiler and a terrible explosion followed. The clothing of the men being saturated with oil from head to foot, Mills and Stevens were instantly wrapped in flames.

"The flames," says Stevens, "rose up from our feet, and were met by a grand volume of fire that came down from above. All that I remember of that part of the catastrophe was a blinding flash and a report like a near-by clap of thunder. The gas seemed to settle in a wide area around the derrick, and it all went off together. A sea of flame, equal to an acre in extent, surrounded us, and the entire earth and sky seemed to be on fire. Mills and I turned and ran, blazing as we were, with no definite idea of what we were to do. I remember of getting out of the great sweep of flame, and then, with every stitch of clothing burned from us, our falling into the tall and wet marsh grass on the edge of the fire and rolling about in it. We were so terribly burned that great pieces of our flesh came off and stuck to the grass as we rolled in it. We tumbled about, suffering the most terrible agony, until we had rolled more than ten rods away from the flaming gas and oil, and then I struggled to my feet. I had my sight, and seeing Mills writhing on the ground I helped him to his feet. Both of his eyes were burned out. I managed to reach a house about a hundred yards distant, helping Mills along with me. He died a horrible death shortly after we reached there. I lay there seven weeks, more dead than alive, but finally recovered, with both of my hands gone and every inch of my flesh shriveled and scarred by the terrible ordeal through which I had passed. Poor Joe Ayers was burned up on the derrick."

How and When to Take Water.

According to Dr. Leuf, when water is taken into the full or partly full stomach, it does not mingle with the food, as we are generally taught, but passes along quickly between the food and lesser curvature toward the pylorus, through which it passes into the intestines. The secretion of mucus by the lining membrane is constant, and during the night a considerable amount accumulates in the stomach; some of its liquid portion is absorbed, and that which remains is thick and tenacious. If food is taken into the stomach when in this condition it becomes coated with this mucus, and the secretions of the gastric juice and its action are delayed. These facts show the value of a goblet of water before breakfast. This washes out the tenacious mucus, and stimulates the gastric glands to secretion. In old or feeble persons water should not be taken cold, but it may be with great advantage then taken warm or hot. This removal of the accumulated mucus from the stomach is probably one of the reasons why taking soap at the beginning of a meal has been found so beneficial.

Briggs Swift, President of the wrecked Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati, has had a previous unpleasant experience with law-breakers. At the time the Cincinnati Court-House was burning and the streets were held by the rioters Mr. Swift went out "to see what was going on," and was severely wounded by a musket-ball, from the effects of which he lingered for several weeks on the verge of the grave.

In Buenos Ayres the government printing is done by convicts. Most of the work consists of ministers' reports and official receipts. The manager, not a person in durance vile, but a practical native printer, showed several volumes of these reports, and they were really well got up. All the tabular matter, however, was far from meritorious, little or no attention having been given to the mitreing of rules, etc.

IT WON'T BAKE BREAD.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

In Boston, on the afternoon of Aug. 31st, an unknown man committed suicide near the band stand on the Common by shooting himself in the left breast. He was about thirty-one years old, five feet eight inches high, dark complexion. In his pocket letters were found directed to W. G. Brach, 1013 North Boundary street, Burlington, Ia. He evidently had consumption. No one could be found who knew him or knew where he stopped, and no reason is known for the commission of the act.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, the will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

Retirement of Adm. Davis.

By the retirement of Rear Admiral J. L. Davis, which occurred this week, the following promotions are caused: Commodore Braine to be rear admiral; Captain George Brown to be commodore; Commander William Whitehead to be captain; Lieutenant-Commander C. A. Sheiky to be commander; Lieutenant Benj. F. Tilley to be lieutenant-commander; Lieutenant (junior grade) J. O. Nicholson to be lieutenant; Ensign G. W. Denfield to be lieutenant (junior grade.)

John Lee Davis was born in Indiana, and was appointed as acting midshipman in the navy in January, 1841. Passing through the minor grades of the service he was commissioned as lieutenant in 1855, serving in the Pacific squadron until the breaking out of the civil war, when he became executive officer of the Water Witch and participated in the engagement with the confederate ram Manassas at the head of the passes of the Mississippi river, Oct. 12th, 1861. He was commissioned as lieutenant-commander in July, 1862, and ordered to the South Atlantic blockading squadron, where he served until 1864, participating in many engagements. In 1865 and 1866 he served at the League island navy yard, and in July of the latter year was commissioned as commander, and in 1875 as captain. In October, 1885, he was commissioned as rear admiral, and his last sea service was in the Asiatic squadron.

MAINE BANK ROBBERS.

The crime of the assistant-cashier of the Biddeford savings bank occurred at a most inopportune time for the hopes of the friends of William E. Gould, formerly of Portland, and cashier of the First national bank of that city, now residing in Thomaston as a guest of the state for ten years. Mr. Gould's friends have been getting up a petition for his pardon, on the grounds that he is "an able financier;" that he did not run away; that when he was found out as a thief, he did all he could in the way of restoring the property he had stolen; and that "his punishment has already served its purpose,"—he having served less than one year of the ten he was sentenced to serve.

There are several points of resemblance between the cases of Gould and McNeally; one being, that both were hypocrites in religion. Gould was a prominent lay-preacher, and an eloquent one, and while wearing fine raiment paid for with stolen money, could earnestly exhort sinners to repentance. When being taken to Thomaston to enter the penitentiary, he called a reporter's attention to the fact that he had not attempted by flight to escape the consequences of his misdoing, in language which showed that he enjoyed great inward satisfaction over his own goodness in not running away. McNeally, too, is reported to have been "ostentatiously pious;" and both he and Gould moved in the best social circles of their respective cities. McNeally had for some time been paying marked attentions to a young lady of one of the best families of Saco, and "had forsaken the church of his profession and for a long time attended that of the young lady and her family," although the engagement of the young couple, if one existed, had not been officially promulgated.

McNeally's robbery, even should all the negotiable bonds stolen by him be permanently lost to the bank, does not impair its solvency, the assets being sufficient to pay $1.25 on every dollar; no special inconvenience, and no interference in business, are looked for by the bank officials, unless further investigation should disclose that the losses are very much greater than at first reported. The cashier of the bank was the only person who knew the combination of the inner safe in the vault, where the securities were kept, and says McNeally must in some way have surreptitiously possessed himself of the knowledge which enabled him to open it. The boy has been living extravagantly, and spending much money on fine clothing, during the summer. His criminal act has not only ruined himself and brought sorrow and disgrace to his highly respected family connections, but has dashed the hopes of Gould's friends for the present mitigation of his punishment.

DEATH OF "CAMPMEETING JOHN ALLEN."

Rev. John Allen, known throughout New England, especially in Maine, as "Campmeeting John Allen," died on the camp-grounds at East Livermore, Me., Aug. 31st. He was born March 7th, 1795, in a log cabin in Farmington, Me., and had few school privileges. When sixteen years old he attended the Farmington academy a few weeks, and afterward was apprenticed to a clothier, teaching school in the winter. He was wild and reckless in his youth, and while attending a camp meeting for the purpose of making fun he became converted. After that, camp meetings had a peculiar charm for him, and he attened them far and near, as often as convenient, till his death. Having commenced preaching in mature life, he was admitted as a member of the Maine conference, and after a long period of active work he was placed on the superannuated list. As a preacher he was original and interesting, and as a pastor faithful and diligent. He was ever distinguished for his wit, his opponents having reason to fear him on account of his sharp and ready repartee. He served as chaplain of the Maine house of representatives in 1879 and in 1881.

The camp-meeting at East Livermore, at which Mr. Allen died, was the 374th one he had attended; and he assisted in laying out the grounds upon which he died, and also in organizing the East Livermore Camp-Meeting association, more than thirty-five years ago. His home in Maine was burned last year, and he has since lived in Boston with a daughter. He started from Boston on Monday, Aug. 29th, to attend a camp-meeting in Massachusetts, but the train carried him past the point, so he kept on to East Livermore, where he preached a sermon on Tuesday evening, after which he appeared greatly exhausted, and though he rallied on Wednesday afternoon and seemed to be in his usual health, he suddenly passed away, dying in the harness, as he would have wished.

He leaves a son and two daughters, one of whom is the mother of Lillian Norton Gower, the noted vocalist.

Gov. Luce of Michigan has forwarded a requisition to Gov. Bodwell of Maine for the custody of one John Hickey, alias Crawford, alias George Baxter. Hickey is in the Maine state prison, to which he was sentenced for three years from York county on Sept. 30th, 1884, for larceny. He is wanted for the murder of a man named Thomas Briton, in Detroit, Nov. 26th, 1883, and an officer will be at the prison when his sentence expires, the last day of this month, and start with him at once for Michigan.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, Sept. 1st, Mayor Hodgdon in the chair:

Present the full board.

Request of Albert Anderson, for leave to encumber Cass street for building purposes, was granted.

Petition of Wm. Dennett and others for repair of road known as Dennett's lane, was referred to committee on streets.

Request of Frank Horrocks, inspector of petroleum, that the city councils authorize the city solicitor to prosecute parties not conforming with the rules and regulations, was granted.

Petition of James W. Emery and others for a policeman on Christian Shore from dark until early morning, was referred to committee on police.

Request of J. Howard Dodge for removal of obstructions on Dearborn street, which was referred to committee on streets at the last meeting, was granted. The committee visited the street, and finding the obstructions very dangerous, ordered Mr. Jackson to remove the same before Sept. 15th.

The committee on streets, to whom the petition of the different temperance organizations for a drinking fountain at the Creek was referred, asked for further time; granted.

The same committee, to whom the request of Wm. H. Palmer and others for the acceptance of Spring street was referred, reported they found the street was accepted by the councils at the meeting held on Thursday evening, Aug. 4th.

Sheldon B. Lurvey was elected supernumerary policeman.

Bills to the amount of $1721.28 were ordered paid.

The monthly report of Ex-City Marshal Norton was read and filed.

The chief engineer notified the aldermen that he had appointed Thursday, Sept. 15th, as the day for the firemen to parade, and invited the board to participate in the parade.

Voted to pay the Portsmouth Machine Co. $1200 on account, for work done toward putting steam heating apparatus into the Haven schoolhouse.

Adjourned for two weeks.

THE BENNETT & MOULTON OPERA CO.

The opening night of the season of the Bennett & Moulton Comic Opera company, at Music hall on Thursday evening, the 1st inst., was attended by a numerous and appreciative audience, which manifested very positive satisfaction at the rendering of the "Chimes of Normandy," by liberal and frequently bestowed applause. Sig. Jules Cluzetti was the first to bring down the house and receive a much merited recall, in the first act. To specify in detail the many pleasing characteristics of the rendition Thursday evening would require far more space than is at our command, and we will only mention the beautiful manner in which Miss Siegfried sang the love song, and the excellent make-up and acting of Mr. Clayton as "Gaspard" the miser. The company shows that careful preparation has been bestowed, and that there is a determination to deserve the commendation of those who listen to the operas they are giving. The satisfying quality of the company is not so much due to the notable excellence of the leading artistes, as to the fact that every voice adds something, and every performer is painstaking. The chorus though not heavy is good, and the songs in the opera were gracefully and pleasingly given. Indeed, although it was the company's first public appearance this season, the whole presentation was well deserving the generous reception accorded it. The musical director, on whose ability so much depends, is evidently an artiste. This evening "The Mascot" will be presented; to-morrow afternoon the old favorite "Pinafore" will be given, and to-morrow evening "Olivette." The price of tickets is no measure of the merit of the company, but enables all to have an evening of good entertainment at small cost. At the matinee every person attending will receive a souvenir handsome and valuable enough to preserve.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.

A boat containing five boys, children of guests of the Hotel Pocahontas, was capsized about noon on the 1st inst. near the entrance to Brave Boat harbor, and three of the lads, a son of the late Commodore P. C. Johnson and two sons of Dr. McKay of Boston, were drowned; another son of Commodore Johnson, and a boy named Cook, were saved by a boat which put off from Cutts' island. There were two boats in company, but the other boat was too far ahead to render any assistance. The boys started from the hotel for a pull around the island, and rowed up the river to Chauncy's creek, and through the creek to Brave Boat harbor. The boys who perished were about ten or twelve years old.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Public Library will be open for the delivery of books this evening at seven o'clock, after being closed a month.

LOST HIS MONEY.

A man named Clark, who has been employed in the cooking department of the Hotel Wentworth during the season now nearly at its end, on Thursday afternoon of this week reported at the police station that having been paid off he came to this city, and in company with a man calling himself Inch went into a saloon to get some oysters; both had been drinking, and Clark thinks he went to sleep, and on awaking found that Inch had gone, and also $125 which Clark had when he entered the saloon.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD."

Mr Denman Thompson, opened his three nights' engagement in "The Old Homestead" at the Opera House last evening, giving a delightful impersonation of the familiar character of "Josh Whitcomb." It was the commencement of the season for Mr. Thompson's company, but their long engagement last season made the piece move so very smoothly that one would never have believed the first-mentioned fact. Much new dialogue has been introduced, and the whole piece is ahead of "Josh Whitcomb," if such a thing can be possible. The immense audience present was in the most pleasant mood, and the applause was almost continuous throughout the play. Mr. Thompson carried the audience with him as usual, and his old New England expressions, and easy, natural acting were as pleasing as when he first made his bow before a Bangor audience. He was given an enthusiastic call before the curtain at the end of the second act. Mr. Walter Gale was a perfect Jack Hazard, the tramp, and he was greeted as are very few actors who appear in Bangor, his every entrance upon the stage being recognized in a hearty manner by the audience. The quartette was one of the finest ever heard here. We have no need to advise all the people in the city to see "The Old Homestead" for the house will be crowded every night during the engagement.—Bangor Commercial.

The Biddeford papers report the presence in that city on Wednesday, the 31st ult., of Mr. Rufus Somerby, he being there to make arrangements for the appearance in the city opera house of the Bennett & Moulton Comic Opera Co., on the 8th, 9th and 10th insts.

The game of base ball played at Rye on Saturday, the 27th ult., between the Portsmouth club and the Rye boarders, resulting in a tie, and not being finished on account of darkness, was played to a finish at the Plains on the 31st, Portsmouth winning, eighteen to twelve.

MOLLIE HUSSEY FOUND.

Tuesday morning, Aug. 30th, a respectable appearing woman entered a police station in Boston, and said she had seen, on Tremont street, the young girl Mollie Hussey, whose disappearance from Rochester had caused so much excitement in that town. The lady said she had known Miss Hussey in Rochester, and was confident it was she. The next day a woman who keeps an intelligence office entered the same police station, and reported having procured a place in a suburban town for a girl answering Miss Hussey's description.

Following the latter clew, the girl was on the 1st inst. found at Wellesley, Mass., in service with a Mrs. Hagar as second girl. Her brother-in-law called at the house for her, and she readily consented to accompany him home to Rochester. She was very quiet, but seemed not to be exactly right in her head, and it is thought she has not yet fully recovered from the influence of ether taken a day or two before she left home, while having some teeth extracted.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wm. A. Haven, who was so badly injured in the Buffalo hotel fire many months ago, arrived in this city on Thursday.

Mr. Charles Hartshorn and wife, of Woburn, Mass., are visiting at Capt. R. C. Bartlett's, on School street.

Mr. John P. Hurt and wife and Mr. H. C. Locke and wife have gone to Jackson, this state, for a stay of several weeks.

There was quite a large party from this city to the Shoals per steamer Oceanic on Thursday last. The number of "excursion days" is running low, but the best dinner supplied on the coast for a dollar is still served at the noted hotel on Star island.

School books for all grades of the public schools, and school supplies of all kinds, are advertised by H. B. Buzzell & Son, Market square.

Mr. Conn has just received an invoice of choice fresh-made dairy butter from some of the finest selected dairies in Vermont, in small packages for family use.

An advance in the price of steerage tickets from the continent of Europe is expected soon to go into effect.

HARMLESS WITH SANFORD'S GINGER.

The colored brother laughs in anticipation at the feast before him. The melon is tickled beyond expression so it slinks of the kinks it will tie in the darkey's stomach. The owl, wise bird, hovers near, knowing that SANFORD'S GINGER will soon be needed.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent Indigestion, dispel disease germs in all the water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists on those who call for

New England League games, Aug. 31st: Manchester 6, Lowell 5; Salem 8, Haverhill 6; Portland 12, Lynn 6. At the conclusion of the Salem-Haverhill game the Haverhill club disbanded, leaving but five clubs in the league.

The grocery store of J. Jones & Sons at Alton Corner was broken into on the night of Aug. 29th through a back window. When on the inside the thieves (for it is evident that there were two of them by the tracks back of the building) played havoc with the things they found there. The safe was blown open and about three hundred dollars taken. Besides this, cutlery and cigars were taken. The work was evidently that of professionals, for there was no bungling about the safe job. There is no clew.

Miss Gertrude Hall of Dover, daughter of Ex-Congressman Hall, has accepted the principalship of Monson academy at Monson, Mass., and entered upon the duties of her new position.

The Biddeford Journal remarks: "Democratic papers are saying, with reference to the recent affair at Wheeling: 'Trouble is in store for the organization known as the Grand Army of the Republic if it shall continue to develop features of vulgar partisanship such as have recently been manifested by its members here and there.' The truth is, trouble is in store for the democracy by reason of the greivous affront put upon the same Grand Army by a democratic president, in seeking to better his political fortunes by trading off battle trophies bought with Union blood."

It used to be said that "virtue alone outbuilds the pyramids," but if it goes on conquering and to conquer, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will out cure and out live them all.

Ada Rehan, the actress, has brought east with her from San Francisco a warm admirer. He is a little Chinaman, eleven years of age, named Lu-Feen. Mr. Daly purchased his services for a term of three years, and intends to use him as a page in the theatre. Lu-Feen has lost his heart to Miss Rehan, and follows her about wherever she goes. He is only just beginning to speak English, but is a bright little fellow.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

Hay Fever.

I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for fifteen years and have tried various things without doing any good. I read of the many wondrous cures of Ely's Cream Balm and thought I would try once more. In fifteen minutes after one application I was wonderfully helped. Two weeks ago I commenced using it and now I feel entirely cured. It is the greatest discovery ever known or heard of. DUHAMEL CLARK, farmer, Lynn, Mass.

Don't Laugh at Nervous People.

Their sufferings are very real, although you, with your vigorous physique and strong nerves, can scarcely believe it. Rather suggest the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, in removing every trace of dyspepsia, and regulating the liver and bowels, strikes at and extirpates the most prolific cause of chronic nervous trouble. That nerve-shattering disease, fever and ague, is among the formidable ailments, to the removal of which this genial remedy is specially adopted. Nervous prostration, resulting from prolonged mental or physical effort, is also a state of the system where the intervention of this tonic is very desirable, more particularly as its use is to quiet and relax the tension of overwrought nerves. The Bitters are invaluable in rheumatism, neuralgia and kidney troubles. Employ no substitute for it.

At Augusta, Me., Sept. 1st, Gov. Bodwell and council agreed on a division of the reward offered for the capture of Graves, the murderer of the game wardens. A resolve was passed that none of the claimants complied with the conditions of Governor Robie's offer of reward, and accordingly the amounts were given under the resolve passed by the last legislature, the division being as follows: J. P. Longfellow and Fred S. Pettengall, Washington county officers, $50 each; D. L. Fields and A. R. Dovereaux, of Hancock county, $100 apiece; G. W. Whitney and Thomas Allen, Bangor officers, $100 each; Herbert Penney, of Amherst, who furnished information of Graves' whereabouts, $300; D. Holland, the California officer who made the arrest of Graves, $200.

A farm house and outbuildings in Winchester, this state, were burned on the 1st inst., and the occupant, Frank Burt, who was an invalid, was burned with them. He was about sixty years old. His wife was absent when the fire occurred. Loss on building, $1200; insurance, $800. Cause of fire unknown.

What a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96 25 for doctors, and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

VITIATED BLOOD

Scrofulous, Inherited and Contagious Humors

Cured by Cuticura.

THROUGH the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the most inveterate cases of blood poisoning, in connection with erysipelas, that I have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our county. I take great pleasure in forwarding to you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your CUTICURA REMEDIES a trial.

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.

James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says: "In 1879 Scrofulous Humors broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure for six years. In 1880 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them, and was perfectly cured."

Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

ONE OF THE WORST CASES.

We have been selling your CUTICURA REMEDIES for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP. The Soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.

Choking Catarrh.

Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life-breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed the languor and debility that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? Was a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind, clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange noises? How difficult it is to rid the nasal passages, throat, and lungs of this poisonous mucus all can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs, liver and kidneys, all physicians will admit. It is a terrible disease, and cries out for relief and cure.

The remarkable curative powers, when all other remedies utterly fail, of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow-sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.

Each packet contains one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box of CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and an IMPROVED INHALER, with treatise and directions and is sold by all druggists for $1.00.

Bead-Inlaying.

There is a very curious and effective style of ornamental, or decorative, art which—though occasionally practiced in Turkey and other Eastern countries—is by no means very common even where it is best known. It may be called bead-inlaying, and it is so easy that any boy or girl ten years old can achieve excellent results in it by following these simple directions:

Take a piece of wood, let us say beech or mahogany or pear-tree or, indeed, any of the fine-grained kinds. Let it be half an inch in thickness and twelve inches in length by six in breadth. Draw on it your design. This done, follow the pattern with a series of holes, bored in the wood with a straight round awl or a drill or gimlet, as close together as possible without splitting the wood between them. Then put the beads into the holes so that their perforations will show. To secure the beads in place, the holes may first be filled with glue or varnish. The work will then be very durable. If you choose, the holes in the beads may be filled with a mixture of fine transparent glue and any coloring matter, such as umber or chrome. The beads should be sunk rather deeply into the wood. When the wood splits easily, or if it is desirable to make the holes very close together, the holes may be bored with a hot iron rod. It will often add to the effect if a line, or fine groove, be cut with a penknife or a parting, or V, tool around the edge of the bead pattern. The ground may also be stamped or indented, with a wood-carver's stamp.

When a very small brass-headed pin or tack is passed through each bead, the appearance of the whole is very much improved. Such tacks may be obtained with convex, or half-round beads not larger than those of pins.

Of course, work of this kind need not be strictly limited to beads. The different kinds of the marbles used by the boys may similarly be set in wood; and they are made in an endless variety of color. A cabinet thus studded would be increased in value far beyond the cost of the marbles, though they were the most expensive agates. Marbles and beads may be set together. To make the holes for the former, a center-bit or auger should be used. Long, straight beads may be used with good effect. To set them, make grooves with a gouge, and cast the grooves with mastic or Turkish cement, or with strong varnish, and press the long beads, or bugles, into the cavities.—Charles. G. Leland in St Nicholas.

The Chapel Pastor in Rural England.

There is a man so feasted as the chapel pastor. His tall and yet rotund body and his broad red face might easily be mistaken for the outward man of a sturdy farmer, and he likes his pipe and glass. He dines every Sunday, and at least once a week besides, at the house of one of his stoutest upholders. It is said that at such a dinner, after a large plateful of black currant pudding, finding there was still some juice left, he lifted the plate to his mouth and carefully licked it all round; the hostess hastened to offer a spoon, but he declined, thinking that was much the best way to gather the essence of the fruit. So simple were his manners he needed no spoon; and, indeed, if we looked back, the apostles managed without forks and put their fingers in the dish. After dinner the cognac-bottle is produced, and the pastor fills his tumber half full of spirit, and but lightly dashes it with water. It is cognac, and not common brandy; for your chapel minister thinks it an affront if anything more common than the best French liquor is put before him. He likes it strong, and with it his long clay pipe. Very frequently another minister—sometimes two or three—come in at the same time and take the same dinner, and afterward form a genial circle, with cognac and tobacco, when the room speedily becomes full of smoke and the bottle of brandy soon disappears. In these family parties there is not the least approach to over-conviviality; it is merely the custom—no one thinks anything of a glass and a pipe; it is perfectly innocent; it is not a local thing, but common and understood. The consumption of brandy and tobacco and the good things of dinner, tea and supper (for the party generally sit out the three meals), must in a month cost the host a good deal of money, but all things are cheerfully borne for the good of the church. Never were men feasted with such honest good-will as these pastors, and if a budding Paul or Silas happens to come along who has scarce yet passed his ordination the youthful divine may stay a week if he likes and lick the platter clean. In fact, so constant is his hospitality that in certain houses it is impossible to pay a visit at any time of the year without finding one of these young brothers reposing amid the fat of the land, and doubtless indulging in pleasant spiritual communion with the daughters of the mansion. Something in this system of household ministers of religion reminds one of the welcome and reverence said to be extended in the east to the priests, who take up their residence indefinitely and are treated as visible incarnations of the Deity, whose appetites it is meritorious to satisfy.—Longman's Magazine.

Minnesota people have found a new way to test the freshness of eggs. Wipe the large end of an egg, they say, quite clean, and then touch the tip of the tongue to the central part of this big end. If the egg is good there will be a little warm spot inside the egg which will be plainly perceptible to the tongue.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

The interest shown by the entire community of Rochester, New Hampshire, in the fate of the young girl who mysteriously disappeared from her home on Monday, is a credit to human nature. Fully two thousand people are reported to have joined in the search for the child; factories stopped, and the town authorities authorized teams to be hired, and no expense was spared to secure a thorough exploration of every point where there was any possibility of the lost one being found. It is evidence of good feeling like this which proves how many kind hearts and willing hands there are ready to help and alleviate those who are in suffering.—Providence Journal.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and general debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure God Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, the will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisic, Scrofula and wasting diseases generally. It is very palatable."

The democratic convention of Pennsylvania met on the 1st inst. Before the meeting of the convention it was loudly proclaimed by the free trade organs that its action would show that at last the party in Pennsylvania had emancipated itself from Samuel J. Randall's yoke, and that the true sentiment of the democracy was overwhelmingly in favor of free trade, as approved by Carlisle, Cleveland and the British manufacturers who wish to control the markets of this country. Mr. Randall attended the convention, dictated the resolutions, and is not yet read out of the party.

The "Fisheries Commission."

The British government having appointed commissioners to treat with this country in relation to the fisheries dispute, a Washington despatch of the 1st inst says:

"All sorts of rumors are current tonight relative to the appointment of the English fisheries commission, and the probable course of the United States in the premises. Only one thing is certain up to this time; that is, that the United States will do nothing whatever until officially informed as to the action of Great Britain. The commissioners will come to Washington as the accredited representatives of their government to enter such negotiations as can be agreed upon. The secretary of state may treat with them directly in person, or through commissioners appointed by the president for the purpose. In the latter event the American commissioners will be simply representatives of the state department, and will not form part of a 'joint high commission.' It is thought probable that the president may deem it best to appoint three commissioners to represent the United States, although Governor Porter, the assistant secretary of state, is of the opinion that this course is entirely unnecessary. Whether there is a 'commission' or not there will undoubtedly be a convention prepared before the meeting of Congress to be submitted to the senate for ratification. What the action of the senate will be is problematical; but unless there is marked change of sentiment in that body from that which existed last year, any treaty is likely to fail."

Return of Olber's Comet.

Professor H. V. Egbert, of the Dudley observatory at Albany, N. Y., announces that on investigating the orbit of the comet recently found by Mr. Brooks he has identified it as a return of Olber's comet of 1815, which astronomers have been expecting to appear at some near date.

The Earthquake's Anniversary.

Nearly all the colored population of Charleston, S. C., were out holding open air religious meetings on Wednesday, Aug. 31st. It was the first anniversary of the great earthquake.

Colored people at Summerville, Ga., undertook to produce the "Passion Play" on Wednesday night, but before the time for the performance to begin the village marshal mounted the stage and threatened to arrest the whole party, if the play was produced. A variety show was substituted.

MARITIME NOTES.

The tug Knickerbocker arrived here on Thursday, and that evening started for New York, having in tow the barge Josephine, which brought to this port from the Washington navy yard the new boilers for the U. S. S. Swatara, and also had a partial cargo of coal which was discharged on this side of the river.

The U. S. S. Ossipee came out of the dry dock at the navy yard on Friday, and the U. S. S. Leyden was taken up for her annual inspection and repairs.

Two very handsome steam yachts, the Day Dream and the Nearia, the latter a quite large boat, arrived at this port Friday afternoon from Bar Harbor, Me., putting in here on their way to Boston on account of unfavorable weather and heavy sea outside. The Day Dream took a berth at the Gas Co.'s wharf, and the party on board drove to Rye beach; the Nearia anchored off Pumpkin island.

The schooner Senator Frye is charged with seizing mackeral inside the three-mile limit off the Cape Breton coast, near Sydney, and cruisers are on the watch for her. It is stated, however, that the crew of the vessel know that their violation was communicated to the Canadian authorities, and are on their way home with the schooner.

Advices from St. John, N. B., of Sept. 2d, report that the Canadian fishery cruiser Intrepid on the previous day captured an American schooner while fishing within the three-mile limit off Campobello island, and took her into port. Her name was not given.

Captain Barr, the skipper of the Scotch cutter Thistle, is described as being about five feet eight inches in height, broad-shouldered and thick-set. His full, heavy beard is black, with a few gray lines, and here and there dull tawny touches bestowed by the salt sea air. His eyes are also black, and have the appearance of being very large. The captain was born in Glasgow forty-two years ago. Soon after he was twenty-one he commanded a yacht designed by George L. Watson, the designer of the Thistle. He won with her thirty-eight prizes in two seasons, and ever since he has been a famous racing skipper.

The New York Commercial Advertiser of the 1st inst. says: "The Larchmont Yacht club has determined to wind up this season by a grand race between the giant sloops. A $1000 cup has been offered, and already the Volunteer, Galatea, Mayflower, Atlantic and Priscilla have entered. The race will take place on Saturday, Sept. 10th, over a forty-mile course. The regular fall regatta of the club will be held on next Saturday, the 3d, but as the course is only twenty miles in length, it was judged best to make the contest between the first and second class sloops a separate event. A great deal of interest is felt in the race on the 10th, for not only will it be the first test between the Mayflower, with her new sails, against the Volunteer, but it will give the Shamrock another chance to show her powers against the iron sloop Titania. It will also give the Atlantic and Priscilla another opportunity to show what they can do against Boston's beauties, and Lieut. Henn, fresh from a victorious career at Halifax can once more measure the Galatea's ability."

The United States cruiser Boston made a successful trial trip on Long Island sound Sept. 1st, fulfilling the most sanguine expectations of her builders, as well as of the advisory board of examiners. The engines were tested to their full extent, and registered 3914 horse-power. With 350 allowed for the resistance of the pumps, the horse-power would be 4264. The vessel made a steady run of 14 1-2 knots an hour. As she was only supposed to develop 3500 horse-power, the amount obtained occasioned surprise.

Kendall & Ladd, formerly proprietors of the Manchester Budget, are to remove to Boston and publish a paper called "The Wholesale Liquor Dealer." It is easy now to account for the Budget's active support of the democratic ticket last fall, "in the interests of the working classes."

Major Randlett reports that the Utes are back on their reservation, and that there are no fears of their leaving it.

The guests of the Marshall house, York harbor, gave a musical entertainment in the large hall of the hotel on Friday evening, Aug. 26th, in aid of the fund for the erection of a Union chapel near the harbor; the hall was packed, and the receipts must have been something handsome; it is hoped to have the chapel built, or at least well in course of construction, before the opening of another "season." The Episcopal chapel at Norwood farm will also be enlarged before another summer's travel commences.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

THE BENNETT & MOULTON OPERA CO.

The Bennett & Moulton Comic Opera Co. on Friday evening performed "The Mascot," Music hall being occupied by another large and pleased audience. The several characters were well taken, the solos and choruses well sung, and the whole so creditable that it would hardly be believed that this was only the second public performance of the company.

This afternoon "H. M. S. Pinafore" will be sung, and a handsome souvenir presented to every one in the audience; and this evening the present engagement will close with the performance of "Olivette." A good entertainment at popular prices.

ROBBERY AT YORK.

Mrs. Nichols of Boston, who occupies a cottage at York harbor, on Thursday last about noon went to the railroad station to meet her husband, and on her return found that her gold watch and some valuable silver ware had disappeared. The servants in the house heard some one walking about up stairs, but supposed it was Mrs. Nichols.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Alfred Hall of Brooklyn, N. Y., is visiting at the Hall farm, Sagamore road.

Rear Admiral Alfred Taylor and family have returned to the city, and will spend the month of September at Wingate's.

Dr. D. W. Jones left on Friday for Washington, to be present at the International Medical convention to be held in that city next week.

Mr. Wm. A. Haven leaves this morning for Montana, to resume his duties as consulting engineer of the Northern Pacific railroad lines in that territory.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD."

On Monday evening Denman Thompson will present "The Old Homestead" in Music hall. While similar in many respects to "Josh Whitcomb," the new play is on a much higher plane of dramatic construction, and this without losing any of its breezy freshness, the smell of the New England woods and hay fields, which gave such a charm to the old one. Reserved seat tickets can now be secured at Goodrich's bookstore.

BIBLE SOCIETY MEETING.

The East Rockingham Bible society will hold its annual meeting this year with the Congregational church of North Hampton, on Thursday, Sept. 8th. The opening exercises will commence at 9:30 A. M., and at 9:45 a brief address of greeting will be made by Rev. T. V. Haines. Then will follow an essay by Rev. Robert Humphrey, on "The Bible is the forefront of the world's thought and work;" "How shall a child study the Bible?" discussed by Rev. J. B. Merrill and others; then will ensue a free discussion, followed by the business meeting at 11:45, and a basket collation at noon.

In the afternoon, at 1:15, there will be a meeting of praise and prayer; at 1:30, a paper by Rev. W. Q. Scott, D. D., on "Recent attacks on our Gibraltar," followed by addresses by Rev. F. D. Ayer and Dea. W. G. Brown; collection and business; "Pickaxes for Bible mining," Rev. S. C. Nutter; and voluntary three-minute addresses.

A DELICIOUS BREAKFAST DISH.

As a health producing and sustaining food, oats have stood high among the cereals. The Scotchman and his oatmeal are proverbial, and the vigor and life imparted by the grain are expressed in the old saying, "He feels his oats."

When purified of the hulls and other foreign matter, no farinaceous food is more healthful for the invalid or the strong, and the processes of manufacture have been so improved of late years that absolute purity has been obtained. The preparation known as Quaker Mill Rolled White Oats is commended by the medical profession as perfectly pure and easily digested by the most delicate stomachs, while yet retaining all the natural sweetness and flavor of the grain. These goods are manufactured by the Quaker Mill Co., Ravenna, Ohio, and are made from the best white oats that the market affords. The mill is equipped with the most perfect machinery obtainable, and the goods made by methods that a long experience has proven to be the best, many of these being peculiar to this mill alone. No expense has been spared to make the "Quaker" brand the best in the country, and consumers can rely on it at all times as such.

The body of the Johnson boy, who was drowned near Bra' Boat harbor last Thursday, was washed ashore on Cutts' island Friday morning; but the bodies of Dr. William Mackey's two sons had not been recovered up to the evening of that day, so far as was reported. It is stated that the boat which was in company with the one that was capsized was but a few rods away when the disaster occurred, having itself narrowly escaped the same fate a few moments before; but it was heavily overloaded for such rough water, and four or five of its occupants were young girls, so that it was impossible to render any assistance to the drowning boys, and an attempt to have done so would almost certainly have resulted in a still more lamentable loss of life.

An electric-light box in the post-office was burned out about nine o'clock last Thursday evening. The city marshal entered the building by breaking a pane of glass, and the fire was quickly extinguished, with slight damage.

Potatoes are reported to be setting very badly in the ground at the farm of Hon. Frank Jones. Mr. Manuel Silva, of Maplewood avenue, has ploughed up his potatoes, the crop being not worth harvesting.

A diver who has been employed on the work at Gangway rock during the summer went down near Fernald's wharf on Wednesday of this week, and came up with the opera glasses lost there a night or two previous by a lady who fell into the water while attempting to enter a boat to cross the river. The glasses were apparently but little damaged by their salt-water bath.

Rear Adm. Theodore P. Greene, on the retired list of the navy, died at Jaffrey, this state, Aug. 30th, aged seventy-seven years. He was born in Montreal, and was appointed to the navy from Vermont in 1826. He had a good record in the Mexican war, and during the rebellion rendered gallant service. After the latter war he was several years stationed at the Portsmouth navy yard, on ordnance duty. He was retired in 1871, and in 1872 was commissioned rear admiral. He leaves a wife and one son, Rev. F. W. Green of Andover.

A large iron smoke stack for the Electric Light Co. came from East Boston on Thursday night last, and was being put in place by the machine shop men on Friday.

The average daily number of trains on the Boston & Maine road which enter and leave the station in this city, is sixty-two. This is exclusive of trains over the Concord & Portsmouth road.

The time-cards of the York Beach railroad give the distance to York Harbor station as a little over eight miles; to York Beach (Hotel Bartlett) 9.3; to Union Bluff, the present eastern terminus, 11.2 miles. Time in going over the whole distance varies; by some trains it is thirty-five minutes, by others forty minutes.

Dr. Walter E. Fernald, late of the Wisconsin State asylum for the insane at Mendota, has been called to a more responsible and lucrative position at an institution at South Boston, Mass. Dr. Fernald studied medicine with Dr. M. F. Wentworth of Kittery, and his first practice was at the State hospital at Portland, Me., he going directly from there to Mendota.

The Springfield Republican moralizes as follows over the Biddeford savings bank sensation: "A boy in his teens who can run away to Canada with $200,000 or $300,000 of other people's money is a rather startling product of our Wall street civilization that accustoms impatient youthful brains to think in millions. Wouldn't it be a healthful thing to drill a few old-school notions into the heads of these precocious youngsters? Their grandfathers, when they were boys, didn't think it so very hard to dig stumps all day for a cent."

The bank examiner on the 2d inst. found in the vault of the Biddeford savings bank $11,000 in negotiable bonds which it had been thought were stolen by McNeally. The bank offers $1000 for the capture of the fugitive assistant cashier.

The Green Apple Terror.

The green apple is some form will torment us as long as there are boys. There is but one thing to do, and that is to keep a bottle of SANFORD'S GINGER in the house, and thus provide a sure preventive and never failing cure for ills incident to summer, and to change of water, food and climate.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, cures least speedily and safely, is the quintessence of all that is preventive and curative in medicine.

It is sure to check summer complaint, prevent bad cases of diarrhœa, cholera morbus, ward off water drank, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic diseases.

The steam yacht Mohican, owned by Messrs. J. Clark, W. Clark and J. W. Clark, who are also part owners of the cutter Thistle, arrived in New York harbor on the night of the 1st inst., and anchored at Tompkinsville, alongside the Thistle. The Mohican had on board, beside her owners, the survivors of the foundered ship Lillian. All were well.

A yacht owned by Judge H. C. Goodenow of Bangor, Me., and sailed by Frank Goodenow, was run down and sunk by steamer City of Richmond in Castine harbor, Sept. 1st. Charles Shepard, son of J. L. Sheperd of Castine, was drowned. The other occupants of the yacht were saved after a hard struggle.

She Could Walk as Well as Ever.

A shortage of nearly $10,000 has been discovered in the accounts of the late F. H. Harvey of Hudson, Wis., as secretary of the Hudson Building & Loan association. His reputation stood very high during his lifetime.

It used to be said that "virtue alone outbuilds the pyramids," but it it goes on conquering and to conquer, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will out cure and out live them all.

Official examination shows that Casbier Bartlett, of the Sumter national bank of Charleston, S. C., stole $80,000 from the bank, whose capital stock was only $50,000.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. This is done by improving the digestion and stimulating the liver to the proper secretion of bile, when the bowels will perform their customary functions in an easy and natural manner. Purgative pills must be avoided. Ask for Car er's Little Liver Pills. Price 25 cents.

The man who committed suicide on Boston common, Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 31st, has been identified as William G. Brock, a photographer of Burlington, Iowa.

All disorders caused by a bilious state of the system can be cured by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. No pain, griping or discomfort attending their use. Try them.

—Omaha philosopher—"Want to join our anti-povety society?" Anarchist citizen—"Been waitin' to join the anti-poverty society ever since I heard of it, but I ain't got the dollar." "Don't cost a cent. All you have to do is to sign your name to this paper." "Hurrah! Gimme the paper. What does it say?" "It's a temperance pledge."

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "perfection."

—"And had I better speak with your father to-night, dear?" he asked, as he suddenly continued to hold on to her with both hands. "No, George," she answered from inside top vest buttons, "not to-night. It is nearly twelve o'clock, and papa has doubtless gone to bed."

—"I am't afraid of lightning any more. God sends the lightning, and God wouldn't hurt me; he only sends it to take away the bad air." The little one's brother, who was of very practical turn of mind, and who had seen trees and houses that had been torn up and bruised by lightning, sniffed at this declaration by his sister, and remarked: "I want you to understand that God is pretty careless sometimes!"

Hay Fever.

I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for fifteen years and have tried various things without doing any good. I read of the many wondrous cures of Ely's Cream Balm and thought I would try once more. In fifteen minutes after one application I was wonderfully helped. Two weeks ago I commenced using it and now I feel entirely cured. It is the greatest discovery ever known or heard of. DUHAMEL CLARK, farmer, Lynn, MASS.

Don't Laugh at Nervous People.

Their sufferings are very real, although you, with your vigorous physique and strong nerves, can scarcely believe it. Rather suggest the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, in removing every trace of dyspepsia, and regulating the liver and bowels, strikes at and extirpates the most prolific cause of chronic nervous trouble. That nerve-shattering disease, fever and ague, is among the formidable ailments, to the removal of which this genial remedy is specially adopted. Nervous prostration, resulting from prolonged mental or physical effort, is also a state of the system where the intervention of this tonic is very desirable, more particularly as its use is to quiet and relax the tension of overwrought nerves. The Bitters are invaluable in rheumatism, neuralgia and kidney troubles. Employ no substitute for it.

Reports from Austria and Hungary show that the wheat, rye and barley crops are far above the average. In Hungary the yield of wheat is 9,500,000 hectolitres above the average. Barley is of good quality.

For the laundry, James Pyle's Pearline is invaluable. It cleanses the most delicate fabric without injuring it, and saves a vast amount of wearisome labor. For sale by all grocers.

Mrs. J. R. Vincent, well known to every one who has attended dramatic entertainments at the Boston Museum during many years past, appeared in her part, that of Mrs. Beekman in the "Dominie's Daughter," at the Museum on Wednesday evening of last week, but was stricken with apoplexy on Thursday morning, and it was feared would not live; she was however improving on Saturday.

We recommend Carter's Iron Pills to every woman who is weak, nervous and discouraged; particularly those who have thin, pale lips, cold hands and feet, and who are without strength or ambition. These are the cases for which Carter's Iron Pills are specially prepared, and this class cannot use them without benefit. Valuable for men also. In metal boxes, at fifty cents. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. See advertisement elsewhere.

How to Overcome the Dangess of Exposure.

Francis O'Reilly, the well known livery man of No. 18 Prince street, New York, says of Allcock's Porous Plasters:

"For the last forty-two years I have been engaged in the livery and hacking business. I am greatly aided by my four boys. We are much exposed to the weather, and we have found Allcock's Plasters of very great service. We use them as chest protectors, placing one on the chest and one on the pit of the stomach. They not only ward off the cold, but act as a tonic.

We are frequently affected with rheumatism, kinks in the back, and pains in the side; but one or two of Allcock's Plasters quickly cure us. My wife and daughter have been using Allcock's Plasters for a week back and think the world of them. I have now been using them for twenty years, and always have a box in the house."

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago, and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest, is the only true middle link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, LaSalle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Kenesville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri, Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown, in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

The Great Rock Island Route

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its tracks of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodation is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

All Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of Comfortable Day Coaches, magnificent Pullman Palace Parlor and Sleeping Cars, elegant Dining Cars providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—reclining Chair Cars.

The Famous Albert Lea Route

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and great lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short, desirable route, via Kenesville, Atlantic, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points. All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly treatment.

VITIATED BLOOD

Cured by Cuticura.

THROUGH the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of blood poisoning, in connection with erysipelas, that I have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our county. I take great pleasure in forwarding to you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your CUTICURA REMEDIES a trial.

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.

James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says: "In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in sight. In 1880 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them, and was perfectly cured."

ONE OF THE WORST CASES.

We have been selling your CUTICURA REMEDIES for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula Lever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP. The Soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.

Choking Catarrh.

Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life-breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed ice lengthened and doubtful that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? What a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind, clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange sounds! How difficult to procure a single night's rest without this disgusting and filthy poisonous mucus! All can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs, throat and kidneys. All physicians will admit. It is a terrible disease, and cries out for relief and cure.

The remarkable curative powers, when all other remedies utterly fail, of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow-sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.

Each package contains one bottle of the RADICAL CURE, one box of CATARRHAL SOLVENT, and an IMPROVED INHALER, with treatise and directions and is sold by all druggists for $1.00.

The Value of Accuracy.

The recent publication of the life of Charles Reade, the celebrated English novelist, has brought to light some interesting reminiscences of the man and his methods of work. His habit of collecting a vast number of newspaper scraps concerning odd people, places and happenings, is well known, but it will probably be new to most readers to learn that this custom was adhered to in obedience to a resolution formed as early as 1859. In writing of his intention to become a novelist, he says: "I propose never to guess where I can know."

He adds that this plan "will, I see, cost me undeniable trouble," but the immense mass of reference material he left at his death proves how steadfast he was in adhering to his determination.

A like resolve to know, rather than to guess, would be of immense help to us all, whether novelists, business men or schoolboys. Contingencies are arising every day in which he who can positively testify to a fact possesses an immense superiority over another who only "thinks it may be so."

For instance, make free use of the dictionary for words concerning whose meaning you have merely an ill-defined idea. The correct manner of their pronunciation should also be inquired into, for it happens that young people make use of terms gathered from their reading, with the significance of which they are perfectly familiar, but which they have never heard correctly pronounced.—The Golden Argosy.

If the islands and islets still remained merely in their original condition, as rounded, dome-shaped knolls, clad with pine and maple and Virginia-creeper, rising hump-like in slow slopes from the water's edge, they would still be extremely romantic and picturesque. But they are far more than this. The ceaseless action of the river at their sides, aided by the disintegrating frosts of winter, and the pressure of the ice-packs when the lake "breaks up" in early spring (exactly as if it were an academy for young gentlemen in the Easter holidays), has cut many of their edges into steep little cliffs, fantastically weathered, as granite almost always weathers, into beautiful broken crags and pinnacles. Thus the cliffs often spring sheer from the surface of the water, worn by rain and frost into quaint, jutting shapes, and with rare forms and flowers and creepers hanging out here and there from their creviced nooks. The summits remain for the most part smooth and polished by the ice-action; and the contrast between their bald, round surfaces, almost gray with age and lichens, and the jagged and ruddy outline of the more recent fractures, makes an extremely bold and effective element in the total picture. The islets are also of every imaginable shape, size, and grouping—some of them big enough to hold two or three farms, and others of them rising solitary from mid-stream, crowned by a single waving plum of Canadian cedar. Here is one, for example, a mere bare pinnacle of moldering rock; and here is another, a craggy little island, yet covered with endless variety of timber, whose drooping foliage hangs over the bank and reflects itself placidly in the silvery mirror below. Thus cluster after cluster passes before one's eyes, all fairy-like, green, and romantic, but all ushfinitely varied in shape and contour as intricate intermixture of rock and vegetation, and land and water, can possibly make them.—Grant Allen, in Popular Science Monthly.

A Woman's Weakness.

A high official of the government was in a communicative mood. He sat, tipped back in his comfortable office chair, and said to a Boston Traveler correspondent: "I have made a discovery that is worth millions to bashful men. You know there are some fellows who never can go into ladies' company without being embarrassed, but I have found out something that will make a bashful man the equal of the most self-conscious woman that ever lived. Now let me tell you my secret. I started out on the broad, general platform that a woman is more sensitive about her feet than anything else. Having settled that in my mind, I began a series of experiments. The horse-car is my favorite place. I love to see a queenly woman get into the car and sit down with the air of knowing that she is the best dressed lady present. In an apparently unconcerned way I attract her attention by looking steadily at feet, with an occasional glance at her face, of course I avoid all appearance of impertinence. I assume the air of a man who sees something that interests him. No matter how calm the victim is when she entered the car, inside of five minutes she will be so nervous that she will fairly place to get to her destination. She may have the handsomest foot in the world, and know that it is incased in a nicely fitting shoe, but she will wilt all the same. It is a woman's weakness. I have tried it on young girls of 16 and old women of 80—the result is the same. Achilles was venerable only in his heel, but you can't look steadily at a woman's little toe for two consecutive minutes without making her feel as though she would like to murder you."

A mammoth tooth, four inches long and weighing one-fourth of a pound, has been found on the banks of the Mackinaw.
